It has not been thought necessary to supply any complete list of the modern literature upon the Hexateuch. The references in the following work will, it is hoped, enable the reader to identify the authorities cited without difficulty. In a few cases the views of scholars have been mentioned without direct quotation. A short list of the least obvious of these is here appended.

KEY TO THE ANALYSIS

The text is printed consecutively in one or other of two columns divided by a vertical line, JE being on the left and P on the right. Wherever JE and P are much interwoven (cp Ex 14 Num 13-16) the columns are both of the same width. Elsewhere the occupied column is widened to save space. Thus it is only the relative position, and not the width, of a column or section of a column that is significant. See also footnote on D.

a b c in the text point to references given here to parallel or contrasted passages
L in the text points to a reference given here to the Tables of Laws and Institutions in vol i, the verses covered by the reference being specified

<sup>T</sup> in the text indicates that the margin of the RV, or a rendering used elsewhere for the same Hebrew word or phrase, has been adopted, and that the rejected rendering will be found below. In all cases notes are given in order under the number

2<sup>a</sup> It has long been recognized that the Book of Genesis is primarily based upon a document containing a series of sections introduced by the formula 'These are the generations of . . . ' cp <sup>P</sup>77 (Introd chap XIII 1 p 121). To this document Ewald gave the name of the 'Book of Origins,' and it was also occasionally designated the Grundchrift, the ground-work or foundation-document. Beginning with a survey of the creation of the heavens and the earth, it proceeds to trace the descendants of Adam through Seth to Noah 5<sup>1</sup>.. After narrating the Flood, it describes three great groups of nations, under the names Japheth, Ham, and Shem 10<sup>1</sup>.., and then follows a special line from Shem through Arpachshad to Terah. At this point the writer's view concentrates itself on Abraham, from whom are derived Ishmael and Isaac. A summary enumeration of the tribes of Ishmael prepares the way for the division of the posterity of Isaac under the names of Esau and Jacob. The recital of Esau's marriage-alliances with their results finally enables the author to dismiss Edom from view, and limit himself to the children of Israel. At each stage of advance towards the main crisis of the narrative—the revelation of El Shaddai to Moses by the name Yahweh—the historic connexion is effected by the method of genealogical filiation, which does not wholly disappear till the family history of the founder of the priesthood has been related Num 3<sup>1</sup>. The tol'dhoth formula of Gen 2<sup>4a</sup> is not appropriate to the narrative which follows it in 2<sup>1b</sup>.., for this says nothing about the creation of the heavens or the earth, but deals with the formation of the first man after they were made. On the other hand its form and substance are both congruous with the account of the creation of the universe in 1<sup>1</sup>–2<sup>3</sup>. In other sections, however, the formula always precedes the matter which it designates. It is probable, therefore, that it originally stood before 1<sup>1</sup>, and was transposed by the editor who combined the two documents, to serve as the link of combination. Bacon (Genesis 97) conjectures that the title originally read 'These are the generations of the heavens and the earth in the beginning of their creation. 1<sup>1</sup> God created,' &c. But the words 'when they were created' may have been added by the compiler, as other similar formulae do not present analogous expressions. Ball (in Haupt's SBOT) reads 'This is the book of the generations' with G here as at 5<sup>1</sup>: but does not attempt to decide 'whether this formula originally stood also, or only, at the head of 1.'

1<sup>1</sup> The historical introduction to the Priestly Code fitly commences with a survey of the 'origins' of the world. The account of the creation of the heavens and the earth with all the multiplicity of their contents is marked by a stately order and precision partially reflected in the careful descriptions, the detailed enumerations, and the numerous identities of phrase. Each step in the series of creative acts is preceded by a creative utterance <sup>3</sup> 6 9 11 14 20 24 26 in which the divine Thought at once announces and executes its purpose. The entire process is distributed into eight stages, which apparently fall into two groups of four, having a certain harmony in their constituent members:—

- |                                  |  |
|----------------------------------|--|
| (1) Light <sup>3-4</sup>         | (5) The Heavenly bodies <sup>14-18</sup> |
| (2) The Firmament <sup>6-7</sup> | (6) Fishes and birds <sup>20-22</sup>    |
| (4) Plants <sup>11-12</sup>      | (8) Man <sup>26-27</sup>                 |

It has been often conjectured (cp Dillmann, Genesis i 49–50) that an earlier story presented these two series in clearer sequence, and that they were subsequently adapted to the scheme of the creative week with its six days of work, by throwing the related pairs (3–4) and (7–8) each into a single day. It may be surmised that originally each creative utterance was accompanied by the record of its execution and of the divine approval. The corresponding formulae, however, now appear only seven times <sup>3</sup> 7 9 11 15 24 30 and 4 10 12 18 21 25 31. The source of this representation it is difficult to determine. In many other portions of his narrative P seems to be founded on prior materials: is he wholly fresh and independent in his presentation of the creation? Analogies with the Babylonian tablets have often been pointed out, and some eminent Assyriologists have recognized in Gen 1 distinct traces of the influence of Babylonian ideas (cp G Smith, Chald Genesis 73; Jensen, Kosmos der Babylonier 301–306; Gunkel, Schöpfung und Chaos 114; Sayce, Expos Times vii 206 ff; cp Introd 135). Was that influence exerted direct, or did it pass through other channels on the way? The question belongs rather to a commentary than to analysis, and can only be answered here on grounds of general probability. It will be indicated hereafter that the narrative of the Flood assigned to J<sup>a</sup> (cp Introd chap XI 6a p 108) cannot be derived from the author of the story of Eden and the first pair. Was it, however, an isolated fragment, or was it originally part of a primeval history, which had its own account of the origin of the world and its inhabitants? In the latter case may not this narrative (J<sup>a</sup>) have served in its turn as the antecedent of P? The suggestion was first made by Budde, Urgeschichte 486, and has been widely adopted (cp Holzinger, Gen 23, and Encyclopaedia Biblica art 'Creation'). See Ex 20<sup>11a</sup>.

2<sup>4</sup> The story of the 'generations of the heaven and of the earth' is followed by a second narrative which cannot be ascribed to the same source, and is marked by striking differences both in substance and in style. The character of its opening is somewhat obscured by grammatical peculiarities which an English version cannot exactly reproduce. In 4<sup>b</sup> the making of earth and heaven (this order occurs only in Ps 148<sup>13</sup>) is assumed without further description; the condition of an earth without vegetation or man is indicated in a series of dependent clauses <sup>5</sup>, constituting really a long parenthesis which might be rendered 'when no plant . . .', and the writer passes on to the first main fact <sup>7</sup>, the formation of a man out of the dust of the ground. The beginning of the narrative has apparently, therefore, been removed by the compiler in favour of the tol'dhoth section of P, and at the junction some compression may have taken place to prevent needless repetition. In what follows, accordingly, there is no analysis of the parts of the universe, nor any determination of their several functions, and the order of production on the earth is quite different. Whereas in 1<sup>26</sup>, the creation of man, male and female together, marks the climax of the series of divine acts, a single man is formed in 2<sup>7</sup> before either trees or animals: none of the beasts proves a suitable mate for him; and finally a woman is 'built' <sup>22</sup> out of one of his ribs <sup>18-25</sup>. To these diversities of material fact correspond other varieties both in thought and phrase. The story is distinguished by the entry of a new divine name, Yahweh (on the combination 'Yahweh Elohim,' see below). No attempt is made to adapt the creative process to a week of six days' labour followed by a seventh day of rest. The recurring formulae defining the divisions of the divine acts, and recording the divine inspection and approval, are all absent. Fresh terms are employed to describe the modes of production: Yahweh makes earth and heaven <sup>4b</sup>, forms a man <sup>7</sup>, with beast and bird <sup>19</sup>, breathes into the man's nostrils <sup>7</sup>, plants a garden <sup>8</sup>, takes the man, and puts him into it <sup>15</sup> (cp the 'building' of the woman <sup>21</sup>, and of the creation of male and female in God's image <sup>127</sup>). These divergences can only be explained by the assumption that a new document is here introduced. The assumption is justified by the narratives which follow, for corresponding groups of differences may be noted through the whole series of stories of the early history of mankind. Each document, J and P, had its account of the origin of the race, and traced the connexion between the first Man and the ancestors of the people of Israel. Cp Intro XI.

4<sup>b</sup> M 5 Jehovah, as in other places where Lord is put in capitals.—See vol i preface.

4<sup>c</sup> The juxtaposition of these two names, Yahweh and God (Elohim), is very rare in the Old Testament. In the Hexateuch, after Gen 2-3 where it appears twenty times, it occurs only in Ex 9<sup>30</sup>; elsewhere it is found in 2 Sam 7<sup>22</sup> 25 1 Chron 17<sup>16</sup> 2 Chron 6<sup>41</sup> Ps 84<sup>8</sup> 11 Jonah 4<sup>6</sup>+. The combination, begun in 2<sup>4b</sup>, ceases at 3<sup>23</sup>, and in 4<sup>1</sup> 'Yahweh' is read alone, though 5 employs 'the Lord God' down to 8<sup>21</sup> and even in 9<sup>12</sup>. It is commonly supposed to be due to the compiler, who desired thus to show that the 'Yahweh' of the second story was identical with the 'Elohim' of the first (cp Dillmann, Genesis i 97). Klostermann has suggested that it was an instruction to the reader, when 1<sup>1-3</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> was regarded as one section, to pronounce the same divine name (Elohim) throughout, cp der Pentateuch 37.

9 Some difficulty attaches to the mention of two trees in this verse. In 3<sup>3</sup> the divine prohibition appears limited to one tree, described as 'the tree which is in the midst of the garden.' From the sequel (cp 2<sup>17</sup>) it is plain that the words really designate the 'tree of the knowledge of good and evil,' and not (as in 9) the tree of life. The permission in 3<sup>2</sup> (as in 2<sup>16</sup>) really extends to the tree of life, whereas in 3<sup>22</sup> the danger that its fruit also may be eaten is only averted by the expulsion of the first pair from the garden. Budde, accordingly, has conjectured that the original Eden-story contained but one tree; a later hand incorporated the second from another source; and he thus accounts for the somewhat awkward order of 2<sup>4b</sup>. This leads also to the suggestion that in 1<sup>7</sup> the tree was originally distinguished as 'the tree that is in the midst of the garden.' See further on 3<sup>22</sup>.

10 It was surmised by Ewald that the Four Rivers 10-14 had no place in the ancient conception of Eden. At what time, and from what source, this passage was introduced into the text, it is not possible to determine. But it does not contribute to the development of the story: the account of the divine action in 9<sup>16</sup> is somewhat suddenly interrupted to give it room: the geographical and antiquarian details which it contains have no connexion with anything else in the narrative: and it may be regarded with great probability as a secondary addition.

<sup>22</sup> The sequence of verses 22–24 seems to contain repetitions implying a combination of passages. The statement in 24 'and he drove out the man' appears superfluous after the expulsion of 23 'and Yahweh sent him forth,' and reads like a doublet from another source. But 23 plainly belongs to 19, and is the natural sequel of the doom there pronounced. On the other hand 22 supplies a different reason in the divine apprehension lest the man should eat of a fruit that had not been prohibited and stood unguarded, and might thus acquire immortality. This incongruity confirms Budde's conjecture that the original story of Eden contained but one tree cp 2<sup>9N</sup>. In that view 22 and 24 were incorporated into the recital of the events following the Fall when the second tree was received into the narrative. On Budde's further conjecture that 6<sup>3</sup> originally followed 3<sup>21</sup> see 6<sup>3N</sup>.

24 T so, 5 and.

41 The distinction between the two accounts of the origins of the world and man is unmistakable; but the group of narratives which follow the expulsion from Eden presents many difficulties. The document relating the generations of the heaven and the earth in 1–2<sup>48</sup> is resumed with the 'generations of Adam' in 5, and the line of pre-diluvian patriarchs is carried down to Noah, the hero of the Flood. After the great destruction, the earth is peopled with a new race derived from him, and the survey of human history is then narrowed to the descent of Abraham from Shem. When these sections of P are arranged in their natural order, can the residue be all ascribed to J? Does it form a complete and homogeneous story, allowing for occasional omissions through the process of compilation? The tendency of recent investigation is to answer this question in the negative. Broadly speaking, the passages which remain are marked by the general phraseology and modes of thought already noted in 2<sup>4b</sup>–3. They may be ascribed, therefore, with the greatest probability to the school of writers represented by the symbol J. Yet they show incongruities of conception which make it also probable that they are not all from the same hand, or at any rate are not all derived from the same source. Any collection of ancient materials must contain elements of various dates. But the question here is whether these different strata were arranged in their present order by a single writer, or whether they show such traces of manipulation as would lead to the conclusion that independent narratives have been editorially combined within the group designated as J. Thus, for example, in 4 three themes may be discriminated, 1–16 the murder of Abel by Cain, 17–24 the origin of the early arts among Cain's posterity, 25–26 the beginning of a new line from Adam through Seth. (In this last passage it is noticeable that 'Adam' [Man] appears as a proper name for the first time, et 4<sup>1</sup> and the usage 'the man' in 2<sup>7</sup>–3<sup>24</sup>.) The assumptions underlying these three sections are by no means uniform. Thus in 1<sup>3–5</sup> the name of Yahweh is familiarly known, and his cultus is practised: but in 2<sup>6</sup> it is affirmed that the worship of Yahweh only began after the birth of Enosh, while (5) actually attributes its introduction to him. The complaint of Cain in 14 implies the existence of a population of which nothing has yet been said, while in 17 Cain begets a son, though as yet the only recorded human beings beside himself are Adam, Eve, and the dead

<sup>416a</sup> The story which assigns to Cain a particular country east of Eden in which he married and built a city, does not seem homogeneous with that which represents him as doomed to a life of constant wandering. The traditional name Nod has apparently suggested the employment of the term nid (wanderer) in 4<sup>14</sup> by one of the assonances or word-plays characteristic especially of J.

<sup>25a</sup> This word is perhaps due to the compiler who has linked the stories together, or even to still later editorial transcription. (§ omits it.)

<sup>25b</sup> An explanation by the annotator of the combined narratives. Other traces of the same hand may possibly be found in the clause 'another seed instead of Abel.' In reality, however, it was the line of Cain that was replaced by the Sethite genealogy, the ancestry of Israel being traced through Noah and Shem, while the progeny of Cain perished in the Flood.

Noah, is marked by fresh phrases. Each step in the series is narrated in the same bare outline. Compared with the vivid presentments of J in 4, these abstractions seem only to have a numerical significance. On the coincidences of names, cp 41<sup>3</sup>. The structure of the description 'And Seth lived an hundred and five years and begat Enosh: and Seth lived after he begat Enosh eight hundred and seven years and begat sons and daughters: and all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years, and he died' recurs with rhythmic regularity. The interruptions are indicated in 24<sup>15</sup> and 29<sup>8</sup>. It will be observed that the age of Noah at the birth of Shem is much greater than the corresponding ages of his predecessors. A combination of the numbers in 26 28 32 and 7<sup>6</sup> indicates the reason. The chronological adjustments close the life of Methuselah with the year of the Flood (cp Introd XIII 28 i 122-3). On the differences of the numbers in Sam and § cp Dillm Gen i 217-21.

<sup>1b</sup> Holzinger observes that this is the title of a book rather than of a section, and suggests that P may once have begun without a creation-story. The lengthy phrases of 1-2, the double occurrence of 'in the day' (which Holzinger supposes to be borrowed from 2<sup>4b</sup>), and the incongruities of the pronoun which vibrates from sing to pl (though this occurs also in 1<sup>27</sup>), may be due to editorial expansion after the union of P and J.

<sup>28</sup> The uniformity of P's style leads us to expect here the name of Noah. The compiler, however, wishing apparently to utilize J's explanation of it, has inserted it at this point, having no doubt found it in the list which traced Noah's descent through Seth 4<sup>26</sup>. That pedigree has apparently been rejected by the editor in favour of the more highly systematized scheme of P, but the attempt to give significance to Noah's name is preserved: cp 3<sup>20</sup> 4<sup>1</sup>. The prediction prepares the way for the account of the vine-culture in 9<sup>20</sup>, by which the ground under the curse is made to yield comfort.

<sup>3a</sup> In a well-known conjecture Budde has suggested that this verse originally recorded Yahweh's sentence on 'the man' who was expelled from Eden lest he should eat of the tree of life, so that its proper place was after 3<sup>21</sup>. Its present position certainly seems to interrupt <sup>2</sup> and <sup>4</sup>. But difficulties both of text and interpretation render Budde's proposal in the highest degree precarious. Further discussion belongs rather to a commentary than to this analysis.

<sup>4b</sup> A perplexing clause which may perhaps be regarded as a later note to explain the fact that the Nephilim reappear in the tradition of the Wanderings. They did not, therefore, all perish in the flood.

(2) <sup>17</sup> Elohim announces that he will 'bring the flood.'

(3) <sup>7<sup>11</sup> 17</sup> The fountains of the great deep are broken up, and the windows of heaven are opened, and the flood comes.

(4) No fixed duration is predicted for the flood by Elohim: but the waters increase for 150 days <sup>24</sup>, and a combination of the dates in <sup>11</sup> 8<sup>3</sup>. 13. makes it probable that the writer intended the flood and its consequences to occupy 365 days, or a solar year (cp <sup>5<sup>23</sup></sup>).

(5) Elohim blesses Noah and his offspring, and covenants with the race never again to destroy all flesh with a flood <sup>9<sup>1-17</sup></sup>.

J

Yahweh receives from Noah a sacrifice of each kind of clean beast and bird, and declares that he will not again smite every living thing <sup>8<sup>20-22</sup></sup>.

The Elohim document, connected by many links of conception and phrase with the creation story in 1-2<sup>4a</sup> and the pedigree in 5, has been made the basis of the combined narrative and has been preserved with substantial completeness. When it is withdrawn it becomes apparent that the Yahweh passages must originally have themselves constituted a whole. They cannot be regarded as merely supplementary, for they sometimes relate the same incident, e.g. the directions about the animals, and their entry into the ark, in incompatible terms, that is, they contradict, instead of merely developing, the statements amid which they are inserted. They are derived, therefore, from an independent source which has not been fully retained. For instance in <sup>7<sup>1</sup></sup> the ark is evidently already made; but J's account of its construction has been set aside in favour of P's <sup>6<sup>14</sup></sup>., which was probably the more elaborate. Similarly the erection of the altar in <sup>8<sup>20</sup></sup> implies a previous description of the departure from the ark, which P's statement in <sup>18</sup> rendered superfluous.

<sup>20</sup> A slight difference in the representation here suggests the possibility of later expansion: the animals, instead of being collected by Noah, will spontaneously assemble. Moreover, the last clause does not quite fit its predecessor, as it implies a different subject, and seems to be borrowed from <sup>19</sup>.

Others ascribe the whole of <sup>17</sup> to J. But J does not speak of 'the flood' by itself, and <sup>17b</sup> follows quite naturally on <sup>10</sup> <sup>12</sup>.

<sup>20</sup> This number seems related to the height of the ark, thirty cubits 616. The ark was apparently regarded as immersed up to half its height: accordingly, when the waters begin to decrease, it can just touch the summit of the loftiest mountain 84. Cp Introd XIII 2e i 125.

rain 7<sup>12</sup>. In combining this passage with P's longer duration of the flood, R has transposed the clause, but in doing so deprived it of its meaning, for after <sup>5</sup> what is the starting-point of the reckoning?

<sup>8</sup> The formula at the opening of 10 1<sup>2</sup> implies a preceding period of seven days' waiting not now found in the text. The conjecture that some words have here dropped out, such as 'and he stayed seven days,' has been widely adopted. So Olshausen, Schrader, Delitzsch, Budde, Dillmann, &c.

13 This was probably followed in J by Noah's departure from the ark, now related in P 15-19.

20 The cultus of Yahweh, already established in 4 according to J, is not yet revealed according to P. Yahweh's promise not to smite every living thing again 21. stands in contrast with the covenant established by Elohim with Noah and his posterity, 9<sup>8-17</sup>.

21<sup>a</sup> This reference to the curse pronounced on the ground

after the first transgression seems open to some suspicion, if the narrative of the deluge be from a different hand, J<sup>a</sup>. It may be noticed that the word 'curse' is not that employed in 3<sup>17</sup>, and is an unusual one in the person of Yahweh; moreover (5) omits the particle 'and' in the next clause, as if each began 'I will not again. . . .' There is reason therefore to ascribe the allusion to the curse to an early compiler already acquainted with 3<sup>17</sup> and 6<sup>5</sup>, i.e. RJ. Cp Holzinger, Gen 82.

4 Holzinger Gen 74 points out that the prohibition of eating with the blood <sup>4</sup> is elsewhere closely connected with regulations of sacrifice, which according to P<sup>s</sup> was not instituted till the Mosaic age. He suggests, therefore, that its insertion here is due to P<sup>s</sup>. The awkwardness of <sup>4</sup> followed by <sup>5</sup> may be explained by the conjecture that <sup>5</sup> is later still. In that case <sup>7</sup> is the editorial close reproduced from <sup>1</sup>, cp Ex 612 and <sup>30</sup>.

10 These words seem due to later legal effort at precision (for the preposition <sup>h</sup> cp Driver, LOT<sup>6</sup> 132). The clause is absent from G, and the usage of the term 'beast of the earth' to include the whole animal world differs from that earlier in the verse where it denotes wild animals in contrast to domesticated cattle.

13 M Or, I have set.

18 This verse is assigned to J<sup>s</sup> as the sequel of the flood story. It does not appear to belong to P, who has already named Noah's sons <sup>52</sup> 610 713. The last clause is probably the editorial preparation for the episode which follows 20-27. But <sup>19</sup> is independent of this, and makes for the account of the dispersion in 10.

20 The story of the invention of vine-culture and its consequences does not seem to belong to the same cycle as the flood. It has its analogies rather with the sketch of the growth of the arts and crafts in 417-22, cp 41<sup>N</sup>, and is here regarded as belonging to the group of early materials gathered by J before the incorporation of the Deluge narrative. The opening words 'and Noah the husbandman began and planted a vineyard' (Dillm, Strack, Kautzsch and Socin, Spurrell) suggest its connexion with other stories in which he had already appeared in that character. But in its present form it is supposed that it has been adapted to the later scheme of Noah's three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. The writer intends to account for the enslaved condition of the Canaanites in after times; and the explanation implies that Canaan really played the part attributed to Ham. From <sup>24</sup> it appears that the act of filial dishonour was committed by Noah's youngest son; whereas Ham is always enumerated in the second place. Further, the curse does not alight on Ham, but on Canaan <sup>25</sup>, 'brother' of Shem and Japheth, which has led to the conjecture (Wellh, Budde, Kuen, and others) that according to the original narrative the three sons were Shem, Japheth, and Canaan. In that case, the words in <sup>22a</sup> Ham the father of belong to the later harmonist.

contains a quantity of detail by no means consonant with what has just preceded, eg the descendants of Mizraim <sup>13</sup>.. and Canaan <sup>15</sup>..., which have apparently replaced the parallel statements of P, Mizraim, Put, and Canaan having there no recorded offspring. Similarly the line of Shem <sup>21</sup> through Arpachshad <sup>24</sup>.. is traced in a manner wholly unlike P's genealogy in 11<sup>10</sup>.. (cp the two pedigrees in 4 and 5); Sheba <sup>28</sup> Havilah <sup>29</sup> are Cushite <sup>7</sup> not Joktanite and <sup>25-30</sup> is phraseologically connected with <sup>8-19</sup>. The use of the name Yahweh <sup>9</sup>, the proverbial citation <sup>9</sup>, the historic reminiscence <sup>10</sup>., the geographical detail <sup>19</sup> 30, the derivation <sup>25</sup> are all in the manner of J. It may be doubted, however, whether the portions thus recovered for J are quite homogeneous; see 1b 9 16 24.

<sup>16</sup> This long enumeration of Canaanite tribes seems inconsistent with the subsequent affirmation in <sup>18b</sup>, for it implies the very dispersion there said to have taken place 'afterwards.' The peculiar forms of the names are unlike other names in this table, but resemble lists elsewhere, eg 15<sup>19-21</sup>, which have often the air of additions to the text.

<sup>21a</sup> The words 'father of all the children of Eber' have been sometimes regarded as a harmonizing addition. Or the original may have run 'father of Eber.'

<sup>11</sup> <sup>a</sup>This story is plainly derived from a cycle of traditions independent of those now contained in 10. It is excluded from P by the share assigned in it to Yahweh, as well as by its general contents. But it further appears incompatible with the representation of the dispersion of the new race derived from Noah in J<sup>a</sup>. That was the issue of a natural process of migration; here, the ambition of youthful humanity draws down upon it a divine doom. The description of the united population of the earth speaking one language and travelling nomad-fashion eastward cannot therefore apply to the peoples who have already taken up their geographical positions; it seems rather to fit the race whose advance is sketched in 4<sup>16</sup>. . . They had already learned the art of city-building; and the tower in the land of Shinar apparently belongs to an earlier group of stories before the historical glimpses in 10<sup>10-12</sup>. But in the process of incorporation into J's series, the narrative has received the impress of his style.

<sup>28a</sup> The descent of Abram in J has apparently been omitted in favour of the more elaborate genealogy in P (cp Noah in 4-5). But the fragment in <sup>28-30</sup>, obviously not homogeneous with P, is naturally referred to it, as the phraseological indications all belong to J.

Dillmann does not produce any other trace, and the suggestion of triple interpolation seems rather forced. Assuming the correctness of the geographical identification, it is possible to account for the name on the hypothesis that it belongs to the cycle of the flood story, the Babylonian prototype of which was located in the south. Or it is conceivable that there was more than one Ur, and that this must be sought in some other district. Chased, the eponymous ancestor of Chasdim (the Chaldees), is not mentioned till <sup>22</sup> 22<sup>2</sup>.

of J (cp 17). But it is in reality the first of three, dealing with a common incident, cp 18 20<sup>8</sup> 26<sup>10</sup>, 'she is my sister' 10 20<sup>5</sup> 26<sup>9</sup>. The second, in 20<sup>1-17</sup>, locates it at the court of Abimelech, king of Gerar. In the third the scene remains unchanged, but Isaac and Rebekah replace Abraham and Sarah 26<sup>7-11</sup>. Are all these stories told by the same writer? The second will be found to belong to the document designated E (cp *Intro*d XII); the first and last apparently belong to J. The difficulty, however, reappears; did the same hand produce them both? The greater simplicity of 26<sup>7-11</sup> suggests that it belongs to an earlier stratum of tradition; in 12 the court of Pharaoh with its princes 15, the wealth and dignity of Abram 18, are described with more elaboration; the transaction is carried further, for Sarai is actually taken into Pharaoh's palace, and great plagues descend on Pharaoh and his house. The narrative, therefore, may be assigned to the secondary elements of J (cp *Intro*d XI 6β i 109). It will be noticed that Lot is not mentioned in it.

<sup>13<sup>1</sup></sup> In combining the later story of the visit to Egypt with the narrative of the separation of Abram and Lot, it was necessary to relate Abram's return to middle Canaan, where tradition placed the parting. As nothing was said of Lot's presence in Egypt <sup>12<sup>10-20</sup></sup>, it is believed that the words 'and Lot with him' are due to the harmonist. But the whole verse may be really his.

22<sup>c</sup> M Or, maker.

24 M Or, let there be nothing for me; only that &c.—Cp 41<sup>16</sup>. 15<sup>1a</sup> The phenomena of 15 are extremely complex and intricate, and all critics recognize that the analysis must be regarded as only probable. The chief peculiarities to be accounted for are the following. The vision of 1 is presumably in the night, and it is in accordance with this that in 5 Abram is brought forth to see the stars. But in 12 the sun has not yet set. This points to differences of origin. Further, in 3 the second answer of Abram repeats the first, and can hardly be from the same hand. Again, it is apparent that 9-11 and 17 are parts of the same story. But it is doubtful whether 12, originally belonged to it, as the deep sleep and great darkness 12 (before sunset) seem hardly consistent with the solemn manifestation in 17. Further, the two dates of 13 (400 years) and 16 (fourth generation) cannot be harmonized. The linguistic phenomena are no less perplexing. Several phrases appear unexpectedly which connect themselves with later literature. Thus 1 4 'word of Yahweh came,' not elsewhere in Hex, cp 2 Sam 7<sup>1</sup> 1 Kings 6<sup>11</sup> 13<sup>20</sup> 16<sup>1</sup> 17<sup>2</sup> 8 &c Hos 1<sup>1</sup> Mic 1<sup>1</sup> Is 28<sup>13</sup> 38<sup>4</sup> very common in Jer and Ezek: 1 'shield,' cp Deut 33<sup>29</sup> and 1<sup>1</sup>: 2 'Lord Yahweh' Deut 32<sup>4</sup> 5<sup>26</sup> Josh 7<sup>7</sup>: 7 'I am Yahweh that brought thee out' Ex 20<sup>2</sup> Deut 5<sup>6</sup>†: 7 'give thee this land to possess it' Deut 31<sup>8</sup> 5<sup>31</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> 14 21<sup>1</sup> Josh 11<sup>1</sup>†: לְרִשְׁתָּהּ twenty-four times in Deut Ezr 9<sup>11</sup>†: 18 'great river' Deut 17<sup>1</sup> (11<sup>24</sup>) Josh 1<sup>4</sup> ct Ex 23<sup>31</sup>. These strongly support the view of a Deuteronomic redaction. Slight points of contact also present themselves with P, specially 'substance' 14 and less markedly 'good old age' 15. If 1-6 be allowed to be composite, it will be most natural to assign one part to J and the other to E (cp 20<sup>1</sup> and Introd XII) who enters here for the first time. It is in E that communications come from the Deity by visions and dreams in the night (cp Introd XII 23 i 112) and the expression 'exceeding great' tends slightly in the same direction. The promises of seed in 4 are followed by the covenant of the gift of the land. These are not necessarily connected in time and may quite well belong to different traditions, see 7<sup>a</sup>. The covenant ceremony in 9 is no doubt described according to ancient ritual, cp Jer 34<sup>18</sup>. Lev 17, though the language is different: the sacrificial animals are mostly those of the Levitical legislation, but the phraseology is unaffected by it.

1<sup>b</sup> M Or, thy reward shall be exceeding great.2<sup>a</sup> M Or, go hence.

2<sup>b</sup> M The Chaldee and Syriac have, Eliezer the Damascene.—As Abraham's servant in 24<sup>2</sup> has no name, this verse is ascribed to E, leaving 3 for J. The title 'Lord Yahweh' does not necessarily make for J, as it may be redactional in both 2 and 8.

3 Apparently a duplicate of 2. It is possible that 3<sup>6</sup> originally followed 18, and prepared the way for 16<sup>2</sup>.

7 The covenant ceremony which solemnizes the announcement of the gift of the land is not necessarily consequent on the promise of an heir. According to 1<sup>5</sup> the latter had been made in the night, though in 3<sup>6</sup> no circumstance of time is specified. But the phraseology is not quite congruous with that of the latter passage, ct 'inherit thee' (be thine heir) 4 and 'inherit it' 8. Moreover the demand for a sign in 8 is hardly in harmony with the faith commended in 6. If the transposition of 3<sup>6</sup> to follow 18 be accepted, this passage 7-11 would presumably stand in the original document next to 13<sup>18</sup>, and the scene of the covenant would be placed at Hebron where Abram had built an altar cp 12<sup>7</sup>. Krätzschmar (Die Bundesvorstellung im AT 6) proposes, however, to attach it to the first settlement of Abram in Shechem on his arrival in the land 12<sup>7</sup>, where a similar promise is made.

transposed to the conclusion of P's tol'adoth of Ishmael, 25<sup>12-17</sup>.

17<sup>1a</sup> On the significance of 17 as a standard for P's style and phraseology, cp Introd VIII iii 2e i 64.

1<sup>b</sup> The name Yahweh is assigned here to a redactor or copyist, as it is contrary to the usage of P before Ex 6<sup>2</sup>.. The corresponding revelation of El Shaddai to Jacob 35<sup>9</sup> is introduced by the appearance of Elohim.

<sup>18<sup>1</sup></sup> The narrative of Yahweh's visit to Abraham, the promise of a son to Sarah, the intercession of Abraham for Sodom and Gomorrah and the subsequent rescue of Lot from the fate of the doomed cities, is as strongly stamped with the characteristics of J as the covenant of El Shaddai with Abraham in 17 with those of P (cp Introd VIII iii 26 i 64). The phraseological evidence is collected in the margins. For the ethical and religious spirit cp especially 24-32 11<sup>1-8</sup>. The promise of a son in 17<sup>16-19</sup> is here conveyed in different terms, and is followed by a different incident. The incredulous laughter suggested by the name Isaac, attributed to Abraham in 17<sup>17</sup>, is assigned to Sarah in 18<sup>12</sup>, and gives rise to a rebuke and expostulation in which Yahweh himself deigns to take part. On the probability that the narrative has received additions, see 17<sup>18</sup> 22<sup>bn</sup>, Fripp (Composition of the Book of Genesis 50-3 and ZATW 1892 23 ff) endeavours to show that in the earliest form of the story Abraham received but one divine visitant, Yahweh himself.

<sup>1b</sup> Perhaps originally Abraham: the name, being no longer required after the union of the story with P, was altered editorially (so Dillmann).

17 This passage is marked by the moralizing amplification which probably indicates a secondary stratum in the story. According to <sup>20</sup>, Yahweh has not yet decided what he will do, but in <sup>17</sup> his purpose is already formed. Several of the phrases belong to the vocabulary of later prophecy, e.g. 'all the nations of the earth' <sup>22</sup> 18<sup>5</sup> 26<sup>4</sup> Deut 28<sup>1</sup> cp Jer 26<sup>6</sup> 33<sup>9</sup> 44<sup>8</sup> Zech 12<sup>3†</sup>: 'keep the way of Yahweh' Judg 2<sup>22</sup> (D) cp Deut 5<sup>33</sup> Jer 4<sup>4</sup>. Ps 37<sup>7</sup>: 'do justice and judgement' (usually inverted) Jer 22<sup>3</sup> 15<sup>23</sup> 33<sup>15</sup> Ezek 18<sup>5</sup> 19<sup>21</sup> 27<sup>33</sup> 14<sup>18</sup> cp Am 5<sup>24</sup>: 'bring upon' cp Jer 36<sup>31</sup> 44<sup>2</sup> 49<sup>37</sup>.

22b With the departure of the men toward Sodom the first part of the story seems to close. The intercession of Abraham 22b-33a has been ascribed by Wellhausen, Kuenen, Cornill, Bacon, and others to a later hand. Linguistic evidence does not, it is true, suggest any diversity of authorship: for the contrast between righteous and wicked <sup>23</sup> cp Ex 9<sup>27</sup>. But other considerations are held to outweigh the absence of phraseological indications. In 1-16 no distinction is drawn among the three men, though, as the story develops, one of them proves to be Yahweh: when therefore they turn and go toward Sodom 22a, it is natural to suppose that Yahweh is still among them. That impression is confirmed by the sequel of the narrative 19<sup>21</sup>. By that time the visit of inspection has revealed the hopeless corruption of the people of Sodom, and the divine intention, unformed in 18<sup>21</sup>, is definitely decided. But in the colloquy of Abraham this intention is already clearly implied <sup>23</sup>. The writer has the actual fate of the cities already in his mind, and his purpose is to vindicate the justice of Yahweh from the charge of involving the righteous in the doom of the wicked. The Divine Being before whom Abraham reverently pleads as the 'Judge of the whole earth' <sup>25</sup> cp Jer 11<sup>20</sup> Ps 71<sup>11</sup> <sup>q</sup>, who cannot do anything but 'judgement' cp 19, seems conceived on a different scale from the visitant who has shared the patriarch's hospitality. The lofty designation occurs nowhere else, and the passage which contains it seems to belong to the group of probable additions in which the universal grandeur and sole sovereignty of Yahweh are again and again asserted in the most emphatic terms cp Ex 8<sup>10</sup> 22<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>14-16</sup> 29<sup>b</sup> (Introd XI 6γ i 109). <sup>27</sup> <sup>g</sup> my lord as in <sup>s</sup> 19<sup>18</sup>, and so in <sup>30-32</sup>.

<sup>12</sup> The text 'son in law and thy sons' can hardly be correct. No sons are elsewhere named, but sons in law appear in 14. It has been conjectured that the reference to the 'son in law' is an awkward adaptation by a later scribe who had 14 in view: others prefer to read 'thy sons in law,' striking out the allusion to sons.

23 The curttness of 23 suggests that the narrative has been somewhat abbreviated. The existence of some dislocation is further evident from 26 where the pronoun 'his' has no antecedent in 24.

27 This reference to 'the place' depends on 18<sup>22b</sup>. If that passage be a later addition, this will follow it as an editorial identification.

29 This verse which plainly enough belongs to P's summary of the patriarchal traditions, may have originally followed 13<sup>12a</sup>.

while the affinities of style and thought with J are numerous, as the margins show. Yet this narrative is plainly not by the writer of 12<sup>10-20</sup>; the emphasis here is not on the beauty of Sarah, but on the prophetic character of Abraham. The divine warning is conveyed to Abimelech in a dream 3<sup>6</sup>; Abimelech himself has been providentially saved from sin; Abraham is a prophet, and his intercession brings healing to the king, his wife, and household 7 17. The Yahwist addition of R in 18 cannot conceal the differences of preceding method. On the general structure and features of E cp Introd XII i 110. The passage here incorporated leads the way to other sections of E in 21-22, first of all combined with J, and then (JE) with P.

Abimelech in a <sup>a</sup>dream of the night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, because of the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a <sup>b</sup>man's wife. <sup>4</sup> Now Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, Lord, wilt thou <sup>c</sup>slay even a <sup>d</sup>righteous nation? <sup>5</sup> Said he not himself unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: <sup>e</sup>in the integrity of my heart and the <sup>f</sup>innocency of my hands have I done this. <sup>6</sup> And God said unto him in the <sup>a</sup>dream, Yea, <sup>g</sup>I know that <sup>h</sup>in the integrity of thy heart thou hast done this, and I also <sup>i</sup>withheld thee from sinning against me: <sup>j</sup>therefore <sup>k</sup>suffered I thee not to touch her. <sup>7</sup> Now therefore restore the man's wife; for he is a <sup>l</sup>prophet, and he shall <sup>m</sup>pray for thee, and thou shalt <sup>n</sup>live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine. <sup>8</sup> And Abimelech <sup>o</sup>rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and <sup>p</sup>told all these things in their <sup>q</sup>ears: and the men were sore afraid. <sup>9</sup> Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou <sup>r</sup>done unto us? and wherein have I sinned against thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a <sup>s</sup>'great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that <sup>t</sup>ought not to be done. <sup>10</sup> And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing? <sup>11</sup> And Abraham said, Because I thought, <sup>u</sup>'Surely the <sup>v</sup>'fear of God is not in this place; and they will <sup>w</sup>'slay me for my wife's <sup>x</sup>'sake. <sup>12</sup> And moreover she is <sup>y</sup>'indeed my sister, the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife: <sup>13</sup> and <sup>z</sup>'it came to pass, <sup>aa</sup>'when God <sup>ab</sup>'caused me to <sup>ac</sup>'wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy <sup>ad</sup>'kindness which thou shalt <sup>ae</sup>'shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother. <sup>14</sup> And Abimelech took <sup>af</sup>'sheep and oxen, <sup>ag</sup>'and menservants and <sup>ah</sup>'womenservants, and gave them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife. <sup>15</sup> And Abimelech said, Behold, my <sup>ai</sup>'land is before thee: dwell where it <sup>aj</sup>'pleaseth thee. <sup>16</sup> And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: behold, <sup>ak</sup>'it is for thee a <sup>al</sup>'covering of the eyes to all that are with thee; and <sup>am</sup>'in respect of all thou art <sup>an</sup>'righted. <sup>17</sup> And Abraham <sup>ao</sup>'prayed unto God: and God <sup>ap</sup>'healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his <sup>aq</sup>'maidservants; and they bare children.

relates to a dispute about a well <sup>25</sup>.. Both these have their parallel in J's history of Isaac 26<sup>20</sup>.. The sequel of the first appears (according to the view here taken, but there is much critical divergence) in <sup>31</sup>, where the name Beer-sheba is interpreted as the 'well of swearing,' in allusion to the oath demanded by Abimelech <sup>23</sup>. But this name contained another allusion, viz to a well, and this has apparently led to the amalgamation of the oath-story with an account of a covenant about a well <sup>25</sup>.., derived from the cycle of well-stories which were no doubt of great importance in the patriarchal traditions. The name might also, however, be interpreted 'well of seven.' This has probably caused the insertion of fresh material in <sup>23</sup>-<sup>30</sup>. The statement in <sup>28</sup> that 'Abraham set the seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves' (Dillm) seems to imply some previous mention of their selection, and suggests that they are drawn from an independent story about the 'well of seven'*. This source would most naturally be J. Still, both J and E frequently employ the number seven; <sup>29</sup> <sup>30</sup> show phraseological affinity with E; and it is possible that the abruptness of <sup>28</sup> may be due to simple abbreviation. The repetition of the phrase 'and they made a covenant' <sup>27</sup> <sup>32</sup> points to the amalgamation of two narratives with the same close, one of which was fixed by the well-incident at Beer-sheba. The oath <sup>22</sup>-<sup>24</sup> would most naturally be located in the land where Abraham had sojourned <sup>23</sup> cp <sup>34</sup>; but its union with the well-story gave it another geographical base, and it was then necessary for Abimelech and Phicol to return to their own land <sup>32</sup>. In <sup>33</sup> the absence of a subject implies discontinuity, and the verse is

* Otherwise it must be assumed that seven was the regular number, already recognized in Abraham's act <sup>27</sup>.

20 This clause is here treated as an editorial connexion, though the frequent recurrence of the phrase 'after these things' makes it possible that it was a continuation of E's history, into which the genealogy 'and it was told Abraham' has been unexpectedly inserted. This appears to be most properly assigned to J as the necessary preparation for the story of 24. Both form and contents show that it cannot belong to P: and there seems no ground either of phraseology or of matter for ascribing it (with Wellh) to E. The slight marginal parallels confirm the attribution to J.

23<sup>1</sup> By the purchase of the cave of Machpelah, Abraham, according to P, secures a permanent possession in the land of Canaan. Contrast the account of Jacob's purchase of land near Shechem 33<sup>18-20</sup>.

24<sup>1</sup> The account of the journey of Abraham's servant has been attached by the compiler to the account of the death and burial of Sarah, but its original place in the group of J narratives cannot be determined with certainty. It would seem that 25<sup>5</sup> must originally have stood somewhere before 24<sup>6b</sup>. Some writers have supposed that the oath exacted from the servant really marks Abraham's deathbed, but that in the process of compilation J's reference to Abraham's decease was set aside for the more detailed notice of P 25<sup>1</sup>... In this way Isaac has become the 'master' <sup>6b</sup>.

And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the ring upon her nose, and the bracelets upon her hands. <sup>48</sup> And I bowed my head, and worshipped Yahweh, and blessed Yahweh, the God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the <sup>22</sup>right way to take my master's brother's daughter for his son. <sup>49</sup> And now if ye will <sup>23</sup>deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may <sup>24</sup>turn to the <sup>25</sup>right hand, or to the left. <sup>50</sup> Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, The thing proceedeth from Yahweh: we cannot speak unto thee <sup>26</sup>bad or good. <sup>51</sup> Behold, Rebekah is <sup>27</sup>before thee, <sup>28</sup>take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife <sup>29</sup>as Yahweh hath spoken. <sup>52</sup> <sup>30</sup>And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he <sup>31</sup>bowed himself down to the earth unto Yahweh. <sup>53</sup> And the servant brought forth jewels of <sup>32</sup>silver, and jewels of <sup>33</sup>gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother <sup>34</sup>precious things. <sup>54</sup> And they did <sup>35</sup>eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, <sup>36</sup>Send me away unto my master. <sup>55</sup> And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us <sup>37</sup>[a few] days, at the least ten; after that she shall go. <sup>56</sup> And he said unto them,

24<sup>41</sup> In this verse there seems a certain incompleteness: Kautzsch and Socin (followed by Bacon) suggest that 41<sup>a</sup> contained a reference to the search for a bride for Isaac: it is possible, as the word 'oath' is different from that in 8 cp 26<sup>28</sup>, that the whole may be a compiler's addition.

24<sup>62a</sup> This rather implies that Isaac has already found an independent settlement cp 25<sup>5</sup>, presumably in consequence of Abraham's death. J's account of that event has been eliminated by R to make way for P's statement 25<sup>5</sup>...; Wellhausen and others suggest that it may originally have preceded this passage.

<sup>67</sup> This verse seems to have received several editorial touches. 5 reads 'And Isaac brought her into the tent,' so that the words 'his mother Sarah' 5 are grammatically out of place; they are therefore regarded as a gloss. Of the same origin, probably, are the concluding words, inserted perhaps after 24 had been attached to 23. Wellhausen and others, however, suggest that the word 'mother' has been substituted for 'father.' The word 'death' does not appear in 5, but may be reasonably supplied from 25<sup>11</sup>.

25<sup>1</sup> After the stress previously laid on Abraham's old age, and the possible references to his death in 24, this passage seems out of place. The difficulty of determining its source and chronological location is increased by the fact that it contains elements already embodied in J; e.g. in 10<sup>26-28</sup> Sheba is the son of Joktan who is descended through Eber from Arpachshad, whereas in <sup>3</sup> Sheba is the son of Jokshan who is born of Keturah. Partly on this ground, partly because of the mention of Midian cp 37<sup>28 36</sup>, Dillmann ascribes the Keturah-table to E, and places it before the birth of Isaac. There are not, however, any decisive phraseological affinities with E, while the few indications of style which can be gathered, point rather to J. The section is here regarded, therefore, as of secondary origin in relation to the main J, though also distinct from J<sup>8</sup> in 10<sup>26</sup>... Bacon attaches it to 22<sup>24</sup>, before 24<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>21</sup> The account of Isaac's marriage in P <sup>19</sup>. was no doubt followed immediately by the mention of the birth of his sons. In the process of compilation R has set this aside in favour of two stories from JE, one relating the birth of the twins, the other the transfer of the birthright from Esau to Jacob. At the end of the first he incorporates P's statement of Isaac's age on the occasion. But the narrative is placed too soon when compared with 26, for it is plain from 26<sup>17</sup> that Rebekah was not then the mother of adult twins. The combined incidents 21-24 ought therefore to follow 26<sup>33</sup>.

<sup>25b</sup> Doubtless E had his account of the birth of the pair of brothers, as well as J. If so, it is possible that some traces of it may be preserved in these verses. According to J <sup>25a</sup> the firstborn came forth admoni, which seems to point to the name Edom, on which a further play is found in <sup>30</sup>, presumably from a different source. The second description of him, containing an allusion to the name Esau, may then be plausibly assigned to the other document, viz E. This reappears in <sup>27</sup> which in its abundance of epithets may again present a combined text, 'a man of the field' and 'dwelling in tents' forming a separate contrast perhaps drawn from J, both narratives (as 27 will show) being familiar with Esau's aptitude for the chase.

26<sup>1</sup> The famine just mentioned gives occasion to Isaac's sojourn in Gerar, to which is attached the incident of Rebekah parallel to that of Sarah in 12<sup>10</sup>.. The editor, therefore, refers to the previous event in the days of Abraham. Hence 1<sup>b</sup> presupposes the narrative in 12<sup>10</sup>..; but as there is no allusion to Abraham's visit to Gerar in 20, it apparently marks a stage in the growth of J prior to its union with E. On the original place of the following narrative cp 25<sup>21N</sup>.

2 The injunction to dwell in a land to be indicated hereafter can hardly proceed from the writer who reports Yahweh's injunction to Abraham to 'sojourn in this land' 3. 1-6 may contain touches of E, possibly 2<sup>b</sup> and 5 are from that source.

15 18 In these two verses the compiler prepares for a second story concerning the origin of the well of Beer-sheba. In 21<sup>25</sup>.. it has already been named in Abraham's day: Isaac, therefore, can only rename it if it has in the meantime fallen into disuse. This is ascribed to interference by the Philistines, which is generalized so as to include 'all the wells.' (Were there other well-stories in E to which R thus makes reference?) The statement in 18 that Isaac 'called their names after the names by which his father had called them,' seems inconsistent with the subsequent narrative, in which he names the wells from the incidents of his own struggles.

<sup>18</sup> And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had <sup>1</sup>stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

<sup>27</sup><sup>1</sup> The narrative of the blessing of Isaac is admitted on all hands to be composite, but its constituents have been blended with such skill as practically to defy analysis. In 1891, Bacon (Hebraica, January, 1891) in America, and Kantsch and Socin in Germany, published independent attempts at resolution. Ball and Holzinger have since followed. But the difficulties are such that even after their labours any scheme of distribution must still be tentative, for the opening of the chapter, in particular, shows that (on any theory) the sources have been much curtailed in the process of union. The presence of duplicate accounts may, however, be detected with sufficient clearness. A comparison of <sup>23</sup> and <sup>25</sup> indicates that two stories are intertwined. The blessing which is given in <sup>23</sup> 'so he blessed him,' has yet to be bestowed in <sup>25</sup> 'that my soul may bless thee.' In <sup>23</sup> the blessing follows on the identification of Jacob with Esau by the hairiness of his hands: in <sup>27</sup> it depends on the small attached to the garments which Jacob is wearing. These divergences belong to different versions of the same main incident, and provide a basis for further partition. If the passages which describe the disguise of the hands be grouped together, <sup>21-23</sup> will be naturally preceded by <sup>9-14</sup> and <sup>16</sup>. of which <sup>18</sup> seems the natural sequel. These verses supply a characteristic phrase, 'savory meat such as he loveth' <sup>9</sup> <sup>14</sup> cp 4 <sup>7b</sup>; the address 'my father' with its reply 'here am I' in <sup>18</sup> finds a counterpart in the similar address 'my son' in <sup>1b</sup>, the parallels in <sup>22</sup> <sup>7</sup> suggesting their connexion with E. The following contrasts in substance and language are then obtained:—

composite. The different divine names in 27<sup>28</sup> are not in themselves necessary proofs of derivation from contrasted sources cp 9<sup>26</sup>. But they tend in that direction when the contents of the blessing are examined. In 29 the second couplet of the verse so suddenly contracts the scope of power as to produce an anti-climax. After the homage of nations <sup>29a</sup> the submission of kindred is but a small gift. Further, the subsequent reference to the blessing in 37 only recognizes the items of 28 and 29b: and on these, also, is framed the prophecy in 30-40. It would seem, then, that 27-29 may be divided into (1) 27 29a 29c and (2) 28 29b; (1) is then Yahwist and (2) Elohist. But (2) carries with it 37-40 and the preceding 36. This is supported by the fact that the play on the name Jacob in 36 is entirely different from that of 25<sup>26</sup>, ascribed on independent grounds to J; and it also secures high probability for the attribution of 25<sup>29-34</sup> to E, as 27<sup>36</sup> plainly refers to that story. Both J and E may have contained it, but it is more natural to locate both the story and the allusion in the same document.

<sup>8</sup> The phrase 'obey my voice' is followed in 13 43 by the actual order, without hortatory expansion. The words 'according to that which I command thee' do not seem to cohere quite naturally with the preceding. Outside of Deut, where the expression is very common, they occur only in Ex 34<sup>11</sup> cp Num 32<sup>25</sup>. Have they also crept into the text from J in the process of compilation?

27<sup>46</sup> This verse is obviously connected with 26<sup>34</sup>, and leads to the dispatch of Jacob to Paddan-aram to find a bride. Whether it was an integral part of P may, however, be doubted. It is not the manner of P to attribute any share in the development of events to the patriarch's wives: in 28<sup>1</sup> <sup>8</sup> Isaac is mentioned alone. Phraseological peculiarities, 'daughters of the land' ct 28<sup>1</sup>, 'daughters of Canaan,' and the clause 'what good' &c cp 25<sup>22</sup> <sup>z</sup>, suggest rather the hand of the compiler who thus makes a bridge from 27 to 28<sup>1-9</sup>. The repetition 'of the daughters of Heth' appears rather cumbersome beside the parallel clause 'of the daughters of the land': its omission by <sup>z</sup> which reads 'the daughters of this land' (<sup>z</sup> de stirpe hujus terrae), suggests that it is a gloss.

10. The sequel of the combined narrative in 27<sup>41-45</sup>. As J apparently locates Isaac at Beer-sheba this verse is naturally connected with 26<sup>23</sup>; while the reference to Haran in its turn supports the attribution of 27<sup>43b</sup> to J.

11a In the following narrative the contrast of 16 and 17 points to an amalgamation of different sources, easily recognized as J and E respectively (cp the dream and the angels of Elohim 12; 12 carries with it 11 and 18; and 20, contains the vow accompanying the consecration of the massebhah 18). With regard to the theophany in J 13-16 opinion is somewhat divided; it has affinities with undoubted J passages, cp 14 and 12<sup>3</sup>, but also with others which apparently belong to the editorial expansions 13<sup>14-17</sup> 22<sup>15-18</sup>. Kuenen and Cornill, accordingly, propose to attribute it to R. The opening words, however, 'And behold Yahweh stood beside him' do not sound like a harmonist's combination with 12; they rather belong to an independent narrative. Of this another trace may be found (cf Bacon's ingenious suggestion be adopted) in 35<sup>15</sup>. Both J and E had an account of the origin of the sacred pillar at Beth-el. E connects it with the revealing dream 12 17, on Jacob's flight from Beer-sheba, cp 35<sup>1</sup>... J seems to have placed it on his return from Aram-naharaim, after the wrestling at Peniel, cp Hos 12<sup>4</sup>. If the promise of 13, be attached to that occasion, a suitable base is found also for P's selection of that place in Jacob's career for the theophany of El Shaddai 35<sup>9</sup>... In that case, however, 15 will be an editorial reflex of 17, due probably to the same combining hand which added the words 'and Yahweh will be my God' 21b.

<sup>21b</sup> So M. T then shall Yahweh be my God, and this stone, &c.

consequently ascribed to E as the sequel of the previous vision. 'Land of the children of the East' +, ct 25<sup>6</sup>.

was Rebekah's son: and she 'ran and told her father. <sup>13</sup> And it came to pass, when Laban heard the <sup>1</sup>tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he 'ran to meet him, and <sup>k</sup>embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he <sup>t</sup>old Laban all these things. <sup>14</sup> And Laban said to him, <sup>m</sup>Surely thou art my <sup>n</sup>bone and my <sup>o</sup>flesh. <sup>15</sup> <sup>n</sup> And Laban said unto Jacob, <sup>q</sup>Because thou art my <sup>r</sup>brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for <sup>s</sup>nought? tell me, what shall thy <sup>t</sup>wages be? <sup>16</sup> And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the <sup>u</sup>younger was Rachel. <sup>17</sup> And Leah's eyes were <sup>v</sup>tender; but Rachel was <sup>w</sup>beautiful and well favoured. <sup>18</sup> And Jacob loved Rachel; and he said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy <sup>x</sup>younger daughter. <sup>19</sup> And Laban said, It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me. <sup>20</sup> And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they <sup>y</sup>seemed unto him but a <sup>z</sup>few days, for the love he had to her. <sup>21</sup> And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are <sup>a</sup>fulfilled, that I may go in unto her. <sup>22</sup> And Laban <sup>b</sup>gathered together all the <sup>c</sup>men of the place, and made a feast. <sup>23</sup> And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

<sup>25</sup> And it came to pass in the morning that, behold, it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? wherefore then hast thou <sup>b</sup>beguiled me?

<sup>29</sup><sup>15</sup> A new source seems to be introduced here, for <sup>15</sup> implies that Jacob has already proved himself capable in service, yet nothing so far has been said about it. The opening of this section has been suppressed by the compiler.

3 M 5 be builded by her.—The only other occurrence of the phrase 16<sup>2</sup> makes it probable that this clause is incorporated from J.

4 The framework of the following recital seems to be in the main drawn from J cp 'handmaid' 4 7 9. 12. But the compiler has added etymologies from the parallel narrative of E, in which the divine name Elohim sometimes enables the source to be clearly identified. Such passages are marked with E.

6 M 5 dan, he judged.

8a M 5 wrestlings of God.

8b M 5 niphtal, he wrestled.

11b M That is, Fortune.

13a M 5 With my happiness.

13b M 5 asher, to call happy.—This verse seems to contain two applications of the name Asher, one of which may belong to J and one to E cp 20.

16 Wellhausen and others conjecture that J went on to relate the conception of Rachel by means of the love-apples. If so, the account has been set aside to make way for the record of the birth of Leah's remaining sons.

18a M 5 sachar.

18b The word is J's characteristic term siphahah 4-12. Its appearance here in a passage seemingly drawn from E, may be due to a simple copyist's error, or to a harmonizer's touch, or to the existence—even in verses marked by the phenomena of E—of an underlying extract from J cp 6. . .

20a The double play on the name Zebulun points again to combination. In the first case the allusion is not close, but 'endow,' zabad, and 'dowry,' zebed, make an obvious approach.

20b M 5 zabal, he dwelt.—This clause is the counterpart to the preceding, and the formula 'this time' as in 29<sup>34</sup>, connects it with J.

21 The vagueness of this statement and its difference in form have led to the conjecture that it was a note of one of the latest editors to supply the omission of any mention of Dinah.

 uncopulated verbs makes it probable that a passage from E is here introduced. But the attempt to combine two different representations has resulted in an obscure and perhaps partially corrupt text. One narrative obviously implies that Jacob employed a stratagem to secure the stronger flock <sup>37</sup> 41. But Jacob's recital <sup>31</sup> 13 and his reply to Laban <sup>31</sup> 38-42 suggest a very different view. So far is Jacob from having endeavoured to outwit Laban, that he charges him with having deceived him and changed his wages ten times <sup>31</sup> 7 32<sup>41</sup>. The intentions of Laban, however, were continually frustrated by the protection of the Elohim of Bethel <sup>31</sup> 13, who guarded Jacob from harm in a distant land. From <sup>31</sup> 8 it may be inferred that E originally contained some description of the successive arrangements between Laban and his son-in-law. But in the endeavour to combine it with J's narrative of Jacob's skill it has been so abbreviated that it can no longer be recovered except in fragments. The analysis, therefore, lacks complete justification. The proposal in <sup>31</sup> is apparently carried out in <sup>34</sup>, but the contrast of <sup>35</sup> and <sup>32</sup> points to diversity of source. The peculiar terminology of the flock is for the most part common to both documents. Only the differences, involving points of contact elsewhere, have been noted.

37 <sup>M</sup> Or, storax tree.

38 The words in brackets stand in <sup>z</sup> at the end of the clause
 'where the flocks came to drink,' and in the text as divided should take that position. The word 'watering troughs' is commonly regarded as an explanation of the previous term 'gutters.' Each occurs once elsewhere in the Hexateuch, and both occurrences are in J. The partition cannot, therefore, rest on the mere diversity of the word. But <sup>38b</sup> 'and they conceived' seems to be a duplicate of <sup>39a</sup> 'and the flocks conceived.' As the latter attaches itself to the mention of the rods in <sup>37</sup>-38a (J), <sup>38b</sup> must be assigned to E, and the parallel terms may then be regarded as drawn from different documents.

20 M 5 Stole the heart of Laban the Aramean.

21a Holzinger finds a gap between 'he fled' and 'he rose up,' and he ascribes the latter clause to J as the doublet of 17. But reasons have been offered for connecting 17 with J, and the sequence in 21 resembles that in 2410 'he departed... and rose up,' so that it seems needless to divide the verse.

21b M That is, the Euphrates.—As the distance from the Euphrates to Gilead is much more than a seven-days' march 23, and the extant passages of E do not assign Laban's home to Haran, it is possible that E placed it nearer to Gilead, and that the clause 'and he rose up and passed over the River' is incorporated by the compiler from J (cp Dillmann, who suggests as an alternative that 'the River' denotes some other stream. But this is less probable than that the narrator underestimated the required time). For the usage of the word cp 3637 (J) and Ex 2331 (E).

27 M 5 didst steal me.—G omits, and inserts the preceding words of 27 in 26. 29 5 the El. Cp Deut 2832 Mic 21 Prov 327.

31 Apparently the answer to 27 cp notes to 19 and 32: on the other hand 31 only occurs in Gen in E. But cp Lev 1913 64 Deut 2829.

32 The abruptness of the transition is implied in the mitigating endeavours of the versions, G having καὶ εἰπὲν 'Iakób, ἔ quod autem furti me arguis. G may represent an original reading, a survival of more words lost in compilation.

<sup>44</sup> It is probable that some words have here dropped out. The want of concord between 'covenant' (fem) and 'let it be' (masc) is not indeed conclusive, as this is not uncommon in Hebrew grammar; it is more important to notice that the temporary act of making a covenant could not be a permanent 'witness.' For that some visible object was needed, and the verse may have contained Laban's proposal 'let us make an heap,' cp <sup>46</sup> <sup>48</sup>.

<sup>49a</sup> Galeed is probably intended to suggest Gilead. A later reviser, desirous apparently to connect the well-known Mizpah in Gilead with this incident, adds a further explanation of that name. But the proper name with the definite article 'the Mizpah' at once excites suspicion. It has been conjectured that it may have crept into the story through accidental confusion with the 'pillar' or massēbha <sup>45</sup>, as Sam actually reads.

<sup>53</sup> M Or, gods.—The clause in small type is omitted by § and some § codd, and has been rejected as a gloss by a long series of critics, including Kennicott, Houbigant, Olshausen, Wellhausen, and Dillmann. 32<sup>2a</sup> <sup>h</sup>Mahaneh, i.e. camp, host, or company.

<sup>2b</sup> M That is, hosts, or, companies.—Opinion is divided as to the precise significance of the name. It is apparently in the dual, and is so understood here by Dillmann, who finds a reference to the company (or camp) of angels and the company of Jacob with his family and flocks cp 50<sup>9</sup>. Another allusion to the dual form seems to lurk in the 'two companies' of 7 and 10, which must be ascribed, therefore, to a different hand. Wellhausen, however, Composition des Hexateuchs (1889) 45 [433], gives reasons for regarding Mahanaim as a singular with an Aramaizing termination, understood by E but misinterpreted by J.

<sup>3a</sup> As J and E both narrated the estrangement of the brothers, Jacob's flight to his Aramean kindred, and his return, it is not unnatural to expect that they will both relate his reconciliation with Esau who has already taken up his position in the South. In this view they differ from P which contains no hint of fraternal discord, and places the separation of Esau and Jacob much later 36<sup>6</sup>. The basis of the account in 32-33 seems to be derived from J cp 32<sup>9-12</sup> and parallels to 32<sup>4</sup>, 19, 24., 'two companies' 7<sup>10</sup> ct 2 &c. But occasional incongruities imply the amalgamation of other material cp 13 22, 30 33<sup>10</sup>, which may be, therefore, assigned to E.

<sup>3b</sup> The duplicate designation may be drawn from the other narrative, or may be simply a reviser's addition.

<sup>7</sup> This passage bears various marks of distinct origin. The prayer of Jacob 9-12 with its citation of a previous divine monition 9 cp 31<sup>3</sup> seems in 12 to depend on 22<sup>17</sup>, and resembles other expanded utterances with which the older narrative was adorned as it underwent successive revisions. But the allusion to 'two companies' in 10 carries with it at least 7<sup>b</sup> which seem to be an independent reference to the name Mahanaim.

Of this division nothing is said further, for the 'company' in 33<sup>8</sup> consists of Jacob's intended gift: it interrupts the connexion between Jacob's alarm 7<sup>a</sup> and the selection of the present 13<sup>b</sup> by which he hopes to appease Esau 20: and it was perhaps suggested by the 'division' of his wives and children 33<sup>1</sup>. Further, the situation of Jacob seems conceived differently from that of the context. In 22 he crosses the Jabbok, but in 10 he is apparently placed on the bank of the Jordan.

And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. <sup>27</sup> And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob. <sup>28</sup> And he said, Thy name shall be <sup>n</sup>called no more Jacob, but <sup>n</sup>Israel: for

And he said, <sup>n</sup>Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

... <sup>30</sup> <sup>n</sup>And Jacob called the name of the place <sup>n</sup>Peniel: for, [said he,]

32<sup>23a</sup> In 22. there seems to be a confusion arising from the intertwining of two strands of narrative. The text in RV runs thus:—

22 'And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two handmaids, and his eleven children, and passed over the ford of Jabbok. 23 And he took them, and sent them over the stream, and sent over that he had.'

As the narrative in 24<sup>31</sup> implies that Jacob remained on the right bank of the Jabbok till the next morning, the statement that he crossed the ford 22<sup>b</sup> cannot be ascribed to the author of 24-31. On the other hand, the reference to his despatch of the family over the stream 23<sup>b</sup> harmonizes completely with 24. The repetition 'and he took' in 22<sup>23</sup> points to similar union of duplicates; a probable rearrangement of the fragments is offered in the text. The verb 'sent over' in each passage is derived from 'passed over.'

24 Dillmann alone ascribes this narrative to E, though Holzinger attributes 29 to that source on the ground that the refusal to declare the name suits E's design, according to which it was first revealed to Moses. The story is doubtless condensed.

28a M That is, He who striveth with God, or, God striveth.

28b M G and L have, Thou hast had power with God, and thou shalt prevail against men.

28c M Or, had power with.—Hos 12<sup>4</sup>†.

30a This verse seems to belong to E, and was probably the explanatory conclusion of a narrative of a theophany at Peniel, called by J in 31 Peniel. In 33<sup>10</sup> there is another reference to the elements of the name. Ball corrects to Peniel with some MSS, Sam G L, and ascribes the verse to J.

30b M That is, The face of God.

32 Probably a later explanation of the previous statement, which seems quite in the manner of J, though he is not generally concerned with such ritual detail.

33<sup>1</sup> The account of the meeting of Jacob and Esau is the sequel of 32<sup>6</sup> and seems due to J. But elements from E have been detected by some critics in 5<sup>11</sup>. The possibility of such incorporation cannot, of course, be denied, but the linguistic usage makes against it.

5 The occurrence of the name 'Elohim' in 5 and 11 at first sight suggests the assimilation of material from E. But J also uses this name (cp 32<sup>28</sup>) especially in connexion with those who are (or are supposed to be) outside the chosen line cp 3<sup>1</sup> 43<sup>29</sup> 44<sup>16</sup>. In the present passage the play on the name Peniel

'face of God' in 10 has perhaps helped to determine the selection. In other respects the phraseology is markedly in favour of J, cp 'thy servant' <sup>5</sup>, 'graciously given' <sup>5</sup> = 'dealt graciously' <sup>11</sup> 5 cp 'find grace' <sup>10</sup>, 'I have (w) enough' <sup>9</sup> 11, 'urged' <sup>11</sup> cp 19<sup>8</sup> 9*. These parallels seem to outweigh the apparent indications of a doublet in 10 11 'present,' 'blessing.'

33<sup>10</sup> M Or, for therefore have I seen.

11<sup>a</sup> M 5 blessing.

12 The narrative apparently represents Jacob as intending to visit Esau 12-14. This is plainly inconsistent with the situation implied in 32<sup>10</sup>, and Holzinger therefore ascribes 12-14 to E. But the linguistic usage does not favour this, and the difficulty is overcome by the recognition of the secondary character of 32<sup>9-12</sup>. In 17, however, Jacob's journey to Seir is stopped at Succoth, but there seems no indication of change of narrator. It may be inferred, therefore, that the Trans-jordanic Succoth was meant. With the reference to the house cp J in 27<sup>15</sup>. Nothing appears to have been preserved from J or E concerning Jacob's passage of the Jordan and advance into middle Canaan, any more than in the case of Abraham 12<sup>6</sup>.

17 ■ That is, Booths.

18<sup>b</sup> The following statement seems to be the continuation of P's narrative of Jacob's migration begun in 31<sup>18</sup>. The analogy of 12<sup>5</sup> suggests that the extract in the text began, 'And Jacob came.'

19 The reference to this purchase in Josh 24<sup>32</sup> seems decisive for the ascription to E. But the purchase implies the previous encampment, and the migratory movement of which it was the close. The description of Hamor as 'Shechem's father' is probably an editorial preparation for the narrative in 34.

20<sup>b</sup> M That is, God, the God of Israel.

34<sup>1</sup> Two narratives seem to be blended here. In the first the chief actors are Shechem on the one part <sup>11</sup>, and Simeon and Levi on the other <sup>30</sup>; in the second Shechem recedes behind his father Hamor <sup>4</sup> 6 13, and the whole of the sons of Jacob move together <sup>13</sup>. The first story relates the violation of Dinah (her marriage) and the subsequent vengeance inflicted on Shechem by her two brothers. The second describes Shechem's honourable love for her, the proposals made by his father, the counter-conditions of intertribal communion demanded by the sons of Jacob, the massacre of the men, the capture of the women, children, and cattle, and the plunder of the city. The linguistic affinities of the first story clearly connect it with J, and it is supposed to contain the account of a transaction obscurely indicated in 49<sup>5-7</sup>. Equally clearly do various marks in the second story bring it within the scope of P. But it is so different in kind from P's other narratives of the patriarchal age, eg 17 and 23, as to make it highly improbable that it ever belonged to the Tol'dhoth-book. The description of the spoiling of the city 27-29 strongly recalls that of the Midianites in Num 31, which is of a secondary character. But other features suggest the possibility that older material may lie at the basis of this account. The language shows many points of contact with JE unknown elsewhere in the Tol'dhoth-book. It is the view of Wellhausen, Cornill, Bacon, and Holzinger, for example, that this earlier story was derived from E. This question cannot, however, be decided with certainty. The allusion to an Amorite conquest in 48<sup>22</sup> does not seem in any way related to the story of the wooing of Dinah and the massacre at Shechem, nor does the context in E 33<sup>20</sup> 35<sup>1</sup> provide an appropriate place for it (cp Dillmann). On the other hand, similar linguistic phenomena in the use of phrases of both types JE and P have been already observed in 14, and will be noted hereafter in Num 31. . . The analysis, therefore, does not attempt to go behind the form in which the second narrative has been combined with J. As the interlacing is very close, the assignment of some passages must be doubtful.

<sup>26a</sup> It can hardly be supposed that Simeon and Levi accomplished the entire slaughter themselves. The subject is rather the Bene Jacob <sup>13</sup>, and the insertion of the two names is probably due to the compiler, who has adopted them from J cp <sup>30</sup>.

of 27, suggested by the language of <sup>8b</sup> which is much more in the style of E<sup>i</sup> cp 28<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>6a</sup> The change of subject here to 'the sons of Jacob' points to the story in 34, so that this verse is dependent on the redaction of that chapter.

35<sup>14</sup> This verse is now felt to be inappropriate to P who nowhere else recognizes any sacred pillars, or ascribes any acts of sacrifice to the patriarchs (cp Introd XIII 2γ). It may be the sequel of J's story of the origin of the massēbha in Beth-el cp 28<sup>11a</sup>, which the compiler has inserted where P's narrative of the Beth-el revelation supplied a fresh occasion. It is, however, possible that the latter half of the verse has received editorial enrichment. The chrism has its parallel in 28<sup>18</sup> and may belong to the antique story. But the preceding description of the libation, though not without older counterpart elsewhere, may have taken form here under the influence of the Levitical ritual.

16 In 16-22 the narrative of Jacob's advance is resumed. The determination of the sources is not free from difficulty, many critics assigning 16-20 to E. But as in 1 Jacob had been commanded to remain at Beth-el, and no motive is assigned for his departure, it would seem more natural to recognize a change of document. Holzinger assumes that both narratives related the birth of Benjamin in connexion with the death of Rachel, and finds traces of duplication in 16<sup>b</sup> and 17<sup>a</sup>. On the other hand, Rachel is apparently still alive in 37<sup>10</sup> (E), and this contradiction is hardly removed by the supposition that the symbolism of the dream may be independent of the facts. The parallel in 17<sup>b</sup> certainly points to J, and 16-18, therefore, is assigned (though not without hesitation) to J.

18a M That is, The son of my sorrow.

18b M That is, The son of the right hand.

19 Further embarrassment arises in 19. 19 resembles 8 in form, and might therefore naturally be ascribed to E, but for the difficulty of 37<sup>10</sup> (which might, however, be more easily evaded on the hypothesis that the dream-story was well fixed in tradition before the family history was organized into a consecutive narrative). Moreover, the opening words seem superfluous after the parenthetical remark in 18, and lend additional strength to the ascription to E. It may, however, be argued that the reference to the burial-place (cp parallels in J) required the formal announcement of the death; and the words 'for she died' may be a copyist's or editor's gloss. If the verse be E's, what later place can be found for it in the Jacob-Joseph cycle after 37<sup>10</sup>? Dillmann allots it to P, but see 48<sup>7a</sup>. The identification of the grave with Beth-lehem seems a late error, cp 1 Sam 10<sup>2</sup> Jer 31<sup>15</sup>.

20 The statement of erection resembles that in 14; E in each reference to a sacred pillar employing a different word 28<sup>18</sup> 31<sup>45</sup> Ex 24<sup>4</sup>. The verse is therefore ascribed to J. On the other hand the name Jacob, contrasted with Israel 21, seems to imply divergence, and many critics attribute 20 to E. But 37<sup>10</sup> still stares them in the face. Moreover the name Jacob has been used by J since 32<sup>28</sup>, e.g. 33<sup>1</sup> 10 17 and perhaps in 34. The objection, therefore, does not seem conclusive, cp 21<sup>8</sup>.

with <sup>10</sup> <sup>14</sup> <sup>20</sup>., perhaps replacing some earlier enumeration. The migration of Esau <sup>6</sup>. is obviously parallel with the similar migrations of Abraham and Jacob: the separation of the brothers which here follows the death of Isaac is clearly independent of the representations of JE in 27 and 33, though it is possible that it may once have occupied an earlier place in the narrative, e.g. after 35<sup>29</sup>. In <sup>9-19</sup> further difficulties appear. The title is repeated cp <sup>1</sup> with a fresh identification of Esau; the names of Esau's wives <sup>10</sup> <sup>14</sup> agree with <sup>2</sup>. (though their nationalities are omitted), so that the two lists have been brought into relation with each other, <sup>12a</sup> having been added, and the awkward phraseology of <sup>14</sup> implying editorial treatment. The frequent repetitions in this section seem due to repeated revisions and insertions; in <sup>16</sup> Korah is evidently out of place cp <sup>14</sup> <sup>18</sup>, and Gatam should precede Kenaz <sup>16</sup> cp <sup>11</sup>. On the whole, therefore, this section must be regarded as secondary. The material in <sup>20-30</sup> is similarly composite, <sup>29</sup>. being a brief equivalent of <sup>20-28</sup> where the pedigree of Oholibamah indicates connexion with <sup>2b</sup>.. and <sup>14</sup>.. The parallel to the 'dukes of the Horites' <sup>29</sup> is found in the 'dukes of Esau' <sup>h</sup> <sup>40-43</sup> where the names differ so widely from those in <sup>9-19</sup> (cp Timna <sup>12</sup> Oholibamah <sup>14</sup> who here appear as 'dukes') that the passage cannot be ascribed to the same source. As the phraseology of <sup>40</sup> and <sup>43</sup> coincides with that of P, this section (and probably <sup>20</sup>.) may

more or less characteristic of later style, especially as exemplified in P. Cp Kuenen, Hex 327-8. Thus in <sup>2</sup> the phrase 'the evil report of them' excites some suspicion by its grammatical difficulty, while the word 'report' only occurs elsewhere in Num 13<sup>32</sup> 14<sup>36</sup>. P in Hex, and Jer 20<sup>10</sup> Ezek 36<sup>3</sup> Ps 31<sup>18</sup> Prov 10<sup>18</sup> 25<sup>10†</sup>. Cp 40<sup>2N</sup>.

us? or shalt thou 'indeed have dominion over us? And they 'hated him yet the 'more for his dreams, and for his 'words. <sup>9</sup> And he dreamed yet another dream, and 'told it to his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed yet a dream; and, behold, the sun and the moon and eleven stars made obeisance to me. <sup>10</sup> And he 'told it to his father, 'and to his brethren; and his father 'rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren 'indeed come to 'bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

<sup>13a</sup> And 'Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren 'feed the flock in Shechem? 'come, and I will send thee unto them.

... <sup>13b</sup> And he said to him, 'Here am I. <sup>14a</sup> And he said to him, 'Go 'now, see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flock; and 'bring me word again.

<sup>14b</sup> So he sent him 'out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

<sup>15</sup> 'And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was 'wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou? <sup>16</sup> And he said, I seek my brethren: 'tell me, I pray thee, where they are feeding [the flock]. <sup>17a</sup> And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to 'Dothan.

<sup>20</sup> Come now therefore, and let us 'slay him, 'and cast him into one of the 'pits, and we will say, An evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

<sup>21</sup> And 'Reuben heard it, and 'delivered him out of their hand; and said, Let us not 'take his life.

<sup>22</sup> And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood; cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, but 'lay no hand upon him: that he might 'deliver him out of their hand, to restore him to his father. <sup>23</sup> And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stript Joseph of his coat, 'the coat of many colours that was on him; <sup>24</sup> and they took him, and cast him into the pit: and the pit was 'empty, there was no water in it. <sup>25a</sup> And they sat down to eat bread.

<sup>25b</sup> And they lifted up their eyes and 'looked, and, behold, a 'travelling company of Ishmaelites came from Gilead, with their 'camels bearing 'spicery and 'balm and 'myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

<sup>26</sup> And Judah said unto his brethren, What 'profit is it if we 'slay our brother and conceal his blood? <sup>27</sup> 'Come, and let us 'sell him to the Ishmaelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother, our 'flesh. And his brethren hearkened unto him.

14<sup>a</sup> A duplicate of 'come' in <sup>13</sup>.
 14<sup>b</sup> It is doubtful whether J ascribed to Jacob a sojourn in Hebron: these words may be due to R. Cp Kuenen, Hexateuch 225.

15 In 15-17<sup>a</sup> R<sup>3</sup> seems to have supplied the connexion between J's Shechem and E's Dothan.

18<sup>a</sup> The divergence in the following passage between the Ishmaelites who buy Joseph from his brothers, and the Midianites who kidnap him, points plainly to the amalgamation of two narratives. The analysis is founded on the subjoined doublets:—

J the plot to kill Joseph <sup>18b</sup> || proposal to slay him <sup>20</sup> E.

38<sup>1</sup> This narrative, which breaks the sequence of the Joseph story, bears many marks of the style and language of J, and is accordingly assigned to the group thus designated. But of its ultimate source nothing is known, though it doubtless belongs to the cycle of traditions relating the origins of tribal clans; for Er <sup>3</sup> cp 1 Chron 4<sup>21</sup>. It appears designed to illustrate and justify the Levirate law, but it has also been thought to have some affinities with the story at the base of Judges 19. And they said, There hath been no <sup>a</sup>'harlot here. <sup>22</sup> And he returned to Judah, and said, I have not found her; and also the <sup>a</sup>'men of the place said, There hath been no <sup>a</sup>'harlot here. <sup>23</sup> And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be <sup>a</sup>'put to shame: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her. <sup>24</sup> And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter in law hath played the harlot; and moreover, behold, she is <sup>a</sup>'with child by <sup>a</sup>'whoredom. And Judah said, Bring her forth, and let her be <sup>a</sup>'burnt. <sup>25</sup> When she was brought forth, she sent to her <sup>a</sup>'father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, am I <sup>a</sup>'with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the <sup>a</sup>'signet, and the cords, and the staff. <sup>26</sup> And Judah acknowledged them, and said, She is more <sup>a</sup>'righteous than I; <sup>a</sup>'forasmuch as I gave her not to Shelah my son. And he <sup>a</sup>'knew her again no more. <sup>27</sup> And it came to pass <sup>a</sup>'in the time of her travail, that, behold, <sup>a</sup>'twins were in her womb. <sup>28</sup> And it came to pass, when she travailed, that one put out a hand: and the <sup>a</sup>'midwife took and <sup>a</sup>'bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first. <sup>29</sup> And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his <sup>a</sup>'brother came out: and she said, <sup>a</sup>'Wherefore hast thou <sup>a</sup>'made a breach for thyself? therefore his name was called <sup>a</sup>'Perez. <sup>30</sup> And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zerah.

<sup>2</sup> T And. The narrative of Joseph's life as a slave in the house of the captain of the guard, and his interpretation of the dreams first of the royal servants and then of Pharaoh himself, is derived almost wholly from E, as the criteria noted in the margins will show. In a few passages 40<sup>3</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> the harmonist has endeavoured to combine E's conception with J's story of his imprisonment in consequence of the false charge of Potiphar's wife; and from this source is probably derived the statement in 41<sup>14b</sup>. Both documents, however, appear to have narrated his prediction of the years of plenty and famine, and his elevation to the post of Pharaoh's chief minister. From 41<sup>30</sup> onwards the narrative exhibits frequent signs of diversity of material, but its resolution into its original factors can only be attempted with much reserve as to detail. The critical problem is further complicated by the occasional appearance of words or expressions indicating that this whole group of narratives has passed through a much later redaction, cp Giesebrecht, ZATW i 237, and Kuenen, Hex 328. Instances will be found in 40<sup>13</sup> 41<sup>13</sup> 47 42<sup>6</sup> 43<sup>14</sup> 45<sup>19</sup> 23. To these may be added the recurring formulae 'land of Canaan' 42<sup>5</sup> 7 & 24 (though this may be naturally explained as due to contrast with the 'land of Egypt') and 'spake . . . saying' 39<sup>17</sup> 19 42<sup>14</sup> 50<sup>4</sup> cp 18<sup>5</sup>, elsewhere in Gen JE only in an allied phrase 18<sup>5d</sup>. In 42<sup>5</sup> the appearance of the 'sons of Israel' has been attributed to the same influence cp 46<sup>9</sup>, but (as it would seem) unnecessarily. The frequency of the expression 'land of Egypt' (usual in P), e.g. fifteen times in JE 41<sup>19-56</sup> et 57 42<sup>1-3</sup> 43<sup>2</sup> 15 &c has also been quoted in this connexion: but its repeated recurrence (for example) in JE Ex 9-11 renders this explanation doubtful, unless, indeed, it be extended to this group of narratives also.

40<sup>7</sup> According to E Joseph is the slave of Pharaoh's chief executioner 37<sup>36</sup>, but he is not himself a prisoner, as is implied in 'with him,' which must therefore be due to E.

14 The phraseology of this verse has echoes of J, and the last clause 'bring me out of this house' is rather the language of a prisoner than a slave cp 16<sup>b</sup>. Had J also a story of the dreams?

cities <sup>35c</sup> 48, where its sale was under Joseph's direction <sup>56b</sup> 42<sup>6</sup>; and this points to a different arrangement from the migrations rendered necessary in 47<sup>21</sup>. The investiture of Joseph <sup>41-43</sup> with power over 'all the land of Egypt' is described in terms harmonious with J, and contrasting with his elevation 'over Pharaoh's house' <sup>40</sup> cp 45<sup>8</sup>. But many critics, it may be noted, attribute <sup>42</sup>. (in whole or part) to E. The name Poti-phera, however, bears a most suspicious likeness to Potiphar, Joseph's master, according to E 37<sup>36</sup>. It seems possible that the same name was lodged in the traditions, but was variously applied in J and E. If <sup>45</sup> is rightly assigned to J, the name in <sup>50</sup> is due to the harmonist. The duplicates in <sup>45b</sup> and <sup>46b</sup> suggest that in <sup>45b</sup> 46a there is an extract from P's brief notice of Joseph's administration: the datum of age is in P's manner, and is hardly to be reconciled with the description of Benjamin's youth in JE.

57b This clause has somewhat the air of an editorial annotation, hardly needed after 56a: the word 'was sore' is not J's usual phrase cp 56b.

42<sup>1</sup> The narrative in 42-45 presents the same general characteristics as that in 40-41; there are considerable portions which are clearly uncompounded; there are others in which the interlacing of different documents appears extremely close. To the indications already enumerated the following parallels and contrasts may be added:—

Joseph recognizes his brethren 42<sup>7</sup>.

He does not disclose himself but makes kindly inquiries 42<sup>7c</sup> 43<sup>7</sup>.. 27.. His brothers describe him as 'the man' 43<sup>3-5</sup> 7 &c.

42<sup>8</sup>.

Speaks roughly and accuses them of being spies 7b 9.. 30. His brothers describe him as 'the man, the lord of the land' 42<sup>30</sup> 33.

The money is found in the sacks on being emptied when they reach Jacob, provision for the way being furnished separately 42<sup>25</sup> 35.

E uses saq 42<sup>25</sup> 35; its occurrence in 42<sup>27a</sup> seems due to the compiler.

The analysis founded on these differences both of substance and form cannot, however, attain in many cases to more than various degrees of probability, and it is sometimes possible that a passage which seems to be simple may comprise diverse elements. Thus in 43<sup>9</sup> 'of my hand shalt thou require him' may be a doublet (E) of 'surety' (J); so that 9b 10 may conceivably be drawn from E. Similarly in 45<sup>7</sup> 'to preserve you a remnant' (J), and 'to save you alive' (E). The linguistic affinities are not by any means always decisive: an attempt is made in the margin to indicate their conflicting character: as in the story of Jacob, so here, the similarities of style are very close. Thus two words are used for corn, shebher 42<sup>1</sup>. 19 26 43<sup>2</sup> 44<sup>2</sup> 47<sup>14*</sup> and bar 41<sup>35</sup> 49 42<sup>3-25</sup> 45<sup>23</sup>. Both seem employed by each writer as by Amos 8<sup>5</sup>.

5 On the expression 'land of Canaan' 5 7 13 29 32 cp 40<sup>2N</sup>.

6 This clause may be due to R, cp the late usage of שָׁחַד; in Chaldee frequent in Daniel and in Ezr 4<sup>20</sup> 7<sup>24</sup>; cp 40<sup>2N</sup>.

7b This clause seems out of place in the present text of 7, and appears to suit E's bitter accusation 'ye are spies' better than J's friendly inquiry 'whence come ye?' It is therefore transposed to 9.

ficance. And when the sacks are opened <sup>11</sup>, nothing is said of its discovery, ct 42<sup>27</sup>, and 42<sup>35</sup>.

45<sup>1</sup> The narrative of Joseph's disclosure of himself and the subsequent invitation to his father and brethren is obviously composite, but some uncertainty still hangs about the details. The opening seems to be derived from J in sequel to the pleading of Judah, and with this is associated the allusion to the transaction with the Ishmaelites <sup>4</sup>. Joseph's message to his father follows in <sup>9</sup> with the promise of residence in Goshen <sup>10</sup>. The urgency of <sup>9</sup> is repeated in <sup>13</sup>: in <sup>14</sup> Joseph falls on Benjamin's neck cp <sup>28</sup>; the 'little ones' <sup>19</sup> also seem to belong to J, and in <sup>28</sup> it is Israel who accepts his son's proposal. On the other hand a number of indications plead for E. In <sup>1b</sup> 'stood' represents a different 5 compared with <sup>1a</sup>; 'made himself known' 'wept aloud' each occur but once elsewhere and both in E; the question in <sup>3</sup> is E's parallel to the inquiry in 43<sup>27</sup>; in <sup>5b-8</sup> the use of Elohim makes for E (cp the marginal passages) as do the parallels to <sup>12</sup> and <sup>15</sup>. The account of Pharaoh's command to Joseph <sup>16-18</sup> is a duplicate of Joseph's instructions <sup>9-11</sup>, while the gifts of Joseph in <sup>21b-23</sup> produce the desired effect on Jacob <sup>25-27</sup> (cp Israel <sup>28</sup>). In the sequel J represents Joseph as only informing Pharaoh about his family when they have actually reached Goshen 46<sup>28</sup>...: there is thus a clear divergence between the two narratives.

son Joseph, <sup>9</sup>God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not: <sup>10</sup>and thou shalt dwell in the land of <sup>6</sup>Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy <sup>6</sup>flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast: <sup>11</sup>and there will I <sup>6</sup>nourish thee; for there are yet <sup>6</sup>five years of famine; lest thou <sup>6</sup>come to poverty, thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast.
<sup>12</sup>And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.
<sup>13</sup>And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall <sup>6</sup>haste and bring down my father hither.
<sup>14</sup>And he <sup>6</sup>fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.
<sup>15</sup>And he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him. <sup>16</sup>And the <sup>6</sup>fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it <sup>6</sup>pleased Pharaoh well, and his servants. <sup>17</sup>And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; <sup>6</sup>lade your <sup>6</sup>beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan; <sup>18</sup>and take your father and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the <sup>6</sup>good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land.

45<sup>9</sup> The language of this verse is not inconsistent with J ('haste' JE 43, 'tarry not' 19<sup>17</sup> cp Josh 10<sup>19</sup>) except in the use of 'Elohim' which is no longer dramatically appropriate as in 43<sup>23</sup> 29 44<sup>16</sup> between supposed strangers, and may be due to editorial assimilation, cp 50<sup>48</sup>. The words can hardly be referred to E who ascribes to Pharaoh 17. the first invitation to Jacob and his sons to settle in Egypt.

19 The first words of this verse 'now thou art commanded' do not seem to cohere with what precedes or follows. The instructions begin in 17. from Pharaoh to Joseph: they are continued without a break in 19 from Joseph to his brethren. 19 appears to come from another hand. In the opening phrase the Hebrew conjugation (found elsewhere only in P Ex 34<sup>34</sup> Lev 8<sup>35</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> Num 3<sup>16</sup> 36<sup>2</sup>, and Ezek 12<sup>7</sup> 24<sup>18</sup> 37<sup>7</sup>) is unusual; 5 reads 'command thou,' Sam 'I have commanded.' The uncertainty of the text is probably due to editorial touches which cannot now be fully traced. But it does not seem necessary to ascribe the whole of 19. to R cp 46<sup>31</sup>: the peculiar phrase in 20a 'your eye shall not pity,' though common in D 43<sup>3</sup> in another application, is not exclusively Deuteronomic Ezek 11<sup>7</sup> 4<sup>9</sup> &c Is 13<sup>18</sup> cp 1 Sam 24<sup>10</sup>: in 20b 'the good of all the land' seems an original parallel to 18, rather than an editorial addition which would have been superfluous. But the union of 19. with 17. begot some slight touches in 21 from R. It would seem from 9. 46<sup>31</sup> that the initiative in sending for Jacob, according to J, lay with Joseph: E also ascribes the gift of wagons to him 21<sup>27</sup>; the references to Pharaoh, therefore, in 21 and 46<sup>5</sup> must be later editorial interpretations of Joseph's action.

46<sup>1a</sup> This clause is probably due to the editor who combined J and E. In 37<sup>14</sup> (J) Israel seems to be living in Hebron: while E 46<sup>5</sup> apparently regards Beer-sheba as his home. 1b seems the sequel of the vision in 3., and is therefore placed after 4.

points to a writer familiar with P, but also acquainted with other documents besides; and the list will belong to the group of later materials designated as P<sup>3</sup> cp Intro XIII 10.

* Strack has pointed out a curious instance of artificial arrangement. Leah's descendants number thirty-two without Dinah while Rachel has fourteen. The numbers for the corresponding handmaids are halved, Zilpah having sixteen and Bilhah seven. See Genesis (in Kurzgef Comm) 149.

13 The account of the progress of the famine, leading up to the explanation of Egyptian fiscal arrangements in 28, has seemed to some critics out of place here. Wellhausen finds it appropriate neither to J nor E in its present connexion and suggests that it was derived originally from some parallel to 41. Others more confidently attach it to 41<sup>50</sup>. It is supposed that the second year 18 would then fit the date in 45<sup>6</sup> 11. The marks of J's authorship are, however, numerous, cp the margins, and the parallels especially in 18, 24<sup>1</sup>. Yet one or two peculiarities, at least, may be detected: thus the word 'give' 15 is used with an object as in 29<sup>11</sup> 30<sup>1</sup> E, contrasted with J's employment of it as an interjection cp 164: and the phrase 'the famine was sore' 20 is identical with that in 41<sup>56</sup>. These instances are hardly adequate to support a plea for E's presence when the text shows none of the incongruities of a composite narrative: but the possibility of it must at any rate be admitted, though further proof seems wanting (Holzinger thinks the probability especially strong in 19–26). The references to 'the land of Canaan' 13–15 can hardly have belonged originally to the narrative which related how the soil of Egypt was gradually bought up for Pharaoh, and must be assigned to R.

29 The manner of the oath exacted by Israel from Joseph presents an unmistakable parallel to that demanded by Abraham from his servant 24<sup>2</sup>, and is unanimously assigned to J.

48<sup>1</sup> With the exception of 3-7 which is at once recognized as belonging to P, this chapter presents several perplexities. The burial-oath in 47<sup>29-31</sup> is the preparation for the funeral solemnities of 50<sup>1-10</sup>, but before the narrative of Israel's death both J and E seem to have included a special blessing on

Joseph's house. Two blessings are here recorded <sup>15</sup>, and <sup>20</sup>, one being pronounced on 'the lads' <sup>18</sup>, the other being uttered in the singular 'in thee' <sup>20</sup>. Moreover, the two sons of Joseph are twice 'brought near' to their grandfather <sup>10b</sup> and <sup>13b</sup>. The narrative therefore shows signs of composition from two sources. In 48<sup>1-2a</sup> the indications point slightly to E, while <sup>2b</sup> is obviously connected with <sup>47</sup><sup>31</sup>. At <sup>8</sup> the reappearance of the name 'Israel' suggests J once more; but the statement that Israel 'saw' Joseph's sons conflicts with 'could not see' <sup>10</sup>, and it appears better therefore to attribute the clause to E, the use of 'Israel' for 'Jacob' being due to R cp <sup>11</sup> <sup>21</sup>. The sequel of <sup>9b</sup> <sup>10a</sup> is found in <sup>13</sup>, where Joseph fulfils the injunction of <sup>9b</sup>, while <sup>11</sup> belongs to <sup>8</sup> <sup>2a</sup>. The action of <sup>12</sup>, where Joseph removes his sons from Jacob's embrace, presupposes <sup>10b</sup>, while he reverently prepares to receive his father's blessing himself. The incident in <sup>13</sup>, <sup>17-19</sup> has been regarded by Kuenen as a later insertion in E's narrative: but these verses are entirely coherent with the passage previously assigned to J, and the marginal references confirm the ascription. <sup>7a</sup> This verse has no connexion with the prophecy about Ephraim and Manasseh. In its present form it depends on <sup>35</sup><sup>19</sup>. It has been conjectured that a reference to Rachel may have followed <sup>49</sup><sup>31</sup>. If P supposed Rachel to have been buried with Leah at Machpelah, the discrepancy, when JE was combined with it, may have been too glaring, and the present passage may have been inserted editorially, based on the older document.

<sup>15</sup> 5 them. A confusion seems to have arisen in the combination of the two stories. According to <sup>9b</sup> Israel desires to bless his grandchildren, and Joseph brings them to him <sup>13</sup>. It would be natural for the blessing to follow, and it is found accordingly in <sup>15</sup>, cp 'walk' <sup>24</sup><sup>40</sup>, the references to the fathers cp <sup>28</sup><sup>13</sup>, the phrases 'all my life long,' 'grow into a multitude,' and the general prophetic character. But in <sup>20</sup> another blessing is pronounced on 'them,' yet it is delivered in the singular, 'in thee.' It would seem that this is the benediction on Joseph cp <sup>15</sup>, for which preparation was made as he prostrated himself to receive it <sup>12</sup>. In J, therefore, the blessing on 'the lads' has been accidentally transferred to Joseph: in E the benediction on Joseph alights upon his sons. The critical difficulty would perhaps be most easily settled by transposing the two introductions <sup>15a</sup> and <sup>20a</sup>.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it <sup>a'</sup>displeased him: and he <sup>b'</sup>held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head. 18 And Joseph said unto his father, <sup>c'</sup>Not so, my father: for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head. 19 And his father refused, and said, I know [it], my son, I know [it]: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: <sup>d'</sup>howbeit his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become <sup>a</sup>a multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, <sup>a</sup>In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh. 21 And Israel said unto Joseph, <sup>e'</sup>Behold, I die: but God shall be <sup>f'</sup>with you, and <sup>f'</sup>bring you again unto the <sup>g'</sup>land of your fathers. 22 Moreover I have given to thee one <sup>a</sup>portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the <sup>a</sup>Amorite with my <sup>h'</sup>sword and with my bow<sup>h'</sup>.

...1<sup>b</sup> And [he] said: <sup>b</sup>Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall <sup>c</sup>befall you <sup>a</sup>in the latter days.

2 ndAssemble yourselves, and hear, ye sons of Jacob;
And hearken unto Israel your father.

3 Reuben, thou art my <sup>a</sup>firstborn, my <sup>f</sup>might, and the <sup>a</sup>beginning of my <sup>g</sup>strength;

Because thou wentest up to thy <sup>k</sup>father's bed:

Then defiledst thou it: he went up to my <sup>i</sup>couch.

5 <sup>LM</sup>Simeon and Levi are brethren;

Weapons of violence are their <sup>j</sup>swords.

I will divide them in Jacob,

And <sup>a</sup>scatter them in Israel.

8 Judah, thee shall thy brethren <sup>a</sup>praise:

Thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies;

Thy father's sons shall bow down before thee.

9 Judah is a <sup>w</sup>lion's whelp;

From the <sup>x</sup>prey, my son, thou art gone up:

He <sup>v</sup>stooped down, he <sup>z</sup>couched as a lion,

And as a lioness; who shall rouse him up?

22 M Or, mountain slope, § shechem, shoulder.—A reference to the future home of the tribe of Ephraim. The representation in 33<sup>19</sup> implies peaceful acquisition and not conquest. Kuenen has suggested that the text should read as in Josh 24<sup>12</sup> 'not with my sword nor with my bow,' the negative being omitted by the editor to harmonize with the story in 34, in which, however, E's share is doubtful.

49<sup>1a</sup> This clause seems to have formed part of P's recital of Jacob's last instructions to his sons, cp the sequence 'called to' 'blessed' 28<sup>b</sup>, 'charged' 29, with the identical series 28<sup>1</sup>. J, however, must also have had some introduction.

1<sup>b</sup> Perhaps a gloss; cp Stärk, ZATW 1891, 251, on the other hand, Cheyne, Introd to the Book of Isaiah 11<sup>2</sup>.

49<sup>28</sup> These clauses, in P's manner, seem due to the compiler, who has incorporated the previous poem from JE. With the subsequent instructions for burial at 47<sup>29-31</sup>, and cp 50<sup>12b</sup> 13.

31 It has been suggested that P here added the name of Rachel cp 48<sup>7N</sup>.

33b A touch probably incorporated by R from J's account of the death of Jacob cp 47<sup>31</sup> 48<sup>2</sup>.

50<sup>1</sup> The narrative of the mourning for Israel is studded with the characteristic phrases of J. This does not exclude the possibility of the incorporation of touches from E; but the indications adduced by Holzinger (10<sup>b</sup> cp 3<sup>b</sup> and 10<sup>a</sup>, and the two clauses in 2) are not very strong. The recital of the oath in 5 reproduces 47<sup>29</sup>, ct 49<sup>29</sup>..

12 The conclusion of P's narrative of Jacob, following 49<sup>29-33</sup>.

15 The petition of Joseph's brethren for forgiveness appears in the main to be derived from E cp 19. But it may be questioned whether the story is quite homogeneous. The opening of 16 יִצְחָק can hardly be correct; the same verb occurs

17 This verse shows some signs of combination. P's usual formula is 'be fruitful and multiply,' but he also employs the verb 'to swarm.' On the other hand he does not use the verb 'wax mighty' or the derivative adjective, save in Num 32<sup>1</sup> (probably founded on earlier materials). The verb is found in <sup>20</sup> and in Gen 26<sup>16*</sup>; the adjective in <sup>9</sup> Gen 18<sup>18</sup> Num 14<sup>12</sup> 22<sup>6</sup> (as well as seven times in D). But J must have related

(2) Side by side with these variations of theological conception are corresponding historical differences. According to J Gen 45<sup>10</sup> 46<sup>28</sup> 47<sup>27a</sup> Israel is settled in Goshen, and this view is found in 8<sup>22</sup> 9<sup>26</sup>. As a pastoral people their flocks and herds Gen 46<sup>32</sup> 47<sup>1</sup> 50<sup>8</sup> are of the utmost importance to them 10<sup>9</sup>. 24 12<sup>32</sup> 38. Their men are 600,000 in number, beside women and children; and Pharaoh takes 'his people' 13<sup>6</sup> in pursuit of them. But in E Gen 46<sup>18</sup> and P Gen 47<sup>11</sup> the Israelites settle in Egypt. There they are accordingly found in close proximity with Egyptian neighbours, from whom they can ask for valuables 32<sup>2</sup> 11<sup>2</sup>, or from whose houses they must carefully distinguish their own that Yahweh may pass over them 12<sup>13</sup>. They are near enough to the capital for the king to communicate with the Hebrew midwives, and few enough to need only two 15<sup>6</sup>.; while Pharaoh thinks 600 chariots sufficient for their capture on the march 14<sup>7a</sup>.

(3) The story of Moses further shows some interesting variations. In 2<sup>15</sup> he dwells in the land of Midian, and 16<sup>21</sup> marries the daughter of the priest of Midian and has one son 21. cp 4<sup>19</sup>. When he returns to Egypt his wife and son accompany him 4<sup>20</sup>. In 3<sup>1</sup>, however, his father in law is named Jethro cp 4<sup>18</sup>, and Moses leads the flock to the mountain of God, identified as Horeb cp 'this mountain' 12. On his return to Egypt his wife remains behind, and when Jethro brings her to her husband she has two sons 18<sup>6</sup>; later on, she is described as a Cushite, Num 12<sup>1</sup>.

(6) Different laws will be found in 12 and 13 concern-

be strictly rendered 'and took the daughter of Levi.' Either the name of the future mother of Moses has dropped out accidentally; or it has been omitted designedly on account of divergence from the definite statements of P; or the words 'the daughter of Levi' have been editorially inserted instead of the more common formula 'a wife of the daughters of Levi' to harmonize with Num 26<sup>59</sup> (cp Dillmann).

<sup>6</sup> The use of the second word 'babe' and the further phrase 'had compassion' has suggested to some critics (Wellhausen, Dillmann, Bacon, among them) that this clause is derived from a parallel narrative by J.

<sup>11</sup> Many critics assign 11-14 or 11-15a to E. The indications are slight, but the balance seems in favour of J.

<sup>15</sup> The words 'dwelt' and 'sat down' are the same  $\S$ , and this awkward repetition is perhaps to be explained out of the amalgamation of different stories. (§ attempts to mitigate it by rendering 'and dwelt in the land of Midian, and having come into the land of Midian he sat down on the well.'

place. The compiler may have transferred it as a suitable connecting link with the summary of P<sup>23b-25</sup>, the continuation of 1<sup>19</sup>. But it is also possible that 23a rightfully follows 22 and that 4<sup>19</sup>, 24-26 stood in immediate sequence with it. The death of the king, in this view, was the immediate cause of Moses' return. The strange incident in 4<sup>24-26</sup> seems better placed before the great commission in 3<sup>16</sup>., for why should Yahweh seek to kill the leader to whom he has entrusted the deliverance of Israel? According to this arrangement, adopted by Bacon and Battersby, the revelation in the bush took place on the journey back, or in Goshen.

31<sup>a</sup> All three documents J E P related the divine commission to Moses to deliver the Israelites. In E and P this is combined with a solemn revelation of God by the name of Yahweh (cp Introd i 112 and 121). P's account is postponed till 62... but E's narrative has been amalgamated with J's. The main elements of the united product can be separated by the usual criteria. But the importance of this crisis in the career of Moses for the subsequent history of Israel has apparently begotten a variety of editorial amplifications, designed partly to prepare the way for the great struggle between Moses and Pharaoh, partly to introduce Aaron, and partly to bring conflicting details into harmony. In the process of compilation each document, it would seem, has suffered excision and curtailment, and it is probable that some passages have been dislocated from their original setting and transposed cp 2<sup>23N</sup>. The general justification of the analysis will be found in the margins.

3<sup>1b</sup> Some critics think that according to E the father in law of Moses was not himself priest. If so, these words must be regarded as a harmonistic addition cp 2<sup>18N</sup>.

1<sup>c</sup> Possibly an editorial explanation; 5 has 'mount Horeb' as in 3<sup>5</sup> cp 17<sup>6</sup>.

4<sup>a</sup> T And when Yahweh saw . . . God called. 5 runs literally 'And Yahweh saw . . . and God called . . . and he said.' 4<sup>a</sup> may thus quite well introduce 5, while 4<sup>b</sup> opens E's theophany.

4<sup>b</sup> 5 as in 2 may be rendered 'a' or 'the.' If the latter rendering be preferred, these words must be regarded as R's addition (so Bacon). But both J and E may quite well have preserved the same detail: cp E's reference in Deut 33<sup>16</sup>.

certainly the air of additions. In the present passage the phrases 'good land' 'flowing with milk and honey' have a Deuteronomistic sound. On the other hand, the phraseology of D cannot be wholly new; it must have had some basis in prior usage; and it would be natural that the earlier writers should use sparingly and on the most solemn occasions a terminology which had already become traditional: moreover, the term 'place' is not found again in this connexion, but cp JE 6<sup>5</sup>. The repetition in 17 (inverting the order of the clauses) is more likely to be due to R. 5 in both passages adds 'the Girgashite,' thus bringing the list up to the Deuteronomistic 'seven' Deut 7<sup>1</sup>. Cp Holzinger, Eintl 483.

9<sup>b</sup> 5 = and also, apparently an editorial connexion, 9<sup>b</sup> being a duplicate of 7.

11 Each narrative describes the reluctance of Moses to undertake the difficult task of the liberation of Israel, cp J 4<sup>10</sup> ., P 6<sup>12</sup> 7<sup>1</sup>.

14<sup>a</sup> At this point E discloses for the first time the name Yahweh. But the real answer to the question in 13 is contained in 15. The form employed in 14<sup>b</sup> is never employed elsewhere, and 14 appears to be a later insertion designed to explain the divine name Yahweh which is here connected with the verb hayah 'to be.' The two answers are editorially linked by the particle rendered moreover (= 'again' Gen 4<sup>25</sup> 35<sup>9</sup>).

14<sup>b</sup> M Or, I AM, BECAUSE I AM. Or, I AM WHO AM. Or, I WILL BE THAT I WILL BE. 14<sup>c</sup> M Or, I WILL BE, 5 Ehyeh.

316 This phrase coinciding with that in 15 cp 13 may be due to the harmonizer, but cp 4<sup>5</sup>.

19 These verses do not seem in their present form to belong either to J or to E. Not to J because (1) they interrupt the connexion between 316-18 and 41, and (2) they contain distinct literary marks of E, 'give you leave' 18, and the peculiar infinitive 'to go' 5 119<sup>8</sup>. Yet on the other hand the phrase 'by a mighty hand' does not belong to E, but tends to appear in passages kindred with D cp D80<sup>b</sup>: for 'wonders' cp 34<sup>10</sup>. The passage seems to have been amplified from E by R<sup>16</sup>.

21 These instructions must obviously belong to the narrator who regards the Israelites as settled, not apart in the land of Goshen, but among the Egyptians themselves cp 7<sup>28</sup>.

42 The rod was one of the ancient elements of the tradition. Here it is represented as the shepherd's staff which was naturally in Moses' hands, and it becomes the medium of the display of the divine power to him. In E it is apparently given him by God 17, and consequently bears the name 'rod of God' 20<sup>b</sup> (cp 'mountain of God'): as such, it is the instrument with which Moses achieves the wonders 7<sup>20b</sup> 9<sup>23</sup> 10<sup>13</sup>. P transfers the rod to Aaron, and supplies a different occasion for its conversion into a serpent cp 7<sup>8-13</sup>. J's story of the signs seems to be considerably abbreviated. It is not made clear from 1-8 that the signs are to be repeated for the persuasion of the incredulous Israelites; but this becomes plain from 9 cp 30. 8 may have read originally 'if they will not believe the first sign, neither hearken to thy voice.'

3 M. J. nahash.—Cp 206 and ct 7<sup>9</sup>.

9 A reference to a third sign which has become in E and P the basis of one of the plagues, no longer designed for the assurance of the Israelites, but for the punishment of Pharaoh cp E 7<sup>15</sup> 17<sup>b</sup> 20<sup>b</sup>, P 7<sup>19</sup>.

13 In 13-16 it is not apparent in what way the anger of Yahweh expresses itself against the reluctance of Moses. It is believed, therefore, that this is really a later insertion to prepare for the introduction of Aaron, for whom a place had to be found in the story. The want of uniformity in his appearances, the curious alternation between plural and singular verbs in the immediate context of his entry into the narrative (cp 8<sup>12</sup> 12<sup>a</sup> 25 28 9<sup>27</sup> 10<sup>16</sup> 17<sup>b</sup> with 8<sup>9</sup> 12<sup>b</sup> 29 9<sup>33</sup> 10<sup>7a</sup> 18), and the fact that in the earliest extant account of the sanctuary he had no function, Joshua being the servitor of Moses in the Tent of Meeting Ex 33<sup>11</sup>, render it probable that the passages narrating his activity are all secondary as compared with the original J. The description of Aaron as 'the Levite' (in the sense of priest) on whom devolves the duty of proclaiming to the people the divine teaching, points in the same direction; cf 18<sup>20</sup>. where Moses is himself the giver of teaching (torah). Cornill ascribes his appearance here, as well as in 27. 29, and the rest of the passages in 5-10 to R<sup>P</sup>, cp Num 1<sup>N</sup>. But this seems to overlook the parallel in 6<sup>12</sup> 7<sup>1</sup>, which cannot be regarded as the source of 4<sup>13</sup>. The passage is therefore viewed as secondary in J but older than P.

14 This passage is certainly related to 27. But it can hardly be by the same writer (Bacon), for it implies that Aaron has already started, whereas according to 27 he has not yet received the divine command to join Moses in the wilderness. It seems better, therefore, to regard it as a sign of editorial preparation, introduced by the connecting link 'and also.' Its removal improves the connexion of 14<sup>a</sup> and 15.

17 Cp 2<sup>N</sup> and 20 7<sup>15b</sup> 17<sup>b</sup> 20<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>23</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> 14<sup>16</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> 9. Dillmann conjectures that the pronoun 'this' is due to R replacing 'rod of God' as in 20<sup>b</sup>. But the passage seems rather to indicate a gift on the part of God (like the stone tables). The 'signs' are probably not to be interpreted of those recounted in 2-3; they are those to be hereafter performed against Pharaoh. In that case the passages in E preparing Moses for the resistance of Pharaoh have been set aside in the process of uniting J and E.

18 M  $\S$  Jether.

19 According to 3<sup>16</sup> Moses has already received instructions to return, so that in the original narrative of J this passage may have preceded the theophany in 3<sup>2</sup>. now combined with E. It is suggested, therefore, that it followed 2<sup>23a</sup>.

20 J has only related the birth of one son 2<sup>22</sup>, and 25 implies that there was no second. The plural seems to be an editorial reference to 18<sup>2-4</sup>.

21<sup>a</sup> The commission to Moses in this passage may be founded upon older elements, but its place here is due to R, who has attached it to 19-20 with the echoing phrase 'when thou goest to return into Egypt'; the word 'wonders' recurs later in P cp Deut 4<sup>34</sup> &c. The message to Pharaoh in 22. is never repeated, and if the passage is not to be assigned to editorial preparation, it must have been transposed from some later scene, such as the beginning of 11<sup>4</sup> (Dillm 10<sup>28</sup>).

24 The story in 24-26 has many peculiar features. The sudden and unexpected intervention of Yahweh, the perplexing silence concerning its cause and purpose especially after the great task just assigned to Moses, the remedy adopted by Zipporah, her archaic use of the flint knife, and the obscurity of her utterance—these are all marks of great antiquity. The source from which the incident has been drawn, prior to its incorporation in J, cannot be determined; its interpretation belongs to the history of circumcision.

425 M § made it touch.—Cp 12<sup>22</sup> = strike.

26 M Or, A bridegroom of blood in regard of the circumcision. Cp 13<sup>n</sup>. The text of RV ascribes the performance of the signs to Aaron. But this is certainly not contemplated in 1-9, nor is it suggested in 13-16. The original subject of 'did' (§ he did) must be Moses; and the present form of the verse must result from the later redaction.

51 J and E appear both to have related the demand made by Moses on behalf of the Israelites for the royal permission to depart, and the opening of 5 seems to contain material from each source. Thus 3 is a doublet of 1 and 5 of 4; 3 is easily identified with J (see the margins) and 1-4, therefore, fall most naturally to E. The place of Aaron in the original narrative is doubtful cp 41<sup>3n</sup>; according to J the petition of Moses was to be supported by the elders 31<sup>b</sup>. It has been suggested that the plea alleged in the latter part of 1 may be due to E, who seeks to bring E into accord with J. In 13<sup>17-19</sup> a special reason is assigned why the Israelites did not march to Canaan by the shortest route from the south-west, but in 31<sup>2</sup> a visit to the sacred mountain is already contemplated, and 1<sup>b</sup> is not, therefore, out of harmony with E. The story in 5-23 seems to be all of one piece, and the linguistic indications point to J rather than E.

6 The reference to the 'officers' 6 10 seems to be an editorial anticipation of 14 where they are first described.

6 Driver, LOT 151, ascribes 6-8 to Ph (cp Introd XIII 87 i 145). The chief linguistic support for this attribution is probably to be found in the formula 'I am Yahweh.' But this appears sufficiently explained as the repetition of the revelation in 2. There do not seem any other distinctive marks of Ph: and the words 'redeem' 6 'judgements' 6 with the phrases of 7 seem rather to belong to Ps. The parallels with Ezekiel deserve attention. It may further be remarked that 3-5 would be very incomplete without some hint of the mode by which the divine promise would be carried out. Reminiscences of J may be found in 'burdens' and 'deliver' 6.

1 M Or, impatience, 5 shortness of spirit.—54.

13 The text in this passage seems to be a later amalgam. The answer of Yahweh to the question of Moses 12, is not delivered until 71, where the way is prepared for it by the repetition of the dialogue 28-30. The intervening matter is by no means homogeneous. Only three tribes are catalogued, Reuben, Simeon, and Levi. The first two 14 15 have their brief counterparts in Gen 463. The treatment of Levi is much fuller 16-25, and is apparently designed to introduce Aaron and Moses, of whose descent nothing has as yet been said. Bacon regards this passage as original to P, and proposes to attach it to 15. It is no doubt full of P's phrases, but the detail seems unequal; 21. interrupts the family history of Amram; and the fragments cannot be said to be harmoniously welded together, or to form a suitable transition from the compact summary of 11-5 to the subsequent narrative of the bondage of Israel and the revelation of Yahweh. They must be assigned in their present connexion to the secondary elements of P. It is noteworthy that nothing is said of the wife of Moses; did P find the

Other items of linguistic usage will be found noted in the margins. The narrative of J shows occasional signs of expansion in the hortatory manner already noticed in Genesis cp 810<sup>b</sup> 22b 914-16 29b 101<sup>b</sup> 2. It is also probable that the part here played by Aaron is due to later remodelling rather than to the original story cp 413<sup>8</sup>.

14<sup>a</sup> The miracle of the water is the only 'sign' which seems to have been narrated by all three writers J E P prior to the death of the firstborn, and the compiler has attempted to weld the accounts together. But the narratives are not founded on the same conception, and the result is obviously not homogeneous. In 17<sup>b</sup> it is predicted that the waters in the River (<sup>h</sup>or), when struck with the rod of Moses, shall be turned into blood, the term <sup>h</sup>or being regularly applied to the Nile. But in 19 a fresh command is given to Moses to instruct Aaron to stretch out his rod over the waters of Egypt, which include not only the <sup>h</sup>or but every drop from the 'streams' (<sup>h</sup>orim) down to the liquid already standing in the household stores. Plainly 19 20<sup>a</sup> 21<sup>b</sup> 22 belong to the series inaugurated by 7<sup>8-13</sup> cp 7<sup>8N</sup>. The remaining narrative is still composite. The criteria already enumerated in 7<sup>8N</sup> show that 16-17<sup>a</sup> belongs to J. In the formula 'Thus saith Yahweh . . . Behold I will smite,' Yahweh is obviously the subject of the verb cp 81. 20. 913 18 10<sup>3</sup>, and it is plain from 25 that the writer conceived of Yahweh as himself smiting the river, with the result that the fish died 18 21, and the Egyptians could not drink the water. But if 17<sup>a</sup> belongs to J, the continuation must be drawn from another source, for Yahweh did not himself wield the rod. This can be no other than E cp 7<sup>8N</sup>. This rod Moses has already been directed to take in his hand 19; with this he smote the waters in the River 20<sup>b</sup>, and they were turned to blood (ct 19 'become'). In combining the two narratives R has altered the pronoun 'thine' cp 9<sup>22</sup> 10<sup>12</sup> 21 to 'mine,' as the verb (now assigned to Moses as subject) required the first person. The nature of the change in the river produced by Yahweh, according to J, is not stated. But there is nothing to imply that it consisted in conversion into blood. Nothing, indeed, need have happened to the water at all. Yahweh's power is sufficiently shown in the mysterious death of the fish, which would suffice to pollute the sacred stream, and render it undrinkable. Why, then, should R have united this story of J with the very different incident of E? Because J's reference to the transformation of the Nile waters belonged to another part of the cycle, and could not be utilized here. In 4<sup>9</sup> Moses is directed to convince his countrymen by taking water out of the river, and pouring it out on the dry soil, when it would become blood. Whether this was actually wrought among the signs which he did before them according to 4<sup>30</sup>, is not stated. But it creates a presumption that J's view of the transaction was limited to a display of the power of Moses before Israel, when the water affected was not the whole river (E), still less every particle in the entire country (P), but only the contents of a vessel which could be emptied on the ground. In the process of compilation, however, these elements were no longer discriminated, and J's account of the death of the fish found its natural explanation in amalgamation with E's independent account of the change of the Nile-stream into blood before Pharaoh and his court. A final harmonistic effort 15 identified the 'rod of God' which was expressly given to Moses for the purpose of working the signs (E) 4<sup>17</sup> 20<sup>b</sup>, with his own shepherd's staff (J) which had been turned into a snake 4<sup>2</sup>. . .

these affirmations of the unqualified sovereignty of Yahweh to the history of Hebrew monotheism would involve inquiries which cannot be undertaken here: but it may be pointed out that the formula 'know that I am Yahweh' 7<sup>17</sup> 10<sup>2b</sup> coincides with the frequent phrase of P, e.g. 7<sup>5</sup> cp 179<sup>b</sup>. Extremely rare elsewhere Deut 29<sup>5</sup> 1 Kings 20<sup>13</sup> 28, unrepresented in the earlier prophetic literature it suddenly becomes one of the catchwords of Ezekiel who employs it more than sixty times. Its occurrence in 7<sup>17</sup> is rendered more suspicious by the contrast of the pronoun directly following (אני for אֲנִי). But cp Driver, Deut 321.

Egypt, and shall be a 'boil 'breaking forth with 'blains upon man and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt. <sup>10</sup> And they took 'ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses 'sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast. <sup>11</sup> And the 'magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boils were upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians. <sup>12</sup> And 'Yahweh 'hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he 'hearkened not unto them; as Yahweh had spoken unto Moses.

<sup>13</sup> 'And Yahweh said unto Moses, 'Rise up early in the morning, and 'stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, 'Thus saith Yahweh, the God of the Hebrews, 'Let my people go, that they may serve me. <sup>14</sup> For I will 'this time send all my 'plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou mayest 'know that there is none like me in all the earth. <sup>15</sup> For now I had put forth my hand, and smitten thee and thy people with 'pestilence, and thou hadst been 'cut off from the earth: <sup>16</sup> 'but in very deed 'for this cause have I made thee to stand, 'for to shew thee my power, and that my name may be 'declared throughout all the earth. <sup>17</sup> As 'yet 'exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt 'not let them go? <sup>18</sup> Behold, 'to-morrow 'about this time I will 'cause it to rain a very 'grievous hail, 'such as hath not been in Egypt since the day it was founded even until now.

<sup>19</sup> 'Now therefore send, 'hasten in thy 'cattle and all that thou hast in the field; [for] every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

<sup>22</sup> 'And Yahweh said unto Moses, 'Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every 'herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt. <sup>23a</sup> And Moses 'stretched forth his 'rod toward heaven: and Yahweh sent thunder and hail, and fire ran down unto the earth.

<sup>24b</sup> very 'grievous, 'such as had not been in all the land of Egypt 'since it became a nation.

<sup>25a</sup> and the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast.

<sup>25b</sup> And the hail smote every 'herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field. <sup>26</sup> Only in the land of 'Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail. <sup>27</sup> And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, 'I have sinned 'this time: Yahweh is righteous, and I and my people are wicked. <sup>28</sup> 'Intreat Yahweh; for there hath upon beast throughout the land of Egypt,' it becomes plain that this passage cannot proceed from the writer of <sup>6</sup>. For the general reasons for assigning it to E cp 7<sup>8x</sup>. The phrase 'and upon every herb of the field' seems due to the harmonist, as it is used regularly by J cp 20<sup>b</sup>, whereas E writes 'herb of the land' 10<sup>12</sup>. In <sup>23a</sup> 'sent thunder and hail' is an obvious duplicate of J's 'rained hail'; the reference to 'fire' is resumed in <sup>24a</sup>, and <sup>22</sup> finds its sequel in <sup>26</sup>. The source of <sup>31</sup>. cannot be decided with certainty, and critics differ in their ascription. The explanation seems needless after the general statement of <sup>25b</sup>; on the other hand it may be said to prepare the way for 10<sup>12</sup>. And it is not out of harmony with E's general familiarity with matters Egyptian.

9<sup>12</sup> M 5 made strong.—Cp 7<sup>13</sup>.

<sup>19</sup> According to 9<sup>6</sup> 'the cattle of Egypt' are already all dead, and in <sup>25b</sup>, consequently, the destructive effect of the hail is limited to trees and herbs. The prediction of the death of the cattle which should be exposed to the storm, must therefore be regarded as an editorial afterthought in reference to <sup>25a</sup>. The passage which follows <sup>20</sup>. seems in like manner to be an annotation, without any strict sequence, founded on the desire to mitigate the severity of the divine judgement in the case of pious heathen. On the phrase 'word of Yahweh' cp Gen 15<sup>1</sup>.

is supplied instead in terms which seem to show affinities with Deuteronomic phraseology. The message, however, is obviously contained in 3-6. It is worthy of note that Sam here reads (after 2) 'and say unto him, Thus saith Yahweh . . . unto this day,' while it then appends 3-6 as in 5. This is an interesting if naïf attempt to restore the divine word to its usual place in J's scheme of narrative. The present arrangement seems due to two causes, (1) a dislocation of text caused by the insertion of 1b-2, and (2) the statement in the sequel 6 'he turned and went out from Pharaoh.' This was required for the subsequent development of the story. But it implied the presence of Moses before the king. To secure that, <sup>35a</sup> seems to have been introduced; the editor forgetting that while he brought Moses and Aaron in to the audience, only Moses came out.

<sup>14</sup> In this passage the previous instructions for a particular crisis are converted into a perpetual institution. Other instances of the same kind are probably to be traced elsewhere. The permanent law may be viewed as secondary, compared with the original occasion. P's account of the smiting of the firstborn has apparently been omitted in favour of J's 29.; it may have been withdrawn at this point to make room for the legislative ordinances in the following sections 14-20 21-27.

12<sup>21a</sup> T Then. In 21-27 there are traces of different hands blended into one editorial complex. The opening and closing formulae seem to belong to J cp 31<sup>6</sup> 4<sup>29</sup> 31; and much of 21b-23 may also be due to him (ct 2<sup>2</sup> and 7), though it may be questioned how far the implication that the Israelites were mixed up with the Egyptians can be ascribed to the original J who places them apart in Goshen. But several touches are best explained by later editorial redaction, as 'according to your families' 21, and some of the detail and repetition in 22; on the other hand 'the destroyer' 23 seems here an agent as in 2 Sam 24<sup>16</sup>, 24 appears to belong to P as the close of 14-20. With the forms of 25-27a cp 13<sup>5</sup> 8 10 14 Deut 6<sup>50</sup> &c; and for the entire passage Deut 16<sup>1-8</sup>. The absence of any reference to the sprinkling of the blood in D has led some critics to ascribe the whole ordinance as here enjoined to a later date. D, however, forbids the slaughter of the passover in the homestead, and transfers it to the central sanctuary, where the threshold ritual was no longer appropriate.

28 The sequel of the commands for immediate action 1-13.

31 This passage has been sometimes deemed inconsistent with the declaration of Moses 10<sup>29</sup> that he would not see Pharaoh again. But there is a difference between seeking an audience to demand leave to depart or to threaten chastisement, and response to the urgent summons of the stricken king.

35 These verses seem to be an editorial addition founded on 3<sup>22</sup> and 11<sup>3</sup>. The last words of 36 may possibly be original.

12<sup>37</sup> Cp Num 11<sup>21</sup>. It is however possible that the number is due to the harmonist, bringing the story into accord with the detailed scheme of P.

<sup>40</sup> These verses seem to be a later insertion in P. The date in <sup>40</sup> cannot be harmonized with the genealogical representations in <sup>13</sup>, according to which the Exodus took place in the fourth generation from Jacob. The efforts made to overcome the difficulty in the Greek and Samaritan texts, as well as elsewhere, show what continuous attention was bestowed upon the passage.

original address of Moses began in <sup>4</sup>, and the basis of <sup>4-8</sup> may be ascribed to J (in <sup>8</sup> 'because' בְּכַלּוֹתָּ pleads strongly for J, as it is nowhere used by D). It is probable, however, that the passage has been amplified from a simpler original, the nucleus of which is found in <sup>4-8</sup>. The phraseology in <sup>5</sup> is of a secondary type: <sup>7</sup> shows rather the style of a hortatory expander, anxious to supply a historical basis for an ancient institution, originally ordained in J's covenant-words Ex 34<sup>18</sup>. But in <sup>9</sup> (cp <sup>16</sup>) the phraseology of D is again prominent, yet with a difference; the phrases 'be for a sign and a memorial' point to RP, and the remarkable expression concerning 'the law of Yahweh' which occurs nowhere else in the Hex, points to a very late type of phraseology, having its true analogue not in the only two passages where the words occur in the prophetic canon, but in still later books Ezr 7<sup>10</sup> Neh 9<sup>3</sup> 10<sup>29</sup> 2 Chron 12<sup>1</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> 34<sup>14</sup> (signs of still further addition may be seen in 5<sup>8</sup> 'Yahweh God,' 11 'Yahweh thy God'). In <sup>11</sup> the style of <sup>5</sup> is again prominent, introducing <sup>12</sup>, the greater part of which is borrowed from 34<sup>10</sup>, the remarkable word 'cause to pass over' probably indicating the later adaptation. The work of the amplifier is manifest again in <sup>14-16</sup>, perhaps on a basis of J cp <sup>15</sup>.

16 M Or, hardened himself against letting us go.

17 The triple narrative of the plagues raises the presumption that the passage of the Red Sea was also related by all the three documents J, E, and P. Diversities of matter and form do in fact show that the existing account is composite, but whereas the shares of J and P are practically complete, E's version is but scantily preserved. The opening section describing the beginning of the march <sup>17-19</sup> is naturally assigned to him in virtue of the use of the name Elohim (perhaps in his original source), and the reference to the transport of Joseph's mummy. But fresh elements enter directly after, a brief extract from P's itinerary <sup>20</sup>, and J's account of the divine guidance <sup>21</sup>. (see notes). The formulae of 14<sup>1</sup>. 4 identify these verses with P, and 4 finds its natural continuation in 8. The phrases of 4 'make strong the heart' 'get me honour' and 'his host' reappear in 17, closely connected with 16, in which Moses is commanded to stretch out his hand over the sea and divide it, that the Israelites may pass through on 'dry ground.' This is achieved in 21ac; in 22 the Israelites march across cp 16b, and the Egyptian host of chariots and horsemen enter in pursuit 18 28.

Under similar monition Moses stretches out his hand again over the sea <sup>26</sup> 27a, the waters return and the 'host' with its chariots and horsemen is engulfed <sup>28</sup>. The narrative is throughout compact and coherent, and serves as the base into which other materials have been fitted. Thus the preparations of Pharaoh for pursuit are related independently in 14<sup>b</sup>, while 7 points to additional detail from yet another source. The language of 10-14 finds no echo in P but presents all the characteristics of JE, and especially of J: while in 16 the rod of Moses and in 19 the angel of Elohim show the presence of E. The divine method of making the sea 'dry land' 21b (ct 16 22 5) through the agency of an east wind, has no relation to the outstretched hand of Moses or the cleavage of the waters into two solid walls; but it bears a close analogy to the similar instrumentality in 10<sup>13</sup>. Some of the details of adjustment between J E and R necessarily remain doubtful: a summary of E's original narrative will be found in Josh 24.

7 After Pharaoh has already collected his forces in <sup>6</sup>, the statement that he took six hundred chosen chariots can hardly proceed from the same writer. The words and all the chariots of Egypt are again incongruous with <sup>7a</sup>. <sup>8</sup> reads 'and all the horse': if this reading be adopted, the two terms harmonize with Josh 24<sup>9</sup>: if the <sup>8</sup> text be retained, the words must be treated as a gloss, or allotted to J (interpreting 'chariot' in <sup>6</sup> as singular).

 15<sup>b</sup> The existing narrative contains no appeal from Moses to Yahweh unless it is implied in 10<sup>b</sup>. But a later passage 17<sup>a</sup> contains a similar incident, assigned with much probability to E; and the indication that E has been employed immediately after 'and lift thou up thy rod' cp 4<sup>17</sup> justifies the attribution of these words to the same source.

That this verse is composite can hardly be doubted; but the relation between the two clauses indicated by the word 'removed' ( $\text{h}$  = 'marched' <sup>10</sup>, 'took their journey' <sup>1220</sup>) is curious. In <sup>20</sup> the division is doubtful, partly owing to difficulties in the text (cp Dillm). As the pillar has taken up its stand in <sup>19b</sup>, the description of the movement in <sup>20a</sup> seems best to follow <sup>19a</sup> making 'the angel' the subject of 'came'; Josh 24<sup>7</sup> further implies that E recorded a 'darkness' (though  $\text{h}$  is not tion in 4-10 seems lacking in the personal and local colour which imparts such vividness to the song describing the overthrow of Sisera in Judg 5. (2) The situation implied in 13-17 looks back on the settlement of the people in Canaan, 17<sup>b</sup> pointing clearly to Jerusalem (though the clause might be a later enlargement). (3) The linguistic parallels show affinities with later prophecy and psalm which can hardly be completely explained by hypotheses of imitation, except in the case of some poems which are obviously reproductive. They seem rather to spring from a common stock of lyric and religious expression. Under what circumstances the poem was inserted into JE cannot be determined; but it is probable that it was incorporated before the union of the combined document with P. 25<sup>b</sup> The last person named in 25<sup>a</sup> is Moses ; but it becomes plain that the subject of 25<sup>b</sup> 20 is Yahweh himself. A change of document, therefore, occurs at this point. Both substance and form support the ascription to E, who relates the successive acts by which first Abraham and then Israel are divinely tested. The phrase 'made for them [5 him, referring to the people in some omitted passage] a statute and ordinance' is repeated 5 inJosh 24<sup>25</sup> (E) ; 5 however reads here 'statutes and ordinances' (5 judgements) cp Deut 5<sup>1</sup> &c. In 26 the numerous parallels with D clearly betray later redaction, though the last words sound original. It is evident that 26 is not the true sequel of 25<sup>b</sup> which must have related the trial to which the people were exposed ; this seems to be E's account of the origin of the name Massah, 'proving' or 'trial' cp Deut 33<sup>8</sup> and Ex 17<sup>1b</sup>. In 27 the itinerary of 22. is resumed.16<sup>1</sup> The opening clause 'and they took their journey from Elim' may be part of J's itinerary, cp the formulae in 17<sup>1</sup> Num 20<sup>1</sup> 22. In Num 33<sup>10</sup>, a camp at the Red Sea is interposed between Elim and the wilderness of Sin.

2 The description of the gift of the manna 2-36 offers many perplexities through the presence of conflicting phenomena. As the margins show, it is largely derived from P, but it is evident at once that great dislocations have taken place in the narrative. Thus (1) in 6. Moses and Aaron announce to the people what is subsequently 11. communicated to Moses by Yahweh : in other words, he delivers the divine message to Israel before he has himself received it. But (2) the story implies the existence of the Levitical Dwelling with the ark containing the Sacred

Testimony <sup>34</sup>. It is not till the Dwelling is completed that the 'Glory of Yahweh' <sup>10</sup> first appears in the cloud cp 40<sup>34</sup>. In the Dwelling stands the ark into which Moses is directed to put the Testimony 25<sup>21</sup> 40<sup>20</sup>. It is there that the rods of the Twelve Tribes are laid up before Yahweh Num 17<sup>10</sup>; and this only can be the place where the pot of manna is deposited <sup>33</sup>. Nor can the narrative be relieved of this anachronism by viewing <sup>33</sup> as a later addition. The phrase in <sup>9</sup> 'come near before Yahweh' similarly describes attendance at the sanctuary cp Lev 9<sup>5</sup> 16<sup>1</sup> Num 18<sup>22</sup>. The story, then, in its present form implies the existence of a centre of worship which is not yet constructed, and must have been transposed to its present place from a later stage. Is it possible to conjecture the cause of this displacement? Two reasons may be named. (1) The gift of the manna is not the only provision of food. Besides the morning 'bread,' it is also promised <sup>12</sup> that there shall be evening 'flesh.' In <sup>13</sup> accordingly at even the camp is covered with 'the quails.' But no quails have previously been mentioned. The narrative has evidently been abbreviated at the same time that its situation has been changed. There is, however, a windfall of quails related by J Num 11<sup>31</sup>., which is preceded by a description of the manna <sup>ib</sup> 7. . . It is conjectured that the narrative of J was the real source or antecedent of P's combination of quails and manna, and that the compiler, instead of blending them, shifted P's version of the incident to an earlier date. But what cause determined its incorporation here? Because (2) it would seem probable that E had attached his manna-story to this point. The gift of food is twice announced to Moses, but in very different terms; <sup>4</sup> and <sup>11</sup>. can hardly be from the same writer. In <sup>4</sup> it is stated that it is the divine purpose to 'prove' the people in connexion with the provision of the bread from heaven. It has been argued by Bacon that this is the antecedent of Deut 8<sup>2</sup>. <sup>16</sup>; the conception of the 'proof' of Israel apparently belongs to E, cp Gen 22<sup>1</sup> &c; the passage fits in with 15<sup>25b</sup>, and belonged originally to E's explanation of the name Massah ('Trial-place' or 'Proving'). There is, therefore, an element of E in the chapter, a promise of food from heaven, which formed the natural element with which R might group P's quails and manna. How far can this element (usually ascribed to J) be traced? The parallel of 15<sup>a</sup> with Deut 8<sup>16</sup> suggests its presence there, incorporated into the later narrative. Bacon adds 16<sup>a</sup> 19<sup>b</sup> 21<sup>35a</sup>. But the linguistic details hardly support his ascription; and it is not without difficulties also upon other grounds, for the opposition which he discovers between 16<sup>a</sup> and 16<sup>b</sup> seems to involve a strained interpretation of the legal phrase 'according to his eating.' The whole story, therefore, in its present form is assigned to P. In reaching that form it has no doubt received various additions designed to meet specific difficulties; the most notable being the arrangements for the sabbath. Some of the passages here assigned to R<sup>p</sup> show linguistic affinities with other Hexateuchal documents. But this is by no means the only case in which a section believed on independent grounds to be supplemental refuses to confine itself within the limits of P's formulae. It is possible that the sabbath regulations may have been inserted when the narratives of JE and P were combined, so as to fit the ordinances of P into closer concord with the original contents of E.

16<sup>a</sup> So J. T then said Yahweh.

<sup>16</sup> A discrepancy has been found in this verse on the ground that the phrase 'every man according to his eating' does not imply a fixed amount, while 'an omer a head' does. But the previous use of the phrase in 12<sup>4</sup> suggests that the writer has in view the varying amounts that would be needed by families varying in size, age, and sex. On an average an omer a head would suffice. But large families would still require more, and small families less in actual quantity. Measuring the manna as they collected it (the insertion of 'when' in RV<sup>18</sup> to help out the grammar appears to indicate—probably erroneously—that the measurement was not made till afterwards), they found that adherence to the prescribed proportion exactly used up the available amount (cp Dillmann). The words 'had nothing over' and 'had no lack' rather denote 'did not exceed' and 'did not fall short' in relation to the omer per head. The miracle lay not in the adjustment of the rations to the individual appetites, but in the exactness with which the supply satisfied the total demand. Those who deferred collecting till too late, found that their shares had melted <sup>21</sup>.

stage of the wanderings. Bacon has therefore suggested that the two names in <sup>7</sup> represent an editorial fusion of two sources. J's traditions attached parallel incidents to two names, Massah and Meribah. E appears also to have contained explanations of both designations cp Deut 33<sup>8</sup> Ex 15<sup>25b</sup>. The Massah-story of J and the Meribah-story of E were founded on a common motive, and have been editorially blended, just as the Meribah-story of J has been subsequently amalgamated with a counterpart in P. At the outset 1b-2a forms the introduction to E's explanation of Meribah <sup>7b</sup>. <sup>3</sup> will then fall to J, and with this attribution the linguistic marks are in complete harmony. The clause in 2b 'wherefore do ye tempt Yahweh' cannot, however, be in its proper place; it is related to <sup>7ac</sup>, but must have followed instead of preceding <sup>3</sup>. <sup>7c</sup> shows that other matter contained in J has been suppressed in the unifying process. In <sup>4-6</sup> there are no indications of diversity of authorship. The mention of the rod of Moses <sup>5</sup> secures it to E, and this is confirmed by 'Horeb' <sup>6</sup>. But this name shows that the story has been placed too soon cp 16, for Israel has not yet reached the sacred mountain cp 18<sup>5</sup> and 19<sup>2</sup>.

show that this section also is placed too soon. Joshua enters in <sup>9</sup> without introduction as though he were well known: he is already the tried captain on whom devolves the choice of men for military enterprise. Yet in 33<sup>11</sup> he is formally described, apparently for the first time, and he is then still 'a young man.' Moses, on the other hand, is no longer able himself to sustain his hand outstretched with the rod. The relation between Moses and Joshua, therefore, seems to belong to a more advanced stage than the institution of the Tent of Meeting. This result is confirmed by the name of Israel's foe, Amalek, who is elsewhere located in the wild open country through which the highlands of Judah sink slowly towards the south Num 13<sup>29</sup> cp 14<sup>25</sup> 43<sup>45</sup>, cp Gen 14<sup>7</sup> (near Kadesh). It is probable, therefore, that this narrative has been inserted too soon (Bacon and Battersby propose to place it after Num 12<sup>15</sup>). If so, the identification of the incident with Rephidim <sup>8</sup> is no doubt editorial; the defining English 'then' is simply 'and' §.

18<sup>2</sup> The Meeting of Moses and his father in law 2-11 appears to have been related both by J and E. In 6. Jethro arrives and converses with Moses, yet in 7 Moses sets out to meet him. The hand of J seems recognizable in 7, while that of E is plainly to be discerned in 6. But the antecedents in the two sources must have been different. In J Moses had but one son, on his return to Egypt, when his wife accompanied him 4<sup>20</sup> 25. E, on the other hand, represented Moses as leaving his family under his father in law's care. The two views are harmonized by R in 2 ; 3 is plainly founded on 2<sup>22</sup> ; but the origin of 4 is unknown (for 'sword' G reads 'hand'). Eliezer is mentioned nowhere else in the Hex, though in P Aaron has a son named Eleazar. The situation in 5 again implies displacement, for in 19<sup>1</sup> Israel is still on the march to the sacred mountain. On the original position of E's narrative see 12<sup>n</sup> : J's may have led up to Num 10<sup>29</sup>.

3 M 5 Ger. See 2<sup>22</sup>. 4 M 5 EL, God, and ezer, help.

10 The phraseology of 9-11 shows most affinity with J. But the duplicate clauses of 10 may result from an amalgam of

J and E. The shorter forms of 10 in G where 10<sup>b</sup> disappears altogether, are worthy of note : G<sup>AS</sup> 'And Jethro said, Blessed be Yahweh, that he hath delivered them out of the hand of the Egyptians and out of the hand of Pharaoh' ; G<sup>L</sup> 'And Jethro said, Blessed be Yahweh who hath delivered his people from the hand of the Egyptians and from the hand of Pharaoh.'

12 It has been already pointed out that in E's narrative Jethro finds Moses and the people already encamped beneath the mount of God. The sequel in 12-27 shows similar signs that it has been inserted here too soon. The elaborate judicial organization indicated in 25. is apparently not yet instituted in 24<sup>12-14</sup>. Moreover it presupposes a collection of statutes and laws divinely given 16 20 ; and its establishment is more appropriate to the scene of a lengthened stay than to a mere station on the way. Accordingly in Deut 10-17 it is assigned to Horeb, shortly before the people started again upon the march, and this is supported in E by Jethro's reference 23 to their approaching departure. The whole section, therefore, originally fell among the last of the Horeb scenes.

<sup>3a</sup> With <sup>3</sup> begins the story of the great theophany which formed the core of the traditions concerning the giving of the Law. P's description of it is not introduced till 24<sup>15a</sup> which is apparently continuous with 19<sup>2a</sup> <sup>1</sup>. The intervening material is chiefly derived from E (see 20<sup>N</sup>) but the narrative of the manifestation on the sacred mount is plainly not from one source alone. The difficulty of explaining the repeated ascents of Moses (cp <sup>3</sup> 7 9. 14 20 23) at once suggests diversity of document, and this inference is established by comparison of 14-17 with 20-25. In <sup>10</sup> directions are issued for the purification of the people which are fulfilled in <sup>14</sup>. The people are then ready, the signal of Elohim's advent is given on the mountain, and Israel is solemnly brought forth to meet its God <sup>17</sup>. But the divine intercourse with Moses <sup>19</sup> is suddenly arrested by a new call to the top of the mount. There fresh instructions are supplied for the sanctification of the priests <sup>22</sup>, for the prevention of too eager curiosity on the part of the people <sup>21</sup>, and for the return of Moses to the summit with Aaron <sup>24</sup>. The narrative concludes abruptly with the statement <sup>25</sup> that 'Moses went down to the people and said unto them . . .', leaving the reader to imagine the instructions which he communicated. In 20<sup>1</sup> the divine words for which preparation has been made in 19<sup>17-19</sup> are solemnly uttered, with the result that the terrified people, already at the foot of the mount, entreat Moses that the speech of heaven may cease 20<sup>19</sup>, and be transmitted to them through him. Moses accordingly draws near alone <sup>21</sup>, and the summons to Aaron 19<sup>24</sup> remains unfulfilled. The contrast of 19<sup>20-25</sup> with 19<sup>14-17</sup> 20<sup>18-21</sup> points to a J source and an E source. But this criterion is an insufficient basis of analysis. Since the revelation described in 3<sup>15</sup> E has repeatedly employed the name Yahweh, and in the present passage 14-17 plainly depends on <sup>9</sup>. where Yahweh is found. [It may be noted that <sup>h</sup> here points to considerable variations of redaction in this matter. Thus in 7 8ab 18 21b 23 24b (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup> read Elohim for Yahweh; so also 3b 21a (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup> 22a (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup>; further, 3b (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup> 22a (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup> Yahweh Elohim for Yahweh; and vice versa 20<sup>1</sup> (<sup>h</sup> <sup>ABL</sup> Yahweh for Elohim.) The material differences, however, suffice for partition. Starting

(1) Yahweh comes down on Sinai <sup>11b</sup> 18 <sup>20</sup> ,	Elohim (Yahweh) comes 19 <sup>9</sup> 20 <sup>20</sup> ,
(2) with smoke and fire <sup>18</sup> ,	in a thick cloud <sup>9</sup> 16 cp 20 <sup>18</sup> 21,
(3) in the sight of all the people <sup>11b</sup> . The mountain trembles <sup>18</sup> ,	that the people may hear when he speaks with Moses <sup>9</sup> 19 20 <sup>19</sup> . The people 'tremble' <sup>16</sup> .
(4) Bounds are to be set to the mountain, the border of which must not be touched <sup>12</sup> , 23,	The people are brought forth to meet Elohim at the nether part of the mount <sup>17</sup> .
(5) The priests to be sanctified <sup>22</sup> 24,	The whole people to be sanctified <sup>10</sup> 14 <sup>a</sup> .
(6) The blast of a ram's horn <sup>18</sup> .	The sound of the trumpet <sup>16</sup> 19.
(7) The people endangered by their eagerness to press forward and see <sup>21</sup> .	The people terrified, they stand far off <sup>16</sup> 20 <sup>18</sup> .
(8) 'They shall come up to the mount' <sup>13</sup> cp Moses and Aaron shall come up <sup>24</sup> .	Moses drew near to the darkness alone 20 <sup>21</sup> .

There remains a difficult passage in 3b-8 unaffected by the foregoing distribution. The close juxtaposition of two divine names excites attention, and the peculiar phraseology of <sup>5</sup>. unknown outside Deuteronomy points to expansion at the hands of R<sup>d</sup>. It is less certain whether the whole of the divine address is an addition, and it is not without significance in this respect that <sup>5-6</sup> reappears in <sup>h</sup> after 23<sup>21</sup>. Bacon (whose analysis of this chapter the editors have largely followed) supposes that 3b-8 stood originally after 20<sup>21</sup>, the contribution of R<sup>d</sup> being limited to 3c-6a. The words in <sup>6b</sup> then refer to 20<sup>1-17</sup>. The phrase in <sup>6b</sup>, however, resembles the title to a collection of precepts, and sounds rather introductory than retrospective cp 21<sup>1</sup>. The opening words have their parallels in 3<sup>15</sup> 20<sup>22a</sup>, while 'ye yourselves have seen' <sup>4</sup> <sup>h</sup> matches 20<sup>22b</sup>; and as the people have already themselves heard the divine words in 20<sup>1-17</sup>, it is not clear why Moses should need to recite them again to the elders. It is possible that in the confusion of the fragments <sup>7</sup>. is an accidental variant of 24<sup>8</sup>. A similar casualty seems to have generated <sup>8b</sup> as a duplicate of <sup>9b</sup>. Yet even <sup>7</sup> and <sup>8</sup> do not seem quite homogeneous, for the divine message, communicated only to the elders in <sup>7</sup>, is accepted by the united people in <sup>8</sup>. Further difficulty arises from the emphatic pronoun 'they shall come up to the mount' <sup>13</sup>. It cannot refer to 'all the people' <sup>11</sup>, for these are expressly prohibited from touching the border. It is conjectured, therefore, that the passage has found its way into a wrong context, and that 11b-13 should follow 20-24. There the priests are directed to sanctify themselves, apparently as a qualification for an extraordinary interview with Yahweh. Kuenen surmised that in <sup>24</sup> the text originally ran 'thou shalt come up, thou and Aaron with thee, and the priests: but let not the people break through' &c. If this passage preceded <sup>11b-13</sup>, the contrast between 'ye' (the people) <sup>12</sup> and 'they' (the priests) <sup>13</sup> would be explained. 19<sup>25</sup> <sup>5</sup> said unto them cp Gen 4<sup>8</sup>. The arrangement suggested above indicates that the omitted words spoken by Moses to the people contained the divine instructions for their safety.

20<sup>1</sup> The 'Ten Words' as they are designated in Deut 10<sup>4</sup> cp Ex 34<sup>28</sup> are almost unanimously assigned in the present redaction to E, though critical opinion is divided as to their place in his original narrative. A comparison with Deut 5 shows that 1-21 was known to D substantially in one piece: 2-17 cp Deut 5<sup>2-21</sup>, 18 (19<sup>16</sup>) cp Deut 5<sup>22</sup>, 19 cp Deut 5<sup>23-27</sup>, while the use of the divine name Elohim 20<sup>1</sup> 19-21 points to the same Elohistic source already traced in 19. Two main questions arise concerning the literary history of the Words: (1) are they reproduced here in their original form, or have they received additions in the shape of explanations and commentaries? (2) If they can be reduced to a simpler type, what relation does the series bear to any similar laws which may be traced elsewhere? (i) The facts that there are variations in the reasons assigned for the observance of the fourth commandment cp Ex 20<sup>11</sup> Deut 5<sup>15</sup>, and that the Deuteronomic version shows slight divergences in the treatment of the fifth and tenth, have been long recognized as affording good grounds for the belief that some of the commandments have received hortatory expansion. The analogy of other laws points in the same direction (Introd i 73) and it is now generally believed that the Words were primarily 'moulded in uniform shape,' and expressed in 'terse and simple form' (Driver LOT<sup>6</sup> p 34). Is it possible to recover this ancient type? Dr Briggs (Higher Criticism of the Hexateuch<sup>2</sup> 181-7) has endeavoured to reconstruct it, finding the primitive form of 'Word' in the direct prohibition 'Thou shalt not ...'. The additions are, in this view, later than the actual Words, and may be ascribed with some confidence to other hands. This is made practically certain by their striking literary affinities, for they seem at various points to touch the phraseology of J, of E, and of D respectively. Thus the introductory clause <sup>2</sup> contains two expressions strongly characteristic of D, 'Yahweh thy God' and 'house of bondage,' pointing to an earlier form 'I am Yahweh which brought thee out of the land of Egypt,' cp Gen 15<sup>7</sup> 'I am Yahweh which brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees.' The additions to the second Word, as the margin shows, cp 'heaven above' &c 'bow down and serve' 'Yahweh thy God,' tend in the same direction. But, on the other hand, the language of <sup>5</sup> shows striking parallels with J in 34<sup>14</sup> cp 'Yahweh is a jealous God' 'visiting the iniquity ...' 'keeping mercy for thousands.' The phrase in the text, 'showing (doing) mercy,' is peculiar to JE, and nowhere occurs in D (though cp Deut 7<sup>9</sup>): on the other hand the allusions to 'hate' and 'love' seem to belong to the religious atmosphere of D, who alone in the Hex makes the love of God a motive of human action, though the expression (in a somewhat different sense) is probably one of great antiquity, cp Judg 5<sup>31</sup>. The fourth commandment 8-11 has been revised by R<sup>9</sup> cp 11<sup>8</sup>; but the influence of D can also be traced with much probability in the phrase 'Yahweh thy God,' in the enumeration of the members of the household, and in the description of 'thy stranger that is within thy gates,' when compared with the simpler language of E 23<sup>12</sup>, 'that thine ox and thine ass may have rest, and the son of thy handmaid (<sup>5</sup> = maid-servant 20<sup>10</sup>), and the stranger.' Similarly the phrases in <sup>12</sup> recur repeatedly in D and in D only. It may be affirmed, then, with considerable probability, that the hortatory additions have been themselves expanded in the spirit of the great Deuteronomic school (cp Introd XVI 2a i 175), and that they were founded on earlier material derived from J and E, perhaps by the editor designated R<sup>9</sup>. But (ii) behind the commentaries lie the Words themselves. Had they a place in the original narrative of E? In their present position they constitute a kind of introduction to the legislation which follows, but they have little in common with it: the arrangement in D by which they are presented as the sole legislation of Horeb cp 22<sup>28</sup> is much more impressive. Now the Words are reported by D as the basis of the covenant between Yahweh and Israel. It will be seen hereafter that both J and E record such a covenant, cp Ex 24 and 34: but neither document founds it on these Ten Words, though each associates it with 'Words' of Yahweh. Further it may be noted that each of these collections shows parallels with some of the Ten Words. Thus with 20<sup>3</sup> cp J 34<sup>14</sup> 'Thou shalt not bow down (<sup>5</sup> as in 20<sup>4</sup>) to another god,' E 22<sup>20</sup> forbidding sacrifice to another god under pain of 'devotion,' and E 23<sup>13</sup> 'the name of other gods ye shall not cause to be remembered' cp 20<sup>24</sup>: with 20<sup>4</sup> cp J 34<sup>17</sup>, 'thou shalt make thee no molten gods,' and E 20<sup>23</sup> 'ye shall not make with me gods of silver, and gods of gold ye shall not make unto you': with 20<sup>7</sup> cp 22<sup>28</sup>, and with 20<sup>8</sup> cp J 34<sup>21</sup> 'Six days thou shalt labour, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest,' and E 23<sup>12</sup> 'Six days thou shalt do thy works, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest,' where in both cases 'rest' in <sup>5</sup> means 'keep sabbath.' The question can hardly be discussed in all its bearings until the Covenant-Words of J and E have themselves been analysed. But the existence of these several groups (which will be found closely parallel to each other) suggests that the Ten Words, the latter of which run a highly independent course, were not part of the original narrative of E (for why should E himself arrange these duplicates side by side?) but were added from some other source. Some confirmation of this view is found in the consideration of the narrative 19<sup>10</sup> 20<sup>18-21</sup> compared with Deut 5<sup>22</sup>... It is clear from the Deuteronomic account that the people were supposed to have heard the actual words uttered by Yahweh 'with a great voice.' But it may be doubted if that was the conception of E. The people witness a storm of thunder and lightning, they hear a trumpet blast which they interpret as the divine utterance, but it does not appear that they are conscious of articulate address from Elohim. As the outward signs of the theophany become more majestic and terrible, they dread lest Deity should speak <sup>19</sup> and they should perish. The original account of E, therefore, probably contained no spoken 'Words' from Elohim to the assembled people, but only the tradition of the awful Voice. Concerning the antiquity of the Words themselves, doubted by Colenso, Wellhausen, Kuenen, Stade, Bacon, Addis, Meisner, Steuernagel, Staerk, Holzinger, Kraetzschmar, and others, cp Driver (LOT<sup>6</sup> 33), Briggs (Higher Criticism<sup>2</sup> 186), Dillmann-Ryssel (Ex und Lev<sup>2</sup> 226), and Wicksteed (Christian Reformer 1886 i 307). It is perhaps sufficient to observe here that (as noted above) E does not base the covenant on the so-called 'Ten Words,' but on the Words now combined with the judgments in the Covenant-book cp 22<sup>28</sup>. D is the first to treat the Ten Words as the sole foundation and contents of the Horeb-covenant. The prominence thus assigned to them (together with the linguistic affinities on which Colenso and Meisner have dwelt with especial emphasis) adds weight to the conjecture that they took shape between the first collection of laws and narratives in J and E, and the later reproduction of ancient torah in D. But if this be so, there is no clue to the circumstances under which they were incorporated into E. On difficulties connected with the place of the Ten Words in Israel's religious and social history cp Addis Hex i 139.

<sup>11</sup> In this verse it has been usual to recognize the hand of the harmonist. The parallel passage in Deut 5<sup>15</sup> bases the observance of the sabbath on the deliverance from Egypt. But in this historical association there is no link of inner thought such as that implied in the parallel between the rest enjoined on Israel and that practised by Deity himself. Had D's copy of the Decalogue contained this verse, it is hardly likely that he would have replaced its lofty suggestiveness by a less potent motive. In spite, therefore, of Budde's plea (Urgesch 495) that this verse is here original to E, it is regarded as a secondary insertion. But from what source? It has been commonly viewed as founded on Gen 2<sup>1-3</sup>. Many of the verbal details, it is true, are different: eg for 'the heavens and the earth and all their host,' we read 'the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that in them is': the words 'rest' and 'sabbath-day' are not those employed by P, who also does not connect the blessing on the day by 'therefore' (a word used specially by J cp <sup>28</sup>85). These differences are hardly sufficient in themselves to establish an independent source for this verse in a lost creation-story by J<sup>2</sup>, though they may properly be employed in supporting other arguments. They may, however, be sufficiently explained by the influence of the context; the triple division into sky, earth, and waters, is already recognized in <sup>4</sup>; the verb 'to rest' (נָח) is found in the parallel in Deut 5<sup>14</sup> and may well have prompted the writer's choice; 'sabbath day' is already provided by <sup>8</sup>; and the word 'therefore' is used by P<sup>3</sup> in a similar connexion in 16<sup>29</sup>. That the secondary references to the creation-narrative of P were not limited to the original phraseology is clear from the curious addition in 31<sup>17</sup> which states that Yahweh 'was refreshed,' following the language of an earlier Sabbath law 23<sup>12</sup>: while it may be said in general terms that some of the later portions of P show much greater variety of style (cp Introd XIII 113 i 155).

<sup>18b</sup> M Or, were moved.—Cp Is 64. In Hex only in a different connexion Gen 4<sup>12</sup> 14 'wanderer'; Hiph Num 32<sup>13</sup>.

<sup>22a</sup> The older criticism treated 20<sup>22-23</sup> as substantially one whole (with some interpolations and additions), and connected it with the record of the Covenant in 24<sup>8-8</sup>, so that it became known as the Book of the Covenant. But it has been since perceived that it not only contains various hortatory amplifications, but is in reality compiled from two different collections which have been blended together. The proof of this is partly contained in the book itself, and partly in the narrative which follows. For (1) while the opening section 20<sup>23-26</sup> is concerned exclusively with instructions for the proper worship of Yahweh, at 21<sup>1</sup> a series of 'judgements' is introduced, in which various matters affecting the person or property of the Israelite are regulated on the basis of judicial decisions formulated and generalized into law. Other commands in their turn follow, which in no way result from civil or criminal processes before a judge, such as the rules for the observance of a seventh fallow year and a seventh day of rest 23<sup>10-12</sup>, or the festival cycle in 14. The contents of these chapters, therefore, are not homogeneous. But (2) this diversity of character is recognized in 24<sup>8</sup>, where Moses is said to recite to the people 'all the words of Yahweh and all the judgements.' This description implies that the preceding collection is made up of two parts, (1) a series of divine 'Words,' and (2) a group of 'judgements.' Is there any clue to their separation? Wellhausen and Stade practically limit (2) to 21-22<sup>17</sup>, where the 'case law' is cast into a series of rules defining the proper course under the given circumstances introduced by 'if': Driver adds 22<sup>25a</sup> 26 23<sup>1</sup>. The remainder is then allotted to (1). But this remainder is itself found on investigation to consist of highly various materials. There is the humanitarian legislation for the protection of the stranger, the ethical insistence on the upright administration of justice, strangely mingled with regulations about first fruits and sabbath (whether of days or years) and a calendar of annual feasts. It is readily seen that these are alike neither in style nor in substance. The conditional form of the strict 'judgement' is reproduced in 23<sup>1</sup>; but by its side are the participial clauses in which Dr Briggs finds the proper type of the 'statute' 22<sup>19</sup>, and the commands and prohibitions 22<sup>18</sup> 28, 29<sup>b</sup> 30 in which the same critic recognizes the characteristics of the 'Word' (Higher Crit 242 ff). It does not seem possible to base any distinction on these slender variations in expression. It is more apposite to notice that the moral and social legislation tends constantly to expand into the prophet's appeal rather than the lawgiver's command cp 22<sup>23</sup>, 27 23<sup>1</sup>, and is thus strongly marked off from a specific group of regulations which do not embody the experience of life but are occupied with the requirements of worship. These laws are broken up in their present position, but they are readily seen to constitute a little collection by themselves. Different investigators, such as Rothstein (Bundesbuch 1888), Bantsch (Bundesbuch 1892), and Bacon, approaching the problem by different methods, have substantially agreed in the view that the 'Words' are to be found in the cultus laws 20<sup>22-26</sup> 22<sup>29-31</sup> 23<sup>10-19</sup>, with the concluding exhortation in 23<sup>20-33</sup>. The Book of Judgements would naturally contain the available rules for the protection of life and property. With them would be suitably associated other provisions for the welfare of the community, such as the infliction of the ban on those who were guilty of treason to the national God by worshipping an alien deity 22<sup>20</sup>, or the prohibition of ribald speech whether against the earthly or the heavenly ruler 22<sup>28</sup>. The varied contents of Deut 12-26 under the title 'Statutes and Judgements' show what diversified materials might thus be aggregated together. But the particular institutions of the cultus were not founded on custom and usage, whether formulated in judicial decisions, or as yet implied only in the higher standards of religion. They were regarded as derived directly from the divine will, and owed their origin to a positive utterance. Accepting this distinction provisionally, it may be noted further that the 'Words' 24<sup>1</sup> were recorded by Moses in a book: with solemn sacrifice and ceremony the people pledged themselves to obedience: and on the basis of these 'Words' Yahweh entered into a covenant with Israel 24<sup>8</sup>. But as soon as these prescriptions are examined by themselves, it is observed that the bulk of them reappear in another connexion in 34, where they are again embodied in a covenant which Yahweh purposes to make with Israel 34<sup>10</sup>. Let the following parallels be considered:—

(1) 20 <sup>23</sup>	Prohibition of image worship . . . . .	34 <sup>17</sup>
(2) 24-26	Regulations for the construction of altars . . . . .
(3) 22 <sup>29</sup>	Gift of firstborn sons to Yahweh . . . . .	20b
(4) 30	Gift of firstborn animals to Yahweh . . . . .	19 20a
(5) 31	No meat torn by wild beasts to be eaten . . . . .
(6) 23 <sup>10-11</sup>	Observance of the seventh fallow year . . . . .
(7) 12	Observance of the seventh day of rest . . . . .	21
(8) 14 17	Observance of three annual feasts . . . . .	23
(9) 15	Feast of Unleavened Bread . . . . .	18
(10) 16	Harvest and Ingathering . . . . .	22
(11) 18a	No leavened bread to be used in sacrifice . . . . .	25a
(12) 18b	No fat to be left till the morning . . . . .	25b
(13) 19a	Firstfruits to be given to Yahweh . . . . .	26a
(14) 19b	No kid to be seethed in its mother's milk . . . . .	26b

It is clear that the terms of the covenant proposed in 34<sup>10</sup> are largely parallel with the 'Words' on which the previous covenant has already been formally established. Reasons will be given hereafter for believing that its context belongs to J; but as it cannot be supposed that J related the institution of the covenant twice over in slightly different terms, the previous 'Words' and their acceptance by the people must be assigned to E. This conclusion is reinforced by other considerations, partly linguistic, as the margins will show, and partly substantial cp 24<sup>5N</sup>. The harmonist of J and E, in fixing the present places of the two versions, has brought them into closer accord by modification and addition, so that the texts of the two documents have been moulded into completer correspondence. The probable signs of such changes will be noted when they occur. This is the only case in which J and E agree in ascribing the preparation of a documentary record to Moses; and this agreement may be taken in evidence that J and E were both acquainted with some older written source (but cp 34<sup>2N</sup>). The distinction already emphasized between the 'Words' and the 'Judgements' (with the additional materials attached to them) makes it necessary to account for the incorporation of the latter collection at this point of the narrative. It will be found (1) that they are suitable rather for a settled and agricultural people than for the life of the desert, and (2) that many of them are included, sometimes with important amendments, in the Book of Deuteronomy, whose central body of legislation is described 12<sup>1</sup> under the double heading of 'Statutes and Judgements.' Deut is emphatic in its statement that nothing was publicly enjoined at Horeb but the Ten Words 5<sup>22</sup> 31 6<sup>1</sup>. It was pointed out by Kuenen that the author no doubt had some reason in the materials which he employed for placing his great reproduction of the Mosaic Teaching at the end of the wanderings under the slopes of Pisgah. Now his chief source of sacred law (so far as Pentateuch permits us to trace it) was the so-called Covenant-book. This, argued Kuenen, must once have stood in the position which Deut now occupies, at the close of Moses' life as the people prepared to quit the wilderness for the settled occupations of the land which was afterwards to bear their name. The partition of the Covenant-book of the older criticism into two unequal parts, does not affect Kuenen's suggestion. The 'Judgements' constituted the earliest summary of the Mosaic Torah, and may possibly have belonged to a hortatory address now superseded by Deut. That they, too, are due to an Elohist source may be inferred from their use of the name Elohim 21<sup>6</sup> 13 22<sup>8</sup>, 11 (y) 28, and other linguistic marks (such as the designation <sup>7</sup>אִשָּׁה for 'bondwoman' cp 19<sup>9</sup>, and the repeated use of the words <sup>10</sup>בָּלַע <sup>10</sup>וַיִּכַּח in the sense of 'matter' or 'cause' 10<sup>8</sup>. Bantsch, indeed, argues that Ex 22<sup>9-12</sup> is presupposed in Gen 31<sup>38-40</sup> and must be attributed to J. But the plea is doubly precarious. The connexion between the two passages cannot be proved; and in the foregoing analysis of the Jacob-stories the verses in question are assigned to E. This suggestion affords no support, therefore, to the view (abandoned by Wellhausen and Driver) that the Judgement-book was derived from J. In the process of uniting J E with D, if the Judgement-book really did stand at the end, it became necessary to find another place for it, and it seemed most appropriately combined with the other brief collection of religious law in E, the Covenant-words at Horeb. Other suggestions perhaps deserve a passing mention. Thus Holzinger (Hex 179) proposes to connect it with Joshua's covenant at Shechem Josh 24<sup>25</sup>. It might seem more natural to associate it with E's narrative of the institution of the Judges Ex 18, which represents Moses as already in possession of divine statutes and laws Ex 18<sup>10</sup>, which could be taught to the people 20. This narrative (it has been shown) is placed too soon; in its original position among the later Horeb scenes it might well have been preceded by a collection of regulations for judicial procedure, and the special warnings in 23<sup>1-3</sup> 6-8 would have been particularly apposite. Is it unreasonable to find a trace of such an arrangement in the language of Deut 1<sup>18</sup>, which implies that the Mosaic teaching was not all postponed to the eve of the passage of the Jordan in the land of Moab? For a recent attempt to arrange the Words and Judgements in Decalogues, Pentades, and Triplets, cp Briggs, Higher Criticism 2 210-32. Some other scholars treat them as an expansion of the Decalogue Ex 20.

20<sup>22b</sup> This verse (together with 23<sup>1</sup>) is often regarded as redactional. This view finds some support in the fact that different forms of the introductory words seem to have been extant. Thus Sam reads 'And Yahweh spake unto Moses saying, Speak unto the children of Israel': and (y) <sup>ABL</sup> supply 'And Yahweh said unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel' cp 19<sup>3</sup>. In the (y) text Kuenen thought he detected the traces of R's hand cp Deut 4<sup>3</sup> 36, but the signs of D's influence cannot be said to be strong. More significant is the appearance of the name 'Yahweh,' discontinuous with the usage of 19-21, and the contrast of the plurals in 22, with the singular in 24-26.

23 The verse is not free from difficulty. RV accepts the Hebrew punctuation according to which the first clause runs 'Ye shall not make with me': an object has then to be supplied, such as 'other gods' (Rothstein points to Lev 26<sup>1</sup>). Briggs practically follows (y) <sup>1</sup> and other ancient authorities, and renders 'Ye shall not make with me gods of silver,' and gods of gold ye shall not make you,' which he regards as the first and second commands of the first pentade. But this kind of repetition seems strangely feeble.

24 It may be doubted whether 24-26 is in its right place; it is unrepresented in J's Covenant-words. Budde (ZATW xi 228) suggests that it was originally part of the narrative of the institution of the sanctuary, which must have once followed

On the other hand D's version of the 'Statutes and Judgements' opens with a law defining the place where cultus is legitimate Deut 12<sup>1</sup>; and a similar subject stands at the head of the Holiness-legislation Lev 17. These possibilities cannot be definitely decided: the transpositions and adjustments of the text which seem to have taken place on an extensive scale, make it impossible to recover the original openings either of the Covenant-words or of the Book of Judgements.

15 M Or, it is reckoned in (5 cometh into) its hire.

5 M Or, and wouldest forbear to release it for him, thou shalt surely release it with him.

7 5 and thou shalt not justify the wicked for the sake of gifts.

8 M Or, cause.—Cp 32:108.

11 M Or, release it and let it lie fallow. See Deut 15<sup>2</sup>.

12 M Or, keep sabbath.—The passage which follows may be a later amplification cp Deut 5:14.

17 Another incorporation by the harmonist from 34<sup>23</sup>: the precept is not needed after 14.

18 Parallel to 34<sup>26</sup>, but probably independent of it: J limits the rule to the Passover.

19a Already with 34<sup>26</sup>. The law seems already covered by 22<sup>29</sup>.

19b Probably original to E as well as to J. Cp 22<sup>31N</sup>.

20 The following exhortation seems in the main to belong to

E, though it has received considerable additions from the Deuteronomic school 23-25a 27 31b-33. It may, however, be doubted whether it is in its right place here. Does it belong to the 'Judgements' or to the 'Words'? On the one hand the Covenant in 34<sup>10-27</sup> closes with the command in 19<sup>b</sup>: on the other hand the analogy of the discourses in Deut 28 and Lev 26 suggests that the Book of Judgements may have concluded with a similar utterance of warning and hope. But, again, it may be urged that if the Covenant-words be limited to the original text of 22<sup>20-31</sup> 23<sup>10-19</sup>, they form after all only a one-sided bond: they enumerate the obligations of Israel but contain no declaration of the promise of Yahweh. Such a promise would naturally follow the commands; and a prospective hortatory discourse, therefore, concludes the Mosaic Covenant-words of Horeb much as a similar retrospective discourse is connected with Joshua's covenant at Shechem Josh 24. In this view the unexpanded original of 20-33 is an integral part of the Covenant-record. In that case, however, it may be observed that it is at present placed too soon. The opening reference to the departure of Israel 20 seems premature, when Moses has not yet even received the tables bearing the Ten Words of 20<sup>-17</sup>. Bacon therefore argues that the whole of E's Covenant-story belongs to a later stage of the Horeb incidents, and originally immediately preceded Israel's start upon the march; see 34<sup>28N</sup>. Another combination seems also possible. The language of 20-22 points to a permanent guide, which would be in continual legislative relations with the people (22a 'I speak' = 'I shall speak' 5). It is natural to connect such a representative Presence with the sanctuary, which became the centre of judicial as well as religious functions cp 33<sup>7</sup> 18<sup>19</sup>. If it may be

<sup>24</sup>1 The opening words in 5 'and to Moses he said' suggest at once the presence of a new source, for the whole preceding section 20<sup>22-23</sup> has been addressed to Moses. The instructions in <sup>1</sup> are carried out in 9-11, while the account of the intervening Covenant-ceremony 3-8 completes the narrative of 20<sup>18</sup>. It is usually supposed that Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu correspond to the 'priests' of 10<sup>22</sup> J (Sam adds Eleazar and Ithamar), whereas E describes Moses as performing the Covenant-sacrifice with the aid of certain 'young men' <sup>5</sup>, cp the designation of Joshua as sanctuary-servant 33<sup>11</sup>. The amalgamation of the two narratives here is probably due to the harmonist's perception that <sup>24</sup>1. 9-11 formed the counterpart in J of the Covenant-feast in 3-8. As this could only have been celebrated once, it was necessary to combine the accounts of J and E if they were both to be retained. Dillmann believes that touches from J are to be discovered in <sup>4a</sup> (cp 34<sup>27</sup> 7 <sup>8b</sup>): but this view has not found any general support. The hand of the editor who combined the 'Judgements' with the 'Words' may be seen in <sup>3</sup>. Kuenen, however, followed by Cornill, assigns <sup>1</sup>. 9-11 to E<sup>1</sup> (cp Eloh<sup>11</sup>), but recognizes that 3-8 belong to another narrative. On the place which he provides for it see 34<sup>28cn</sup>. Other critics, like Budde, have ascribed <sup>1</sup>. 9-11 fundamentally to E, but have recognized foreign elements in them. Kittel even suggests the possible presence of P. The names of Nadab and Abihu are found elsewhere only in P; and in <sup>10</sup> the expressions 'God of Israel' and 'very (עצם) heaven' show affinities with his vocabulary, while 'nobles' <sup>11</sup> occurs only once besides in an exilic passage. But the names of Aaron's sons may have belonged to the older tradition; and P nowhere relates any such vision of Deity.

24<sup>4</sup> This passage has occasionally been combined with 34<sup>27</sup> as the sequel of Yahweh's Covenant with Israel 34<sup>10-27</sup>. The repetitions in the text are certainly noteworthy: in 3 Moses recites the Words to the people and they unanimously promise obedience to them; in 7 they are solemnly read out of the Covenant-book, and a similar promise follows. Are these parts of one narrative? The mention of the sacred pillars in 4 has usually been regarded as decisive in favour of E. But it will be noticed that they are introduced without a verb: the term 'built' is nowhere applied to pillars, which are said to be 'set up' Gen 28<sup>18</sup> 31<sup>45</sup> 35<sup>14</sup>; nor are altars and pillars ever said to be erected together. Is it possible that there are here traces of combination to which we may also owe the doublets in 3 and 7?

10 M Or, work of bright sapphire.—h†.

12 This clause can hardly be original in its present form, as there is nowhere any mention of any law or commandment written by God except the Ten Words, which would hardly be described in these terms. g and Sam omit and. It is possible that the order may have become confused, and that the words 'which I have written' should immediately follow the 'tables of stone' cp 32<sup>15</sup>, but such a combination seems hardly natural. The phrase as it now stands may have been expanded from a shorter one on the basis of Deut 5<sup>27</sup>. The word 'teach' is not the Deuteronomic limmed cp 7<sup>1b</sup>, but horah cp Deut 17<sup>10</sup>. 24<sup>8</sup>

33<sup>10</sup> Lev 10<sup>11</sup>, from which the term torah 'law' (teaching) is derived.

14 The 'elders' here named cannot be the seventy 9 who are already on the mountain. If the word is original, the elders must be addressed as representatives of the people cp 31<sup>6</sup> 42<sup>9</sup>. It has been suggested, however, that it is due either to accidental reminiscence in copying or perhaps to intentional harmonizing, and replaces the 'people.'

15<sup>b</sup> At this point the narrative of P interrupted in 19<sup>2</sup> is resumed: in 15<sup>a-17</sup> the great manifestation on the mount is described in his peculiar terms, and the way is prepared for the corpus of P's Sinaitic legislation, beginning with the Dwelling, its sacred furniture and vessels, and its priests. In the following analysis the linguistic affinities with the general matter of P (both in narrative and laws) are briefly indicated, but many technical terms in the description of the fabric and its contents remain unnoticed, as no critical questions in any way depend on them for solution. The repetitions of the different sections constituting 25-31 will be found tabulated under 35<sup>1</sup>.

minister in it, is universally recognized as the centre of P's representations of the Mosaic institutions. The whole section 25-31<sup>18a</sup> is bound together by numerous links of thought and language, which serve in like manner to establish connexions with the rest of P's narrative and legislation (see the margins). Yet this passage plainly falls apart into two uneven divisions at 29<sup>1</sup>: the character of the series of paragraphs in 30-31<sup>11</sup> is discussed in the notes in loc. But the constitution of 25-29 also demands attention. Here likewise there appear occasional signs of supplemental handiwork, see notes on 27<sup>20</sup> 28<sup>23</sup> 41 29<sup>21</sup> 38. But behind these lies the curious fact that in 25-27<sup>19</sup> the sanctuary is always called the 'Dwelling', <sup>P</sup>54, while in 28-29 this name is replaced by the older term 'Tent of Meeting' cp 33<sup>7</sup> (Intro VIII i 2, XII 2e). The title 'Dwelling' is of course freely used in the great repetition Ex 35-40, but the main portions of the Priestly Law in Lev ignore it. In Lev 8<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>4</sup> its appearance is due to the harmonist: in 15<sup>31</sup> 26<sup>11</sup> it seems to denote not the visible fabric but the ideal presence of Yahweh with his people. Similarly the allusions to the court in Lev 6<sup>16</sup> 28 may be regarded as glosses. In the regulations for the annual atonement ceremony Lev 16 the name is avoided, though the Tent of Meeting is curiously said <sup>16</sup> to 'dwell' with Israel in the midst of their uncleanness, and the references to the Testimony, the ark, and the 'covering' agree with the description in Ex 25. The Dwelling becomes again prominent in the arrangements for the Camp and its removal Num 14<sup>8</sup>. 3-4 9-10 (cp 16: 31<sup>30</sup> 47). The absence of the term from the Priestly Law proper, which is usually based on the older name 'Tent of Meeting', is highly significant (in Lev 17<sup>4-6</sup> 9 19<sup>21</sup> there is reason to suspect editorial redaction; P<sup>h</sup> prefers 'sanctuary' Lev 19<sup>30</sup> 20<sup>3</sup> 21<sup>12</sup> 23 26<sup>2</sup> 31, but it is doubtful whether in all these passages the word can be restricted to the meaning 'holy place' cp P<sup>91</sup>). This regular preference for different terms in different groups of passages, must have some cause, and suggests that the account of the Dwelling and its place in the centre of the camp has been substituted for an older delineation of the Tent of Meeting. Delicate indications of this may perhaps be found in the fact that Ex 29<sup>24</sup> represents the entrance of the Tent as the meeting-place between Yahweh and Moses 'to speak there unto thee' cp 33<sup>8</sup>, whereas in 25<sup>22</sup> the meeting place is before the ark containing the Testimony, and Yahweh speaks from between the two cherubim on the covering above. This is indeed recognized in Lev 16<sup>2</sup>, yet the same passage neglects the fundamental distinction of Ex 26<sup>33</sup>, and still calls the shrine of Yahweh's appearing the 'holy place.' It seems not impossible, therefore, that Ex 25-27<sup>19</sup> with its connected sections elsewhere may have been elaborated on the basis of an older account of the Tent of Meeting which preceded the institution of the Aaronic priesthood. It can hardly have belonged to P<sup>h</sup> which afterwards ignores it, though the close in Ex 29<sup>43-46</sup> is not without affinities with that collection. [In the description of the Dwelling it may be noted that the Tables bearing the Ten Words are designated as the 'Testimony' P<sup>161</sup>, and the ark which holds them is the 'ark of the Testimony' instead of the ark of Yahweh or of the covenant. The term 'covenant,' however, appears in (G) Ex 27<sup>21</sup> 31<sup>7</sup> 38<sup>15</sup> (H 39<sup>36</sup>) cp Josh 4<sup>16</sup>. Allowance must be made for accident or carelessness on the part of copyist or translator, especially in passages which on other grounds cannot be regarded as original; but there remains some possibility of genuine variation which may be due to differences in the incorporation of materials of different dates.] But Ex 25-27<sup>19</sup> still shows some further peculiarities. The form of 25<sup>26-7</sup> is that of an exhortation to the people by Moses, 'ye shall take' cp 35<sup>5</sup> (in <sup>3</sup> for 'of them' read 'of you'). This breaks the connexion of 28 and 'according to our present H, though in <sup>8</sup> (G) reads 'thou shalt make.' In <sup>9</sup> the pattern has yet to be shown to Moses, while in 40 26<sup>30</sup> 27<sup>8</sup> the vision is apparently over. On the signification of the parallel with Ezek 40<sup>4</sup> cp Intro XIII 3 i 130: the perfects in the subsequent passages may be fairly interpreted as futura exacta, 'when' Moses has descended from the mountain he is to conform to what "will have been revealed" to him' Kuenen, Hex 74, cp Driver, Tenses in Hebrew § 17, Ges-Kautzsch, Hebr Gram (Collins and Cowley 1898) pp 324 328 cp 408. It does not seem necessary, therefore, to resort to hypotheses either (1) of displacement (as though much of the instructions now given to Moses on the mount originally belonged to the period after his descent 34<sup>29</sup>.), or (2) of duplicate records, one of the vision and another of commands founded on the vision, cp Klostermann, Neue Kirchliche Zeitschr (1897) 318. The general view indicated above finds unexpected support in Klostermann's elaborate essay, which contains many interesting textual suggestions. But his interpretation of Ex 33<sup>7</sup> as the account of a single incident 245, and his ascription of the sections on the Dwelling to the age of Solomon 383, do not seem in any way tenable. Cp Nowack, Archäol ii 53., and Benzinger, Archäol 395..

20a This reference to the provision of oil for the ever-burning lamp breaks the otherwise orderly sequence of 25-29 cp 25<sup>6</sup>. It implies that the Tent of Meeting is ready, and the Aaronic priesthood installed in their sacred charge. Compared with Lev 24<sup>1-3</sup> Num 8<sup>1-4</sup> it seems to have been inserted later here for completeness. It is not reproduced in 35-40.

28<sup>1</sup> As the priesthood of Aaron alone is specified in 1<sup>4</sup>, the reference to his sons and the enumeration of their names may possibly be the additions of a later editor.

<sup>3</sup> In 3-5 it is possible that the compiler has added a supplemental passage after the type of 31<sup>6</sup> 35<sup>10</sup>. The enumeration in 4 does not follow the order of the subsequent sections, and the introduction of the plural 'they shall make' causes the same kind of confusion as has been already noticed in 25<sup>8</sup> 10. The opening of 6 should probably run 'and thou shalt make' cp 18 15 31 86 39.

28<sup>26</sup> This passage 26-28 seems to contain another account of the two rings <sup>23</sup> and their fastening on to the shoulderpieces. (5) omits.

30 M That is, the Lights and the Perfections.

passage and its parallels 29<sup>21</sup> Lev 8<sup>30</sup> the ritual seems to have been editorially conformed to the advanced standard.

42 Dillmann suggests that 42. may be an addition founded on Lev 6<sup>10</sup>; the linen breeches are not named in 29<sup>9</sup> Lev 8<sup>13</sup>. A slight linguistic confirmation is found in the opening formula <sup>u</sup> elsewhere only in 25<sup>19</sup>, itself perhaps doubtful.

29<sup>1</sup> The description of the ceremonies of priestly consecration introduces at once a number of the ritual terms peculiar to P whether in the limits of the Hexateuch, or in the wider range of the Old Testament. It has not been thought necessary to tabulate the details: the marginal figures in brackets denote the number of occurrences of each significant phrase, while occasional points of linguistic contact are further noted for general purposes of illustration.

29<sup>33</sup> 5 fill their hand: the words which follow seem to be an explanatory gloss.

36<sup>a</sup> Addis, Hex ii 268, treats 36. as an afterthought based on Lev 8. It may, however, be pointed out that Lev 8<sup>34</sup> regards the sevenfold atonement as already prescribed, and this involved purging the altar 16 cp Ex 29<sup>12</sup>, so that some instructions of this kind might be expected in Ex 29.

38 The directions concerning the continual burnt offering 38-41 are hardly in keeping with the commands for the construction of the sanctuary and the consecration of the priesthood. They would seem more appropriate at the head of a ritual calendar, such as Num 28. There they are actually to be found 28<sup>3-8</sup> cp Lev 6<sup>8-13</sup>, but opinions differ as to which is the more original, and there are no decisive indications. The comparison, however, indicates that 'thou' in Ex 29<sup>33-41</sup> is not addressed to Moses as in 37 and 42. (On the relation of the passage to the covenant in Neh 10<sup>33</sup> cp Introd XIII 11β i 156.) The passage is treated here, therefore, as an editorial extension, to which a closing verse has been added in 42; note the transition from 'thou' to 'your,' and 'you' and 'thee' in the last clause (where 5 and Sam have sing alone), and the attempt to harmonize different views of the Tent of Meeting. Yahweh promises both to meet his people and to speak with Moses (cp 33<sup>9</sup>), at the door of the Tent of Meeting; but in 25<sup>22</sup> the meeting with Moses takes place in the innermost sanctuary, where the divine voice is to be heard from between the Cherubim above the ark. If 42 and 43 were originally discontinuous, 43 might be naturally regarded as the sequel of 37, the altar being the place where Yahweh met his people in the act of sacrifice.

39-41 M 5 between the two evenings.

43 Sam 'and they shall be sanctified,' 5 'and I will be sanctified.' Klostermann (Neue Kirchliche Zeitschr 1897 310) proposes to correct by Lev 10<sup>3</sup> וְקִדְּשִׁיתִי וְקִדְּשִׁיתִי 'and I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me.'

30<sup>1</sup> After the full close in 29<sup>43-46</sup> the instructions for an additional altar in front of the veil 1-10 have a supplemental look. The sections which follow appear to share the same character cp 11 17 22 34<sup>N</sup>. Various considerations confirm this view, eg (1) the phrase 'the altar' 27<sup>1</sup> implies that there was no other. This designation occurs not less than 100 times in P: but in the latest strata the distinction is marked in various ways cp 30<sup>28</sup> 31<sup>8</sup>. 38<sup>30</sup> Lev 4<sup>7</sup> &c. (2) There is no mention of the incense altar in the ceremony of atonement described in Lev 16, and the reference in 10 depends on the ritual there enjoined. (3) 'According to Lev 10 Num 16., the priests offered incense, not on an altar, but on pans or censers' (Addis). (4) Sam places 30<sup>1-10</sup> between 26<sup>35</sup> and 36; but 5 follows the order of 5. (5) The reference to the spices for the incense 25<sup>6</sup> which seems to presuppose 30<sup>7</sup> is an editorial insertion 25<sup>6N</sup>. Cp Introd XIII 10a. On the allied questions connected with the altars in the Temples of Solomon and Ezekiel see Stade, ZATW iii 168, and Nowack, Archäol ii 40.

10b This verse implies the rite described in Lev 16, where no mention, however, is made of the incense altar, cp 12-14 where it is expressly ignored. This section, therefore, must be regarded as posterior to that institution. On the place of Lev 16 in P cp 16<sup>18</sup>.

10c M Or, upon.

11 The poll-tax of half a shekel 13 practically rests upon the completed sanctuary and the census (Num 1) of which nothing has yet been said: and this anticipatory reference itself indicates its supplemental character. The tax is devoted to the service of the sanctuary, but it is not prescribed how often it is to be paid. In 2 Chron 24<sup>6</sup> the tax is plainly understood as an annual contribution. But in the covenant under Nehemiah Neh 10<sup>32</sup> only one-third of a shekel is demanded. Different explanations have been offered of this discrepancy. Kuenen and Cornill (with whom Addis agrees) suppose that the text represents a later stage of codification than the agreement under Nehemiah (a similar discrepancy may be noticed in the age at which the Levites were to begin to serve Num 8<sup>24</sup> and 4<sup>3</sup> 23<sup>30</sup>, cp 1 Chron 23<sup>24</sup>.), and that this section is a post-Ezran addition. For other suggestions cp Ryle, Ezr-Neh, in loc. The objection that a later scribe in incorporating this rule would have emphasized its annual character, seems partly met by the consideration that the 'service of the tent of meeting' for which the money was 'appointed' 16 was a permanent institution, obviously needing continuous support, and partly by the fact that the Jews themselves in accepting the Levitical arrangements as types for their regular guidance, actually did regard this as a yearly due.

17 The natural place for the instructions about the laver would have been in 27, after the directions concerning the altar 1-8; cp its position in the repetition 38. Its association here with other later items throws it into the group of secondary passages, but the opening words of 18 'And thou shalt make' cp 1 3 5 25 35, suggest that it was once continuous with some other passage. It may be noted further that there is no description of the size or design of the laver, while in other cases there is an abundance of precise detail.

pared for the discovery of the apostasy. It is certainly conceivable that the actual spectacle of it should have aroused a wrath before unrealized; but, as Bacon has observed, 'the fact remains that 15-24 would be a great deal simpler and more intelligible if 7-14 had not preceded.' The intercession in 9-14 is marked by special J phrases, e.g. 'face of the ground' 'repent' (of Yahweh) 12, but as it refers in 13 to a supplemental passage in Gen 22<sup>16</sup> it must be assigned to the harmonist (unless with Bacon 13 be ascribed to a subsequent hand, in which case the rest might be derived from J). But the whole interview is parallel in style and thought to another in Num 14<sup>11</sup>., where again there seem traces of later adaptation. On the whole, therefore, 9-14 is here treated as continuous. The introduction to it is found in 7., which has apparently replaced the account of the conclusion of Moses' stay in the mount preceding his descent 15. The verses were probably known to D in their present position cp Deut 9<sup>12</sup>.. It may be noticed that 9 which seems to make a fresh start is omitted by G. Steuernagel (Deut 33) ingeniously supposes that it has been introduced here from Deut 9<sup>13</sup>.

32<sup>12</sup> So 5. T earth.

<sup>25a</sup> The account of the massacre in which the Levites take Yahweh's side is difficult to harmonize with the rest of the narrative, for after so severe a punishment why should the people need further chastisement <sup>35</sup>? It is not clear what is the precise meaning of <sup>25</sup>, nor whether Moses pauses at the gate <sup>26</sup> on first entering the camp on the descent from the mount, or whether (after expostulating with Aaron 21..) he then takes up his position there to prevent the escape of the guilty people. Further obscurity shrouds the close of the incident <sup>29</sup>, where the tribe of Levi is apparently consecrated as the sacred tribe in consequence of its vigorous championship of Yahweh's cause. This is altogether different from the programme of P in 28: and it seems wholly unconnected with the arrangements of the Tent of Meeting described in E 33<sup>7-11</sup> where the care of the sanctuary is entrusted to the Ephraimite Joshua. These considerations suggest the derivation of 25-29 from J, who has already recognized the sacerdotal function, though the relation between the new Levites and the priests mentioned in 10<sup>22</sup> is nowhere explained. The ascription is not free from objection on grounds both of matter and form. Linguistically, the phrases 25 'broken loose' 'let them loose,' 27 'thus saith Yahweh God of Israel' 'every man his brother,' point to E; though in 28 'according to the word of Moses' the style of J is approached: no sharp lines, however, can be drawn around the possibilities of interchange in such expressions. More perplexing is the question, if 25-29 be drawn from J, what was its antecedent in that document? Did J also relate the calf-apostasy? There is no reason to think so, unless it be this passage itself, which would hardly have been introduced here by the harmonist unless its connexion in J had some affinities with its new setting in E. It seems to replace in the combined narrative the manifestation of the divine anger against Aaron, which must have been a feature in the original story cp Deut 9<sup>20</sup>. This circumstance confirms its assignment to J, but throws no light on its place in that document. Bacon conjectures that the offence thus punished was rather rebellion than idolatry; but there is no adequate evidence for any confident decision.

30 In 30-35 it is usual to see the sequel of E's narrative, and the margins show abundant points of contact with E's usage. There is still, however, some incongruity between 31. and 35. The implication of 34<sup>b</sup> is that the punishment is indefinitely postponed (the passage has been thought to refer to the fall of the kingdom of Israel Am 3<sup>14</sup>), and the immediate infliction of the plague in 35 is wholly unexpected. In allotting it to

J Bacon can only overcome a similar incongruity in relation to 25-29 by suggesting that R<sup>p</sup> has inserted 'people' for the original authors of the movement whom he identifies with Nadab and Abihu. It is further probable that 30-34 is a later expansion of the narrative. The metaphor of the 'book' only appears elsewhere in post-exilic literature: the developed consciousness of sin, atonement, and personal responsibility (cp Ezek 18) may belong to a more advanced order of theological reflexion. In 35 the awkward juxtaposition of the two final clauses seems to result from some editorial manipulation.

...<sup>7</sup> <sup>NL</sup> Now Moses used to take the tent and to pitch it without the camp, <sup>8</sup>afar off from the camp; and he called it, The tent of meeting. And it came to pass, that every one which <sup>9</sup>sought Yahweh went out unto the tent of meeting, which was without the camp. <sup>8</sup> And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the Tent, that all the people rose up, and stood, every man at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the Tent. <sup>9</sup> And it came to pass, when Moses entered into the Tent, the <sup>m</sup>pillar of cloud <sup>n</sup>descended, and stood at the door of the Tent<sup>n</sup>: and [Yahweh] spake with Moses. <sup>10</sup> And all the people saw the pillar of cloud stand at the door of the Tent: and all the people rose up and <sup>o</sup>worshipped, every man at his tent door. <sup>11</sup> And Yahweh spake unto Moses <sup>p</sup>face to face, as a <sup>q</sup>man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: <sup>2</sup>but his <sup>h</sup>minister Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, <sup>9</sup>departed not out of the Tent.

<sup>17</sup> And Yahweh said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast <sup>4</sup>'found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name. <sup>18</sup> And he said, Shew me, I pray thee, thy <sup>9</sup>glory. <sup>19</sup> And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and will <sup>u</sup>proclaim the name of Yahweh before thee; and I will be <sup>g</sup>'gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will <sup>h</sup>'shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy. <sup>20</sup> And he said, Thou canst not <sup>2</sup>'see my face: for man shall not see me and <sup>3</sup>'live. <sup>21</sup> And Yahweh said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand

33<sup>7</sup> The sudden introduction of this description of the Sanctuary is in the highest degree surprising. 'The tent' <sup>7</sup> is evidently well known, but nothing has yet been said about it. For it is clear that this cannot be the Levitical Dwelling 25-29, though in 29<sup>42</sup> it is called the Tent of Meeting, (1) because the Dwelling has not yet been constructed cp 35-40, and (2) because the place of the Dwelling is in the centre of the camp, with the twelve tribes grouped round it Num 2. The Tent of Meeting, on the other hand, is outside, at a distance cp Num 11<sup>16</sup> 24-30 12<sup>4</sup>. Further, it is not served by the Levitical priesthood, but by the Ephraimite Joshua <sup>11</sup> Num 11<sup>28</sup>, whose presence in the Dwelling would have been forbidden under pain of death. The passage in the text, therefore, conceives the sanctuary in a manner absolutely incompatible with P, and must be drawn from a wholly independent source (cp Introd. VIII i 2 i 51). The only available sources are J and E, and the decision in favour of E is unanimous among the critics. No doubt it is possible that 7-11 Num 11<sup>16</sup>, 24-30 and 12<sup>4</sup>, all belong to the same group of narratives: while the association of Moses with Joshua cp 24<sup>13</sup> 17<sup>9</sup>, and the stress laid on prophecy, identify them with E. But if E described the usage of the sacred Tent, he must also have narrated its institution, and with it the construction of the ark. In the final compilation this section was no doubt set aside for the more elaborate representations of P. But it is a probable conjecture that such an account once followed E. The Levitical Dwelling is wrought out of the gifts of the people. The story of their voluntary offerings no doubt had its counterpart in the earlier source: and the statement that the children of Israel parted with their ornaments seems best explained by the application of them to the preparation of the Tent. A curious point of verbal contact is found in the employment of the same term 'spoiled themselves' which served earlier for the 'spoiling' of the Egyptians.

<sup>12a</sup> The expostulation of Moses in this passage seems directly connected with the command in 1-3. But it may be doubted whether the materials of 12-23 are now arranged in their proper order. The words quoted in 12 'Yet thou hast said' &c are not uttered till 17: either, therefore, 17 once stood before 12, or, if 17 is in its place, some other divine utterance must have preceded 12. The latter is the view of Bacon who unites <sup>3</sup> with 12 by means of Num 11<sup>10b-15</sup> and a conjectural passage containing the required phrase (it must be remembered that before the union of JE with P Ex 33-34<sup>28</sup> was followed immediately by Num 10<sup>20-12</sup>). Another suggestion is that of Kautzsch who proposes to translate <sup>14</sup> as a question, 'Shall (or must) my presence go with thee, and must I give thee rest?' while Dillmann regards 14-16 as the sequel of 31<sup>5-9</sup>, a suggestion which has the support of Driver. The difficulty may be partially met by a simple rearrangement of the verses; if 17 be transferred as the antecedent of 12, the prayer of Moses <sup>13</sup> 'Make me to know thy way' is answered by the promise 'My presence shall go with thee.' Of this 16 Moses desires immediate assurance, which Yahweh grants with the announcement <sup>19</sup> that he will make his goodness pass before him. But Moses, still urgent, prays that Yahweh will enable him to see his glory, his very self <sup>18</sup>. The prayer cannot be satisfied <sup>20</sup>, 'Thou canst not see my face' (the 'presence' of 15); but in the cleft of the rock he shall behold his back as Yahweh passes by 21-23. The more natural order would seem to be 17 12-16 19 18 20-23, leading directly to 34<sup>6-9</sup>.

34<sup>1</sup> At this point J's narrative of the Covenant 10-27 is introduced (cp 20<sup>22N</sup>), but in the present text it is combined with other matter which can hardly have belonged to it originally. It is evident that there is a close connexion between 6-9 and 33<sup>19</sup>, the solemn proclamation of 6, being the answer to the entreaties of Moses and the fulfilment of the divine promise. The scene in the cleft of the rock where Yahweh passes by 33<sup>22</sup> 34<sup>6</sup> declaring his own august titles, is in a different locality from the top of the mountain where he descends for Moses to stand with him and invoke his aid. But when these verses are removed, it would still seem that the preparation for the great theophany 1-5 is not in its original place. The resemblance to the passages assigned to J in 19 cp 2, with 10<sup>11b-13</sup> 20, makes it probable that the incident here depicted stood originally in close connexion with them, and constituted the core of J's account of the Sinai-revelation. The Covenant itself is obviously new; the opening words of 10 have no other covenant behind them. But the transpositions consequent on the union of J and E rendered it necessary to find another place for J's version of the 'Words of Yahweh' cp 28<sup>n</sup>; and it is here brought into connexion with a renewal of the Tables which had been broken in sight of the apostate Israel. The phrases which seem to have been inserted to effect this adaptation are printed in small type. From Deut 10<sup>1-5</sup> it may be plausibly inferred that the narrative also provided for the construction of the ark, this reference having been afterwards removed as inconsistent with 25 and 37 cp 33<sup>7N</sup>. It is, however, possible, so some critics have thought, that the directions concerning the stones may have been derived from E which must have contained an account of their replacement; to this suggestion of Kuenen's Wellh replies that if E did relate the restoration of the tables, the natural place would have been before the account of the sanctuary which contained the ark 33<sup>7</sup>. Others have suggested that as in 27 Moses is instructed to write the divine words, the original command ran 'thou shalt write,' which was afterwards altered to the promise 'I will write' in conformity with E's representation that the inscription on the stones was divine cp 31<sup>18b</sup> 32<sup>16</sup>. The sudden introduction of the name Moses after 44 lends a slight additional probability to the view that 1<sup>40c</sup> are foreign elements wrought into J's text 2 3 4 5.

5a So M. T and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of Yahweh.

5b M Or, Yahweh by name.

7 M See 20<sup>6</sup>.

9 Dillm is inclined to adopt Ewald's emendation 'and lead us' (n<sup>h</sup>hithānu for n<sup>h</sup>halthānu), with reference to the refusal of Yahweh to 'go up in the midst' of Israel 33<sup>8</sup> cp 33<sup>12</sup>. Dillm then finds the answer to the prayer of Moses in 33<sup>14-17</sup>, a connexion also favoured by Driver; cp 33<sup>12N</sup>.

10a The covenant in 10-27 is obviously parallel (cp 20<sup>22N</sup>) to the 'Words of Yahweh' in 23 which are solemnly adopted as the base of the Covenant in 24<sup>3-8</sup>. As it appeared, however, that the 'Words' had undergone considerable editorial manipulation and expansion, so it may be affirmed that the 'Covenant' of 34 has received various additions to the simplicity of its primitive form. This may be stated on general grounds of analogy, for example, with the Ten Words of 20<sup>1-17</sup>, an analogy recognized by the author (or implied by the editor) of 27-28: and it is confirmed by the observation of the occasional close parallels both in phraseology and thought with Deut cp 11-13 16, 21. The language of 10 is also not without features of apparently later date; the announcement to Moses of wonders transcending all human experience resembles similar vindications of the divine greatness by Moses to Pharaoh, in which there was reason to see a later hand, e.g. 9<sup>16</sup>: the phrase 'such as have not been created' finds, indeed, support in Num 16<sup>30</sup>, but has natural affinities with the language of later prophecy, e.g. Jer 31<sup>22</sup> Is 45<sup>7</sup> 48<sup>7</sup> &c (cp Cheyne, Introd to the Book of Isaiah 211 and 248); and 'work of Yahweh' is found elsewhere only in Deut 11<sup>7</sup> (cp 3) Josh 24<sup>31</sup> || Judg 2<sup>7</sup> Jer 51<sup>10</sup>. On the whole, though with hesitation, the chief part of 10 is assigned to the expander. Much other growth must probably be recognized if the description in 28 be applied to the original form of 10-27.

Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time appointed in the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt. <sup>19</sup> All that openeth the womb is mine; and all thy cattle that is male, the firstlings of ox and sheep. <sup>20</sup> And the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break its neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. <sup>21</sup> And none shall appear before me empty. <sup>22</sup> Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in plowing time and in harvest thou shalt rest. <sup>23</sup> And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, [even] of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the year's end. <sup>24</sup> Three times in the year shall all thy males appear before the Lord Yahweh, the God of Israel. <sup>25</sup> For I will cast out nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou goest up to appear before Yahweh thy God three times in the year. <sup>26</sup> Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover remain all night unto the morning. <sup>27</sup> The first of the firstfruits of thy ground thou shalt bring unto the house of Yahweh thy God. <sup>28</sup> Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk. <sup>29</sup> And Yahweh said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. <sup>30</sup> And he was there with Yahweh forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

24 The indications of Deuteronomic phrasology in this verse, 'cast out,' 'enlarge thy borders,' 'Yahweh thy God,' receive a curious confirmation from the fact that the worshipper who desires to 'see Yahweh's face' must go up. Does this mean to the central sanctuary at Jerusalem cp Deut 17<sup>2</sup>? Apparently, for it is provided that during his absence at the distant temple his land shall be undisturbed.

28a This verse seems the natural sequel of 10-27 and is so here printed. But it is not free from embarrassment. If the text of 27. is continuous, then the words of the Covenant are inscribed on the tables by Moses. On the other hand in 1 Yahweh promises to write the words himself. Can 28 and 1 be assigned to the same source? The suggestion already quoted in 1<sup>N</sup> for overcoming this difficulty seems certainly rather forced. It must, therefore, be regarded as conceivable that 28 is wholly or partially derived from another document, which can only be E. This view receives some support from two circumstances. (1) The words of the Covenant are called the Ten Words, a title which is elsewhere given to 20<sup>2-17</sup> cp Deut 10<sup>4</sup>: for reasons stated in 28<sup>EN</sup> it does not seem likely that this designation was also applied to J's Covenant (it may, however, be supposed that the appositional phrase is a later gloss). (2) A very early use of the words he wrote &c applies them unhesitatingly to Yahweh Deut 10<sup>4</sup>. D, therefore, could hardly have found them in a connexion in which Moses was the subject: in reading Deut 10<sup>1-4</sup> it does not seem possible to thrust in Ex 34<sup>10-27</sup> between <sup>3</sup> and <sup>4</sup>. As E reported the first tables to have been written by God 32<sup>16</sup>, it would be natural for the second pair to be in like manner divinely graven: and those critics who find traces of E in <sup>1</sup> and <sup>4</sup>, see similar indications in 28.

The questions suggested by this table are manifold; but (1) it may be well to start from the element common to J E and D, viz the solemn institution of a Covenant at Sinai (Horeb) between Yahweh and Israel. Yet the terms of this Covenant are not identical. In all three documents they are described as 'Words,' but the contents of the 'Words' do not agree. There is a close approximation between the Covenant-words of J and E, but the Ten Words of D are obviously independent. (2) The representation of D is definite and emphatic that the published legislation at Horeb was limited to the Ten Words. In Deut 5<sup>30</sup>, the people are dismissed to their tents, while Moses remains on the mount: 'but as for thee stand thou here by me, and I will speak unto thee all the commandment, and the statutes, and the judgements which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.' The new legislation which forms the substance of the Deuteronomic code, is thus conceived to have been communicated to Moses at Horeb, but first promulgated to Israel on the eve of their passage over the Jordan to take possession of the land of Canaan. But (3) while the greater part of the Covenant-words of J and E reappear later on in D among the laws delivered in the land of Moab, E contains in addition the Ten Words which D selects as the basis of the Horeb-covenant, and a book of Judgements besides, which is also largely reproduced at the end of the wanderings in D. It was long ago noticed by Goethe that according to the present arrangement of 34<sup>10-28</sup> the second tables contained another version of the Ten Words, and recent criticism has widely adopted this view. But that was seen to carry with it the implication that it was derived from a different source; and as soon as the Ten Words of 20 were definitely assigned to E, the Ten Words of 34 naturally fell to J. Accordingly (to go no further back than 1880) Dillm proposed to transfer 34<sup>11-26</sup> to the scene between Yahweh and Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and the seventy representative elders 24<sup>1-2</sup>; the feast upon the mount 9-11 then solemnized the ratification of the covenant. It is impossible here to review all the suggestions of reconstruction which have since been made, but two schemes require a brief exposition.

(1) In his treatise on the Hexateuch Kuen dwelt with much force on the evidences of a Deuteronomic redaction of the Sinai-Horeb sections of JE; and he pointed out that while D had used the Covenant-book of E ('Words' + 'Judgements'), he made no reference to its delivery to Moses or its acceptance by the people, and further that there was also no room in D for the Covenant-words of J at Sinai. From this he inferred that neither E's Covenant-book nor J's Covenant-words formed part of JE's account of the events at Sinai. Seeking a more suitable place for them originally, and observing that the contents of both codes were designed for the settled life of Canaan, he suggested that they had originally occupied in JE the place now assumed by D itself, viz the 'field of Moab.' The promulgation of the Deuteronomic 'Statutes and Judgements' is itself regarded as a second Covenant; it superseded both the Covenant-book and the Covenant-words; and if these were to be preserved at all, it was needful to find for them some other occasion. It was the work of E<sup>d</sup> to transfer them to the Sinai-Horeb period; and adapt them to the new setting. These were not, however, the only additions which the original narratives received. The Ten Words in 20<sup>1-17</sup> and the fabrication of the Golden Calf, were incorporated into E, when it passed from Ephraim and was expanded in Judea. The nucleus of the Horeb Covenant-story was found in 24<sup>1</sup>. 9-11 which Kuen ascribed to E<sup>1</sup>; the Covenant-book and the Covenant-sacrifice beneath the mount on which Moses died in Moab being fused together with the sacred Covenant-meal upon the Mount of God. Thus E's Horeb-scenes underwent successive enlargements in different stages of its history, the latest of all being the great transposition of the Covenant-book from the end to the beginning of the wanderings. The redistribution of Kuen has been enthusiastically adopted by Cornill and Krätzschmar. (2)

A very different reconstruction has been presented by Bacon. Distinguishing the Covenant-book of the older criticism into a collection of 'Judgements' and a book of the 'Words of Yahweh,' he accepts Kuen's theory of the displacement caused by union with D so far as concerns the 'Judgements': but this leaves the Covenant-words and ceremony still at Horeb. The main problem then before him is to determine the original places of the two Covenants in J and E. While, with Kuen, he sends the 'Judgements' of 21-23<sup>9</sup> forward to Moab, with Dillm he draws the Covenant-words of J back to 24<sup>1</sup>. 9-11 and regards them as J's version of the Ten Words. The Ten Words of 20<sup>1-21</sup> are left in their place: but if they constituted the sole contents of the Horeb-covenant of E (cp Deut 5), what occasion can be found for further Words and their deliberate ratification? These are viewed as a renewal of the Covenant-relation which has been broken by the great apostasy. The brilliant combinations of Bacon assume many dislocations in the existing narrative, but do not involve such wholesale transpositions as the proposals of Kuen; they save much more for the original material of the Sinai-Horeb revelation both in J and E. The two documents, according to Bacon, must have run here, as elsewhere, a closely parallel course: and the general harmony of their contents may be exhibited as under:—

Every reader of Bacon's elaborate expositions of this scheme must admire its boldness and skill. It does not altogether overcome the difficulty on which Kuen has laid so much stress, viz the Deuteronomic affirmation that the Horeb-legislation was limited to the Ten Words. Too much weight, however, must not be attached to this assertion in view of the free adaptation which can constantly be traced in D's use of older materials. But not only does it emphasize (in the case of E) a Covenant-renewal which D ignores, it also ascribes to the Ten Words of E a Covenant-character of which the narrative says nothing, yet it altogether neglects them when the Covenant is remade. Further, in identifying the Covenant-words of J with the Ten Words, it suggests by implication that those of E were of later date; for if they were known to J, why should he have substituted others for them? This is not a difficulty to the critics who, like the numerous writers already cited 20<sup>1N</sup>, regard the Ten Words of E as the product of the great prophetic movement of the eighth century, but it is an embarrassment to the view of their earlier origin. If the Ten Words in their simplest form are really of ancient use, it seems inconceivable that J should have produced a totally different code and called it by the same name. Apart from that designation (which may, after all, be a later and mistaken gloss) there is close concurrence between the terms of the two Covenants in J and E, rendering it probable that in the original documents they occupied similar places. Substantial agreement, with variations in terminology and order, is the natural mark of a common antiquity. It is in the last resort conceivable, therefore, that J and E both contained the Ten Words and the Covenant-story: in the union of JE one delivery of the Ten Words was found sufficient; and while E's version was retained, J's was set aside. however, did not resemble each other so closely as to be incompatible at a little distance, and both therefore were incorporated at different stages of the united narrative, undergoing further revision afterwards by R<sup>d</sup>. The Covenant-idea rose into prominence in reflexion on the past, and D, in embodying the materials of JE's 'Covenant-words' in the legislation of Moab may have transferred the conception with the title to the utterance in the hearing of the people at the Mount of God. (This view, however, seems less probable than that suggested in 20<sup>1N</sup>.) In the analysis in the text nothing further is attempted than the distribution of the narrative into its constituent elements. The reader must form his own judgement as to the processes through which they have passed on the way to their present combination. Cp for a different criticism Battersby, 'Exodus' in Hastings' DB i 810a.

34<sup>29a</sup> This section is closely allied to P, and seems the natural continuation of 31<sup>18</sup>. But it has not been assigned to P<sup>c</sup> without challenge, for Kuen observes that it 'presupposes the existence of the sanctuary that, according to P, has still to be built, and seems to place it outside the camp <sup>34</sup>. in common with 33<sup>7-11</sup>.' He regards it, therefore (Hex 76 332) as an addition from a much later hand. It is clear that <sup>34</sup>. implies the sanctuary, but there is no reference to its situation and it is difficult to know why it should be supposed to be outside. The narrative of P must have contained some mention of Moses' descent, and his communication of the divine instructions to the people. It is probable, therefore, that 29-33 belongs to it, while the expander may have added the particulars concerning the removal of the veil on occasion of Moses' attendance on Yahweh in the sanctuary, thus converting into a continuous phenomenon what was the exceptional result of his solemn communion on the mount. In this view <sup>32</sup>. which obviously anticipates 35<sup>1</sup>. in the present text, served as the earlier conclusion of the Sinai scene in P before the insertion of the great Repetition (cp 35<sup>1N</sup> and 4<sup>N</sup>) and <sup>34</sup>. is an addition of a later editor.

29<sup>b</sup> The awkward occurrence of the name Moses here (which Sam corrects into 'his') and the repetition of the clause 'when he came down from the mount' point to some kind of amalgamation, possibly from the narrative of J.

35<sup>1</sup> The Sabbath-law in 1-3 is often regarded as a part of the great Repetition of the instructions for the preparation of the Dwelling cp 31<sup>12-17</sup>. But the title 'these are the words' &c suggests a longer series of injunctions than the commands in 2.; and of these 2 only is actually contained in 31<sup>15</sup>, 3 being entirely independent. It is probable, therefore, that this was the beginning of a more extensive collection, and does not stand in its original place. At the close of 3 (5) adds the phrase 'I am Yahweh.' If the words are genuine, it becomes almost certain that the passage has been editorially transposed cp Lev 23<sup>3</sup>. <sup>2</sup> M See 31<sup>15</sup>.

The criticism of this section was first undertaken in 1862 by Dr J Popper in his treatise Der Biblische Bericht über die Stiftshütte. His main results have been accepted by Kuenen, who has discussed them in his Hexateuch pp 76-80 332. The chief points on which he lays stress are—(1) the incorporation in their proper order of the secondary sections in 30-31<sup>11</sup>: thus the altar of incense 39<sup>1-10</sup> is described after the ark, table, and lampstand, which stood within the Tent; and the laver 30<sup>17</sup> is named after the altar of burnt offering 38<sup>8</sup>: this rearrangement implies a hand at least as late as the addition of 30-31<sup>11</sup> to 25-29. But (2) it can be shown to have been still more recent, for the account of the half-shekel tax and its purpose differs in 38<sup>24-31</sup> from that in 30<sup>11-16</sup> cp 38<sup>25N</sup>. This conclusion (3) is confirmed by divergences of phraseology in the Repetition; thus 36<sup>10</sup> 12, 22 has אִתָּהּ אֶל אֶחָד מֵאֵלֶיךָ 'one to another,' for אֶל אֶחָד מֵאֵלֶיךָ 26<sup>3</sup> 5. 17 cp Sam 26<sup>3</sup> &c. It is further (4) supported by indications of diversity of authorship in 35-40 (with which Lev 8 = Ex 29 must be combined), e.g. 40<sup>27-32</sup> anticipates the account of the consecration of the priests Lev 8, and their first sacrifice Lev 9: and in 39<sup>1-31</sup> the formula 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' recurs seven times, though not previously employed in 35-38. It is (5) in harmony with this general view of prolonged redactional activity that ⑤ should display such marked peculiarities of dislocation, curtailment, or omission: the text of the Repetition could not have been definitely fixed. Moreover, the phenomena of translation are unexpected: technical terms in the Repetition are sometimes rendered by fresh words, and not by their counterparts in the preceding sections: why should such changes have been introduced if the same translator had been at work? and if a new hand took up the task, was it not because new material called for incorporation in the Greek version? Popper, therefore, boldly concluded that 35-40 did not assume its final form until after the preparation of ⑤ had been begun, and this view is favoured by Kuenen, though it may be doubted how far the variations of rendering suffice to justify the conclusion (cp parallel phenomena in Num 3-4). Apart, however, from this particular inference the generally late character of 35-40* is further indicated (1) by the circumstance that the account of the breastplate of judgement 39<sup>8-21</sup> includes alike in ⑤ and ⑥ the duplicate passage which ⑤ omitted from 28<sup>13-30</sup>; and (2) by the remarkable parallel between the institution of the new ritual order and the ancient cosmic order. The sevenfold 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' 39<sup>1-31</sup> (cp 40<sup>19-32</sup>) matches the sevenfold 'and it was so' and God saw that it was good' of Gen 1; the finished work is inspected by Moses 39<sup>43</sup> and draws forth his blessing cp Gen 1<sup>31</sup> 28 2<sup>3</sup>. Such a parallel seems to belong to the age which witnessed the beginnings of Rabbinical speculation (cp Jos, Antt iii 7 7, Philo, Vit Mos iii 6 ff).

<sup>20</sup> <sup>L</sup>And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses. <sup>21</sup> And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, [and] brought Yahweh's offering, for the work of the tent of meeting, and for all the service thereof, and for the holy garments. <sup>22</sup> And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, [and] brought brooches, and <sup>e</sup>earrings, and signet-rings, and <sup>a</sup>armlets, all jewels of gold; even every man that <sup>h</sup>offered an <sup>h</sup>offering of gold unto Yahweh. <sup>23</sup> And every man, with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' [hair], and rams' skins dyed red, and sealskins, brought them. <sup>24</sup> Every one that did <sup>h</sup>offer an <sup>h</sup>offering of silver and brass brought Yahweh's offering: and every man, with whom was found acacia wood for any work of the service, brought it. <sup>25</sup> And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, the blue, and the purple, the scarlet, and the fine linen. <sup>26</sup> And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun the goats' [hair]. <sup>27</sup> And the rulers brought the <sup>h</sup>onyx stones, and the stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; <sup>28</sup> and the spice, and the oil; for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense. <sup>29</sup> The children of Israel brought a freewill offering unto Yahweh; every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all the work, which Yahweh had commanded to be made <sup>h</sup>by the hand of Moses.

<sup>30</sup> <sup>ML</sup>And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, Yahweh hath called by name Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah; <sup>31</sup> and he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; <sup>32</sup> and to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, <sup>33</sup> and in cutting of stones for setting, and in carving of wood, to work in all manner of cunning workmanship. <sup>34</sup> And he hath put in his heart that he may <sup>h</sup>teach, both he, and Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan. <sup>35</sup> Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of workmanship, of the <sup>h</sup>engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any workmanship, and of those that devise cunning works. <sup>36</sup> <sup>1</sup> And Bezalel and Oholiab shall work, and every wise hearted man, in whom Yahweh hath put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all the work for the service of the sanctuary, according to all that Yahweh hath commanded.

<sup>10</sup> <sup>ML</sup> And he made the table of acacia wood: two cubits [was] the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof: <sup>11</sup> and he overlaid it with pure gold, and made thereto a crown of gold round about. <sup>12</sup> And he made unto it a border of an handbreadth round about, and made a golden crown to the border thereof round about. <sup>13</sup> And he cast for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that were on the four feet thereof. <sup>14</sup> Close by the border were the rings, the places for the staves to bear the table. <sup>15</sup> And he made the staves of acacia wood, and overlaid them with gold, to bear the table. <sup>16</sup> And he made the vessels which were upon the table, the dishes thereof, and the spoons thereof, and the bowls thereof, and the flagons thereof, to pour out withal, of pure gold.

<sup>17</sup> <sup>ML</sup> And he made the candlestick of pure gold: of beaten work made he the candlestick, even its base, and its shaft; its cups, its knops, and its flowers, were of one piece with it: <sup>18</sup> and there were six branches going out of the sides thereof; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side thereof, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side thereof: <sup>19</sup> three cups made like almond-blossoms in one branch, a knop and a flower; and three cups made like almond-blossoms in the other branch, a knop and a flower: so for the six branches going out of the candlestick. <sup>20</sup> And in the candlestick were four cups made like almond-blossoms, the knops thereof, and the flowers thereof: <sup>21</sup> and a knop under two branches of one piece with it, and a knop under two branches of one piece with it, and a knop under two branches of one piece with it, for the six branches going out of it. <sup>22</sup> Their knops and their branches were of one piece with it; the whole of it was one beaten work of pure gold. <sup>23</sup> And he made the lamps thereof, seven, and the tongs thereof, and the snuff-dishes thereof, of pure gold. <sup>24</sup> Of a talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

<sup>38</sup> <sup>ML</sup> And he made the altar of burnt offering of acacia wood: five cubits was the length thereof, and five cubits the breadth thereof, foursquare; and three cubits the height thereof. <sup>2</sup> And he made the horns thereof upon the four corners of it; the horns thereof were of one piece with it: and he overlaid it with brass. <sup>3</sup> And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, the fleshhooks, and the firepans: all the vessels thereof made he of brass. <sup>4</sup> And he made for the altar a grating of network of brass, under the ledge round it beneath, reaching halfway up. <sup>5</sup> And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grating of brass, to be places for the staves. <sup>6</sup> And he made the staves of acacia wood, and overlaid them with brass. <sup>7</sup> And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal; he made it hollow with planks.

made the sockets to the door of the tent of meeting, and the brasen altar, and the brasen grating for it, and all the vessels of the altar, <sup>31</sup> and the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the gate of the court, and all the pins of the Dwelling, and all the pins of the court round about.

<sup>8</sup> <sup>ML</sup>And he made the breastplate, the work of the cunning workman, like the work of the ephod; of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. <sup>9</sup> It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being double. <sup>10</sup> And they set in it four rows of stones: a row of sardius, topaz, and carbuncle was the first row. <sup>11</sup> And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond. <sup>12</sup> And the third row, a jacinth, an agate, and an amethyst. <sup>13</sup> And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their settings. <sup>14</sup> And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names; like the engravings of a signet, every one according to his name, for the twelve tribes. <sup>15</sup> And they made upon the breastplate chains like cords, of wreathen work of pure gold. <sup>16</sup> And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings; and put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate. <sup>17</sup> And they put the two wreathen chains of gold on the two rings at the ends of the breastplate. <sup>18</sup> And the [other] two ends of the two wreathen chains they put on the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, in the forepart thereof. <sup>19</sup> And they made two rings of gold, and put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, upon the edge thereof, which was toward the side of the ephod inward. <sup>20</sup> And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two shoulderpieces of the ephod underneath, in the forepart thereof, close by the coupling thereof, above the cunningly woven band of the ephod. <sup>21</sup> And they did bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be upon the cunningly woven band of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; <sup>as</sup> <sup>as</sup> Yahweh commanded Moses.

The Book of Leviticus forms an important part of the Priestly Code. In the chronology of the Hex it comprises the body of legislation imparted to Moses in the month between the erection of the Dwelling Ex 40<sup>17</sup> on New Year's Day at the opening of the second year after the Exodus and the first census, for which instructions were given on the first of the second month in the same year Num 1<sup>1</sup>. When its legislative contents are examined, it is seen that they fall into groups, in which the most clearly marked are 1-7 11-15 and 17-26. At 9 the narrative continuation of Ex 29 seems to be resumed; but this element again falls into the background in 10. The study of the several groups reveals the fact that they are not entirely homogeneous with themselves or with each other. The first is concerned with sacrifice; the second deals chiefly with the laws for the preservation of ritual cleanness; while the third has secured the name of the Holiness-legislation cp Introd XIII 8 i 143, its varied contents being again and again summed up under that conception. On the general features of the other two cp ibid 9 i 152. By common consent the oldest materials are to be found in P<sup>h</sup>; they can be to a certain extent disengaged from the framework in which they are now incorporated; and in some sections, such as the Calendar of the Feasts 23, or the Jubile-law 25, they can be separated from the later legislation with which they are now combined. That this union had been effected at the time of the promulgation of Ezra's law-book has been argued Introd i 138, on the basis of a comparison of Lev 23<sup>34</sup> with Neh 8<sup>14</sup> cp ibid 156. It is probable also that the mass of priestly teaching comprised in 1-7 and 11-15 had also found its place by the same date in the great code of P. Whether the repetition of Ex 29 in 8 was also included may, however, be doubted: and similar uncertainty must affect 16 cp Introd XIII 118 i 156-7, and 27 ibid XVI 38 i 179. In studying the significance of the code historically, the distinction between the age of a usage or custom and the date of the written law which prescribes it, must be always maintained: this work is concerned only with the attempt to fix the literary relations of the documents and their constituent elements. Cp Driver and White, Lev in Haupt's SBOT 57.

<sup>11a</sup> The first legislative group 1-7 contains a comprehensive account of the offerings to be brought to the Sanctuary. In its present position this section interrupts the connexion, for the consecration of the priests in 8-9 should follow Ex 35-40 as Ex 29 succeeds 25-28. To what precise editorial method this is due, whether Ex 35-40 and Lev 8-9 were inserted later on either side of the sacrificial code in Lev 1-7, or whether the code was subsequently placed in close relation with the account of the completion of the sanctuary, cannot be precisely determined. But in its existing form the group is certainly later than P<sup>8</sup> cp 4<sup>1N</sup>. The conspectus of its contents shows that it is itself composite. Broadly speaking, it falls into two unequal divisions 1<sup>2</sup>-6<sup>7</sup> and 6<sup>8</sup>-7<sup>36</sup>, which show a certain parallelism of contents,

The order in the two sections is not identical, nor is their matter the same. The second group must be regarded as supplementary to the first: it is designed mainly for the priestly officials 6<sup>9</sup> 25 contrasted with the lay worshippers 1<sup>2</sup> 4<sup>2</sup>; and it is concerned largely with the sacred dues. For differences of detail see the Analysis and the table of Laus vol i. Attention may also be called to the large group of cultus terms and formulae, the constant repetition of which is characteristic of the legal style of P: thus, Aaron's sons 12<sup>1</sup>, atonement 25, without blemish (perfect) 123, bring near (offer, present) 18<sup>a</sup>, burn 37, burn with fire 38, clean 42, guilt offering 118<sup>1</sup>, heave offering 118<sup>2</sup>, holy 86 &c, kill 100, lay his hand on 102, meal offering 118<sup>b</sup>, oblation 118<sup>b</sup>, offering made by fire 118<sup>c</sup>, sacrifice of peace offerings 118<sup>1</sup>, sin offering 118<sup>1</sup>, soul 146<sup>a</sup>, sprinkle 148, sweet savour 158, unclean 167, wave offering 118<sup>1</sup>, work 177: introductory formulae, Yahweh spake . . . saying 185<sup>a</sup>, speak unto . . . 185<sup>b</sup>, if any one sin 190, this is the law . . . 188. The descriptions of ritual acts are again and again cast in the same mould, as the marginal references will show. On the relation of the priestly teaching (P<sup>h</sup>) to P<sup>8</sup> cp Introd XIII 9 i 152.

<sup>5a</sup> In 1-3 'the priest' occurs eleven times, and 'Aaron's sons, the priests' or an equivalent phrase, eleven times. It seems more natural to regard the plurals as interpolated than as original, for why should each paragraph revert to the singular 9 12, 2<sup>2</sup> &c? In 9 13 the singular is actually preserved; (5) converts all the verbs 'kill' 5 'flay' 'cut' 6 'kill' 11 'cut' 12 into plurals, assigning all these functions to the priests, and 'wash' 9 13 (cp Sam 9) is altered to match. The formula of P<sup>8</sup> 'Aaron' or 'Aaron and his sons' is here replaced by the peculiar phrase 'Aaron's sons the priests' 5 8 11 2<sup>2</sup> 3<sup>2</sup>. This appears to be an adaptation of the simple term 'the priest' 9 12 13 &c by prefixing the designation 'Aaron's sons' and turning the singular 'priest' into the plural. In one case, however, the unique description 'Aaron's sons the priest' 7 points to the origin of the combination. ((5) and Sam, however, read 'the priests,' which is adopted by Kautzsch, Driv-Wh, and Addis.) These and other facts (cp 7<sup>1N</sup>) confirm the suggestion that the substance of 1-3 is earlier than P<sup>8</sup>, but the editing later.

15b Ct 11b: the order of the words in 5 'upon the altar round about that is' &c makes it probable that the local description has been added.

7 This direction to kindle a special fire seems to conflict with the ordinance for maintaining a perpetual fire on the altar 6<sup>8-13</sup>: Kalisch regards it, therefore, as belonging to an antecedent ritual stage. The view of Knobel, repeated by Dillm, that the author here contemplates only the first burnt offering seems sufficiently met by the remark of Kalisch that the precepts of the chapter are altogether general in their application. If this view is correct, the regulation supplies another testimony to the relative antiquity of the substance of this section.

14 A supplement, as the title in 2 only contemplates 'herd and flock.' Note that here 'the priest' kills the bird; on the subject in 5 cp Dillm-Ryss 'the offerer,' and Driv-Wh more probably 'one of the attendants at the temple.'

21 The word minhah, rightly rendered here 'meal offering,' from its invariable usage in P, is in J a generic word for offerings of any sort cp Gen 4<sup>3-5</sup>. Its place is taken in P for this sense by the word qorban, rendered in this verse and usually 'oblation.' Cp 118<sup>b</sup>.

4 The passage 4-16 is marked as supplementary, as (1) it is merely a more detailed duplicate of 1-3, and (2) the use of 'thou' and 'ye' stamps it as distinct from the rest of 1-3 which is couched in the third person (but cp 8). In 13 it has affinity with P<sup>h</sup>.

8 8 'and he shall bring,' which harmonizes with 8b 'and he shall present it' 5. Perhaps the reading of MT וְהָיָה אֵת הַזֶּה was originally וְהָיָה אֵת, the letter ה having been accidentally anticipated. In the last clause it is customary to understand the priest as subject; but the priest's action only begins in 9, and the context points to the worshipper. In that case 8 may be regarded as part of an editorial amalgam.

<sup>51</sup> This chapter has been regarded as an appendix to 4. But there are no clear indications of late date like those in 4 (cp 6 with 4<sup>28-31</sup>). On the other hand the passage in 5-6<sup>7</sup> is rather a collection of fragments (cp 14 61) of different origin and date on the sin and guilt offerings (see vol i Laws). The oldest nucleus seems to lie in 5<sup>1-6</sup>, because of the absence of ritual direction, and the greater individuality of style. In 1 the cause of guilt is by no means parallel with the error of inadvertence 4<sup>2</sup>. The accumulation of different cases in 1-4 ct 4<sup>3</sup> 13 22 27, the phrase 'bear his iniquity,' and the stress on 'uncleanness,' point to affinity with P<sup>h</sup>: while the absence of any definite distinction between sin and guilt offerings implies that the use of the terms was not yet fully fixed. <sup>67b</sup> M Or, for his guilt. <sup>14</sup> In 14-16 and 61-7 guilt offerings are required as well as restitution in full with one-fifth more, in cases of withholding what is due to Yahweh and to a neighbour. These passages seem later than 5<sup>1-6</sup> as they distinguish the guilt offering clearly, but they are somewhat similar in form. The same may be said of 17-19 which now interrupts the sequence of the 'trespass' sections, and seems to be itself supplemental to 5<sup>1-6</sup>. The discovery of guilt incurred unconsciously <sup>4</sup> is met by confession and atonement. But what of the cases where subsequent calamity or misfortune (cp Dillm in loc) suggested the presence of guilt for which the sufferer could not account <sup>17</sup>? These also required a proper guilt offering, and a ram is demanded <sup>18</sup>, ct the goat of 4<sup>23 28</sup>.

2b M. Or, pledge.—5†.

8 The section 6<sup>8</sup>-7<sup>38</sup> which closes the sacrificial code, might be called 'a manual for priests, edited afresh with several additions.' The original constituents are easily separated by following the clues afforded by the introductory formulae 'this is the law of . . .' and the terms of the colophon 7<sup>37</sup>. Both the order of subjects, and the framework in which they are set, show that this collection is not based on 1-6<sup>7</sup>, or by the same author as 1-3. But the ease with which the references to P<sup>g</sup> can be eliminated, seems to indicate that in its original form this section was, like 1-3, older than P<sup>g</sup>. The phrases that appear to be from an editor's hand are again marked by small type.

9a This is the first occurrence of a phrase which occurs altogether seventeen times cp 188<sup>b</sup>, but always in passages already isolated on other grounds as part of a collection of

9b It may be a question whether the law in 9-13 has not been modified by the editor. It seems, though somewhat obscurely, to refer to the daily burnt offering, and in particular to that of the evening. If this was only instituted very late, as some critics have suggested cp Nowack, Hebr Archäol ii 222, this paragraph must be either late or revised. Some authorities, chiefly on this ground, ascribe the whole section 6<sup>8</sup>-7 to P<sup>g</sup>. But the analogy of the remaining paragraphs confirms the belief that the general case of the burnt offering was originally in the writer's view cp 12<sup>b</sup>.

9c M. Or, on its firewood.

14 Ct 'the priest' 10-12. In inserting 'sons of Aaron' the editor has left the singular in the next verse.

all the frankincense which is upon the meal offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, as the memorial thereof, unto Yahweh.

<sup>81</sup> M See Ex 29.—This chapter is usually regarded as an expansion of an earlier and briefer account of the fulfilment of Ex 29, just as Ex 35-40 may be founded on a shorter version of the construction of the Dwelling Ex 25-28 30 31. This passage, however, is earlier than Ex 35-40 as it recognizes only one altar. Its laborious reproduction of Ex 29, with a few slight modifications, e.g. <sup>3</sup> <sup>20</sup>, <sup>28</sup> <sup>31</sup>, shows that it cannot well have formed part of P<sup>5</sup>. The formula 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' serves as a kind of refrain <sup>9</sup> <sup>13</sup> <sup>17</sup> <sup>21</sup> <sup>29</sup> (cp <sup>5</sup> <sup>34</sup>) Ex 39<sup>1</sup>: on its secondary character cp Introd i 155<sup>a</sup>.

the consecration of the priesthood, such as has been expanded into Ex 35-40 and Lev 8. The terminology of the ritual in this chapter coincides entirely with that of P, cp Aaron and his sons, sin offering, burnt offering, peace offering, meal offering, make atonement, offer the oblation, slay, pour, sprinkle, burn, &c. That the ritual is that of P<sup>8</sup> is inferred (1) because it implies only one altar <sup>7-10</sup> 12-14 &c; (2) the blood is not brought into the inner sanctuary cp 4<sup>3N</sup>; (3) the ritual of the sin offering <sup>8-11</sup> 15 is less detailed than that in 8<sup>14-17</sup> cp 4<sup>1-21</sup>, and similarly with the burnt offering <sup>12-14</sup> cp 8<sup>18-21</sup>.

10<sup>1</sup> The materials of 10 are composite, and the regulations in 6-20 seem to have been somewhat loosely thrown together, though 6, 12-15 and 16-20 are attached to the main incident in 1-5. This appears due to P<sup>g</sup>, where it stands as the immediate sequel of 9<sup>24</sup> as an illustration of the danger of unauthorized cultus. 10<sup>8</sup> A fragment, marked by a closing formula <sup>9b</sup>, but slenderly connected with the text (note the phrase 'that ye die not' <sup>9</sup> cp <sup>6</sup>). Laws directly addressed to Aaron are rare Num 18<sup>1</sup> 8 20*. For the prohibition in <sup>9</sup> cp Ezek 44<sup>21</sup>.

108 Another fragment attached to the preceding connexion with any apparent link. On the lack of grammatical connexion cp Driver and White (Leviticus in Haupt's SBOT 5 p 28). The passage shows affinity with P<sup>t</sup> in its emphasis on teaching cp Introd XIII 9a i 52. D also lays stress both on distinctions of clean and unclean Deut 14<sup>18-20</sup> and on the priestly duty of instruction 24<sup>8</sup>. cp 33<sup>10</sup>.
10b 11. So M. T and that ye may.

12 This paragraph, also a fragment, is joined to the context by the introductory clause. The rest recalls 614-18 25-29 <sup>76</sup> by its provision for eating the holy food 'in a holy place' 13 'in a clean place' 14. Nowhere else is the peculiar expression 'a holy place' defined, without reference to the Tent of Meeting, as 'beside the altar' 12. For the substance of the paragraph cp 780-84. Owing to the completeness with which the earlier matter has been assimilated with the later form, the regulation is here ascribed to P<sup>s</sup>.

11<sup>1</sup> The subject of sacrifice with which the priesthood is first concerned 1-10 now makes way for the treatment of uncleanness and purification 11-15 under four heads, animals 11, child-birth 12, leprosy 13-14, issues 15. The laws are addressed partly to Moses alone, as in earlier sections 12<sup>1</sup> 14<sup>1</sup>, partly to Moses and Aaron together 11<sup>1</sup> 13<sup>1</sup> 15<sup>1</sup>. In its present position the series interrupts the sequence of 16<sup>1</sup> on 10<sup>1-5</sup>, and its place is rather due to the compilers of the complex whole of the Priestly Code than to the author of P<sup>s</sup>. Its existing form, therefore, may be due to P<sup>s</sup>, and this view is supported by occasional signs of acquaintance with regulations of the sacrificial code, as in 12<sup>6-8</sup> 14<sup>13</sup>. 21. 15<sup>14</sup>, 29.. But like 1-3 5-6<sup>7</sup> and 6<sup>8</sup>-7, the legislation in 11-15 seems to contain materials for the most part older than P<sup>s</sup>, worked up in a later setting. Occasional resemblances to P<sup>h</sup> have led some critics to ascribe them mainly to that source. Thus Driv-Wh assign 11-23 41-47 to P<sup>h</sup>. It seems probable, however, that the whole law is more complex cp 2N; and it is here placed together with the cognate laws in 12-15 with the group of priestly teaching P<sup>t</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> The contents of the law of the clean and unclean animals are in a high degree complex. Two distinct themes run through it (1) uncleanness as affecting food, and (2) uncleanness as produced by touch. Interpreters differ as to whether the second half of the colophon <sup>47</sup> refers to both or only to the first. Those who restrict <sup>47</sup> to cases of permitted and prohibited food regard the section on uncleanness by touch <sup>24-40</sup> as an addition cp <sup>24N</sup>. If, however, <sup>47a</sup> is not simply repeated in <sup>47b</sup> the colophon recognizes both branches of the main subject. But even the regulations dealing with lawful and unlawful foods are not homogeneous. <sup>2b-8</sup> exhibits the distinction of clean and unclean as in Deut 14<sup>3-8</sup>. But in <sup>9-23</sup> this nomenclature is dropped, and all forbidden creatures are sheḡeꞥ 'abomination' (cf 'abominable thing' Deut 14<sup>3</sup> ʾet ḥāhal), the subject being resumed after the section on defilement by touch <sup>24-40</sup> with another class of 'creeping things' which are also sheḡeꞥ <sup>41</sup>. The structure of the whole group may be thus tabled:—

I Forbidden Food:

(2) Abomination, creeping things on earth 41-42. Here it is clear that the section on contamination by touch II interrupts the list of edible creatures which are shéleg I (2). But why should the list of prohibited animals fall into two unequal divisions marked by different terminology, while the entire list in Deut 14<sup>4-20</sup> is on the basis of clean and unclean? And why, in the second group concerning touch should only two classes be mentioned out of five recognized in the first? The difficulties do not end here. Some of the abomination passages seem to contain doublets. In 9 <sup>a</sup>waters is followed, as though analytically, by <sup>a</sup>seas and <sup>a</sup>rivers; but 10 begins 'And whatsoever hath no fins and scales in the seas and in the rivers,' while 12 runs 'Whatsoever hath no fins nor scales in the waters': are these from the same hand? So 10<sup>b</sup> exhibits parallel clauses, and 23 <sup>h</sup>really repeats 20. This duplication is particularly clear in 43-45, where 44<sup>a</sup> forms a close to 43 (following on 41), and 44<sup>b</sup> repeats with variations the commands of 43 (cf especially 'creeping thing that creepeth' and 'creeping thing that moveth'). The whole law, therefore, seems to be compiled from at least two sources, (1) concerning clean and unclean, whether in food or contact, (2) concerning 'abomination' in eating, a group already showing traces of composite character. To (1) may be assigned, roughly, 2b-8 39. with later supplements in 24-38, these extracts being only portions of a larger original. (2) 9-23 41-44<sup>a</sup> (with perhaps 45) are derived from a similar series of food-laws, based on the conception of 'abomination,' and showing marked affinity with P<sup>b</sup>, note the parallel 'ye shall not make your souls abominable' 43 and 20<sup>25</sup>, with the phrases

11<sup>3a</sup> The list of animals in 3-23 is closely parallel to that in Deut 14<sup>3-20</sup>, but there is no general agreement on the precise relation of one to the other; Dillm, for example, maintaining the priority of Lev as of P in general, and Driver, Deut 165, regarding the Deuteronomical law as the earlier. See Deut 14<sup>3N</sup>.

24 It is possible that 24-31 is distinct from 2b-8, as it looks like an elaboration of the prohibition in 8, which would hardly have appeared there if a continuation of the same law had contained these fuller directions. The language of 26. is not entirely parallel with that of 3., and does not cover the cases of the camel, coney, or hare. An additional class, the 'creeping things,' is also mentioned with a list of names found nowhere else. The law further prescribes means of cleansing, whereas no mode is specified for removing the defilement contracted by eating forbidden food. Further, it has been argued that 47<sup>a</sup> does not refer to uncleanness by touch. Driv-Wh observe that no reference is made to 24-40 in the subscription 46.

13<sup>1</sup> The laws dealing with leprosy 13-14 are obviously incorporated in the general Priestly Code cp 13<sup>1</sup>. &c, but they are by no means homogeneous, and the extreme elaboration of treatment prescribed throughout, suggests that the practice in these matters was not codified early. Deut 24<sup>8</sup> shows that there was a recognized procedure laid down by the priests, but the omission of any detail (ct 14<sup>3-20</sup> on clean and unclean) may perhaps indicate that it was yet unwritten. On the successive additions to the original leprosy code see the notes, and in particular 14<sup>54</sup> 57<sup>N</sup>. The vocabulary naturally shows a considerable number of peculiar terms. Where these terms only occur in 13 14, the number of occurrences is marked in brackets without further detail, or additional instances elsewhere are separately enumerated ; thus <sup>2</sup> 'plague' (61) Gen 12<sup>7</sup> Ex 11<sup>1</sup> Deut 17<sup>8</sup> 21<sup>5</sup> 24<sup>8*</sup>. The general phraseological affinities with P, apart from the ideas of 'clean' and 'unclean,' are noted in the usual way. Phrases appearing only in these chapters, such as 'shut up seven days' 13<sup>4</sup>, 21 28 31 50 54, belong to the general manner of P, but need no special attention.

<sup>2</sup> The first section comprises 2-4<sup>6</sup>, and treats in 2-28 of 'a rising or a scab or a bright spot,' and in 29-44 of a 'scall' 'upon the head or upon the beard.' The whole stress is laid upon the detection and discrimination of leprosy. If the sufferer be a leper, then 46<sup>6</sup> regulates his conduct. If 'the plague' be not leprosy, then the priest is to 'pronounce him clean' <sup>6</sup> 13 17 23 28 34 37, and 'he is clean' 13 17 37, or 'and he shall wash his clothes and be clean' <sup>6</sup> 34. No hint is given that anything more is needed, and the reference to the washing of the clothes almost seems to exclude the ritual of 14 in whole or in part (see further 14<sup>18</sup>). The slight traces of the influence of P<sup>c</sup> are indicated in 2<sup>b</sup> and 46<sup>b</sup>, where the Aaronic priesthood and the camp are unexpectedly introduced : with <sup>2</sup> cp 14<sup>2</sup>.

46 Cp 4 where the sufferer is to be 'shut up' i.e. probably confined to leper's quarters near the village or town. The following clause is an editorial adaptation.

47 This section, on leprosy in a garment, seems to proceed from the same cycle of priestly toroth as 2-46. But it has apparently been extracted separately and attached by another hand to the preceding section, for it has a colophon of its own 59, and the reference to it in the colophon 14<sup>55</sup> which includes 2-46 is plainly a gloss.

48 M Or, woven or knitted stuff (and in 49. -).

55 M J whether it be bald in the head thereof, or in the forehead thereof.

14<sup>1</sup> This second division of the 'law of leprosy' seems neither to fit any part of the preceding context, nor to be itself homogeneous. (1) The first portion is occupied 1-32 with the ritual of cleansing a leper who is 'healed' 3, but who is not 'pronounced clean' 7 till the ceremonies of 4-7a have been performed, and further personal purifications are then needed, washing of clothes, bathing, and shaving the hair 8a, before it is said that 'he shall be clean.' Yet 13 requires only the priestly verdict and the washing of clothes e.g. 13<sup>6</sup>. But (2) after seven days a second and sacrificial ceremony is needed before it can be said 20 that 'he shall be clean.' These sections are thus separate in source from 13, and disclose distinct elements within themselves.

2 The opening section 2-8a is complete in itself, and bears every appearance of recording ancient practice. It might be conjectured that the compiler of 13 thought the ceremonial superstitious and unnecessary, and so refrained from enjoining it. The antiquity of the ritual may be upheld on various grounds: (1) for an Arabic parallel cp Wellhausen, Skizzen iii 156, W Robertson Smith, Religion of the Semites 402: (2) the alternate vagueness and precision of the directions is unlike the style of other enactments; the priest 'shall command to take' 4, but the person to whom the command is addressed is unnamed cp 5; 'two living clean birds,' a unique phrase; 'cedar wood' &c, only in Num 19<sup>6</sup>; the slaughter of one of the birds 'in an earthen vessel over living water,' two unique conditions: (3) the rite is regarded as so incomplete that it needs an elaborate supplement cp 8bN. The title 2a belongs to the section cp and ct 11<sup>46</sup>. The use of the phrase 'this is the law...' in a title and not in a colophon supplies another indication of the distinct origin of 14<sup>2-8a</sup> (cp 11<sup>46</sup>N).

But in 9-20 an atonement sacrifice is further required. The ritual terminology, meal offering, offer, guilt offering, wave, sin offering, most holy, burnt offering, atonement, belongs to the general manual 1-7, the rite in 14<sup>6</sup> corresponding to that of Ex 29; one peculiar term, however, a 'log of oil' <sup>10</sup>, occurs in no other law. It appears probable, therefore, that later usage developed a different ceremony of purification, and the compiler has combined the two. <sup>10</sup> 5 rare in P cp 32<sup>no</sup>.

because (a) the term 'the altar' <sup>12</sup> 18 20 25 is used throughout as though it were the only one: (b) the censer is employed <sup>12</sup>, so as to exclude the presence of the golden altar, only the great altar of burnt offering having fire always upon it <sup>62</sup>. (cp Dillm); 'before Yahweh' <sup>12</sup> as in <sup>15</sup> 13 cp 4<sup>6</sup>; (c) the ritual in no degree transcends Ex 29 or Lev 9, where it is parallel with them. The ritual terminology includes the usual words burnt offering, sin offering, make atonement, present, cleanse, uncleanness, hallow, &c.

(2) An introductory verse has been prefixed, connecting the need for atonement with the death of Aaron's sons, and by a series of systematic alterations and additions <sup>3</sup> 6 11 14 17<sup>b</sup> &c, a special element of atonement for Aaron and his house has been introduced throughout the course of the ritual. As this is not mentioned in <sup>16</sup> and <sup>20</sup>, this personal element would seem not to be original, and this impression is confirmed by the awkwardness of the allusions in <sup>3</sup> and <sup>6</sup>. The words and clauses suspected as additions are, as far as possible, printed in small type. But the assimilation is very thorough, and may be very early. On the other hand, the sevenfold aspersion <sup>14</sup> 19 usually belongs elsewhere to P<sup>s</sup> (<sup>4</sup> 6 17 81<sup>11</sup> 14<sup>7</sup> 16 27 51 Num 19<sup>4</sup>); and the increase in the personal dignity and importance of the high priest points in the same direction. (3) The ceremonial is to be repeated at the consecration of every high priest <sup>32n</sup>. (4) It is made an annual fast day <sup>29n</sup>.

successors should do as he had done. But the generality of the terms and the absence of any Aaron phrases indicate that it is not original. The terminology also has changed: 'the holy place' <sup>16</sup>, <sup>20</sup> has become the 'holy sanctuary'; 'the priests' <sup>33</sup> take the place of 'himself and his house' <sup>11</sup> <sup>17b</sup>. The regulations are here viewed as an earlier insertion than <sup>29</sup>, and as applying to the day of consecration: but they might have been added later to provide the omitted reference to other acts of atonement, and to declare explicitly the continuous right and duty of the high-priest.

34<sup>b</sup> This statement must have belonged to the earlier injunctions, where a single ceremony was imposed upon Aaron, without mention of any repetition.

17<sup>1</sup> At this point the so-called 'Holiness Code' 17-26 begins. It is here designated P<sup>h</sup>. On its name and general characteristics see Introd XIII 8 i 143. The variety of its contents, and its frequent repetitions, show that it has been compiled from various sources, not always in complete agreement with each other. It has been the task of R<sup>p</sup> to harmonize as far as possible any conflicting data; thus in 17 the opening words bear the plainest marks of P<sup>s</sup>, and must, as elsewhere, be assigned to the editor who combined P<sup>h</sup> with P<sup>s</sup>. The association of priesthood and laity in legislative address is exceedingly rare in P cp 2218†.

3 Like D Deut 121, P<sup>h</sup> opens with a ritual law 3-2. This is itself in two parts 3-7 and 8, which have a common aim. 3-7 in its present form lays down three rules: (1) no slaughter of domestic animals may take place without sacrifice; (2) sacrifice may be offered only to Yahweh; (3) and only at the central sanctuary. 8 repeats (2) and (3). The whole has been adapted to the camp-scheme of legislation by R<sup>p</sup>, to whom the enunciation of the third principle seems due. P<sup>h</sup> does not elsewhere speak of the Dwelling in its technical sense, or refer to the 'entrance of the tent of meeting.' The recurrence of this phrase in both laws 3 and 9 shows it to be editorial. For comparison with other codes see Lev as noted in the margin. On the general implications of this enactment and its relative antiquity compared with the fundamental conception of D see Introd i 146, and cp Driv-Wh, Lev 85 (only available when the Introd and notes had been completed): the slight difference in the view of the stages of the text turns on the use of the 'Dwelling.'

4 T tabernacle, cp 54<sup>c</sup>. The parallel with the 'tent of meeting' seems to make it clear that this term is here used in the sense of the Levitical sanctuary, and not in its ideal meaning cp 15<sup>31</sup>. In that case the clause is an editorial addition founded on Ex 25...: P<sup>h</sup> only knows of the sanctuary 21<sup>12</sup>.

6 The whole of this verse may be secondary, cp the ritual in 5. On the other hand the ceremony was no doubt ancient, though its specification is hardly after the manner of P<sup>h</sup>.

8 The peculiar opening of this verse 'and to them thou shalt say,' addressed to the laity cp 20<sup>2</sup>, suggests that the following passage has lost some of its original context. In 8 there seems clearly a doublet of 20-7: the instructions are rather more developed; the law applies to non-Israelites as well as to the house of Israel; the altar gifts include burnt offering as well as peace offering 5. In 10-16 it must be doubtful whether the prohibition of eating with blood cp 19<sup>26</sup> is continuous with 3-7 or with 8. The reference to the strangers in 10 13 points to the same source as in 8; in any case, the editorial work in 10-16 is better assimilated than in 3-7, and cannot be isolated with certainty.

11ab M <sup>h</sup> soul.

<sup>24</sup> For this concluding exhortation cp 38. The whole passage implies considerable expansion, in the adaptation of earlier materials. Thus the verbs in 25 are really all in the past tense, 'and the land was defiled... and I visited... and the land vomited'... as though a passage of retrospect had been converted into prophecy cp 20<sup>23</sup>. Perhaps 24 and 30 are nearest to their original form. In 29 the editor drops the conception of national punishment for individual doom cp 17<sup>11</sup>...

19<sup>2</sup> The collection of laws in 19 is introduced and closed by brief exhortations showing affinities with 18<sup>3-5</sup> and 24-30. But the contents are not confined to a single topic, and their variety clearly points to diversity of source. Thus (1) some precepts are repeated 3b and 30a, 14b and 32b, 15a and 35a; (2) the peculiar term עֲמִית 'neighbour' 11 15 17 alternates curiously with the common עַר 13 16 18; (3) the ritual passage 5-8 does not seem to belong by subject to the rest of the religious moral and social legislation of the context; its incongruity with 7<sup>15-18</sup> makes it indeed improbable that it is an editorial insertion of the type of 21, but it may rather be taken as belonging to a group of cultus laws of which traces remain in 21-22 retouched by a later hand; (4) the alternate predominance of the singular 'thou' 13-19 and the plural 'ye' 2-12 and 23-37 seems partly due to difference of origin. The materials may be to some extent of ancient date, as they have analogies with regulations in several codes where the same subjects have been treated; thus (1) with the Ten Words <sup>3</sup>. 11.; (2) with the Book of Judgements (Ex 21-23) 15, 33.; further points of contact exist (3) with J 4 9 20 29, and (4) with D 9 10 13 15 19 26 28 31 33 35: while the phraseology often resembles that of Jer and Ezek (besides P<sup>b</sup> words) 7 13 15, 18 20 35. The signs of arrangement into groups are discussed by Briggs, Higher Crit 245 ff, and more fully by Paton, Orig Form of Lev 17-19; analogy has been found in 3-8 to the laws of the first table of the Decalogue; and in 9-20 to those of the second.

20<sup>2a</sup> A fresh collection of precepts for the laity is here opened. The contents are less varied than those of 19, as they deal only with different forms of spiritual and sexual unchastity 2-7 and 8-21. The order of the opening words 'And to the children of Israel thou shalt say' recalls 17<sup>7</sup> cp the subsequent formulae with 17<sup>13</sup>. The prohibition of the Molech rites 20-5 seems like an expansion of 18<sup>21a</sup> (which appears out of place in its present context); while 6 finds a supplement in 27 which has been left out of the collection and added afterwards at the close. (The fundamental conception of 27, however, is not quite identical with that of 6. RV 27 disguises the fact that the 'familiar spirit' is inside the man or woman: Driv-Wh render 'in whom is a ghost or a familiar spirit': and 6 (cp 19<sup>31</sup>) 'if there be any one that regards ghosts or familiar spirits.') The first section closes at 7.

4 There appears to be a contradiction between 2 and 3, inasmuch as 2 prescribes death by stoning, while 3 implies some form of divine judgement. Is this due to careless expression on the part of a single writer (Wellh) or to diversity of source (Dillm)? It is difficult to decide (a third alternative being that 3 and 4 are independent supplements to 2, here editorially amalgamated), but in 4 it is probably correct to find traces of editorial emphasis and expansion; the doom announced in 3 on the single sinner extending in 5 to his family and all who share his guilt. The style of 4 much resembles that of the editorial work in 17.

20<sup>3</sup> The introduction to a fresh section cp 22 18<sup>5</sup>. In <sup>9</sup> it is natural to see a parallel to E's 'judgement' Ex 21<sup>17</sup>; <sup>10</sup> opens a series of laws summed up in the most general form in the seventh of the Ten Words. The relation of <sup>10-21</sup> to 18<sup>6-19</sup> has been variously estimated: are they from the same hand (Driver) or have they been drafted separately, and, in the latter case, if they are derived from a common original, which is the earlier? The table of prohibited intercourses in 18 contains no penalties, but the order seems better adjusted and the cases are more numerous than in 20, which provides no parallels to 18<sup>7</sup> 10 17b 18. This is so far an indication of later origin. Further, the series in 18<sup>6</sup> is introduced by a general principle (unless this be the work of the author of 2b-7) which is then specifically applied in all possible directions in uniform style. But in 20<sup>10</sup> there are some delicate suggestions of combined sources, or of occasional addition, eg the duplicate clauses in 10<sup>ab</sup>, the unexpected 'you' and 'thou' in 14b 15b-16 19, and especially the varying formula in 19a which corresponds to the regular form 18<sup>7</sup>.. These signs perhaps imply an earlier draft modified by later editorial activity, 20<sup>19</sup> owing its retention to the fact that it specified the punishments which were omitted in 18.

21<sup>1</sup> The general legislation in 18-20 is followed in 21-22 by a group of laws concerning the maintenance of priestly holiness, and the nature of the sacred gifts. This short code presents many of the phenomena already noticed. Thus (1) the hand of the later editor acquainted with the requirements and institutions of P<sup>s</sup> is often traced in allusions such as those in 21<sup>10</sup> 12 22. And (2) diversity of original materials may be partially inferred from frequent alternations in form, in the use of the second and third persons, the singular and the plural, &c. The hortatory element characteristic of P<sup>h</sup> is less prominent, and the brief close 22<sup>31-33</sup> sounds rather like an imitation of earlier phraseology in 18-20 which has lost the ring of direct address to the nation characteristic of such passages as 18<sup>24</sup>.. 20<sup>22</sup>.. The ritual regulations appear to belong to a less developed stage than P<sup>s</sup> cp Introd i 149, and occasional points of contact occur with the laws of J and E. Peculiarities of phrase may be noticed in the expressions 'bread of God' and 'I am Yahweh which hallow you' 21<sup>15</sup> 15 23 22<sup>9</sup> 16 32 (also 20<sup>8</sup> Ex 31<sup>13</sup>). The little corpus has doubtless undergone successive revisions: the more obvious additions are indicated in small type. The frequency of these may partly result from the similarity of subject to the bulk of P<sup>s</sup>. The superscription in 21<sup>1</sup> implies that the laws are addressed to the priests, but cp 8.

<sup>24</sup> So 5. T so. The passage is peculiar, for this formula is usually elsewhere introductory. In 23<sup>44</sup> the word 'spake' (so 5) is followed by an object, the set feasts.

<sup>22</sup> This clause stands in 5 after 'my holy name,' and the awkward order points to an interpolation. As the law does not really begin till 3, and the words 'say unto them' look back to 1-2a, there is some reason for regarding the whole of 2 as part of the introductory formulae; but it does not seem after the manner of the editor who combined P<sup>h</sup> with P<sup>e</sup> thus to reproduce the phrases of the shorter code.

parallel in 21, marked, however, by curious differences of phraseology. Thus each is concerned to secure victims for sacrifice free from any defect. But instead of a general principle covering all cases, the precept is distributed over two groups, (1) burnt offering, (2) peace offerings, yet each of these comprises the same subdivisions, viz vows and freewill offerings. The terminology of the two regulations shows marked differences within the parallelism; cp the opening formulae 18*b* ... אִשִּׁי יָקִיר and 21 אִשִּׁי כִּי יָקִיר; 19 'that ye may be accepted' 20 'acceptable for you' and 21 'to be accepted'; 20 'herd, sheep, and goats' and 21 'herd or flock'; 20 'whatsoever hath a blemish ye shall not offer' and 21 'there shall be no blemish therein.' It may be further noted that the changes in number and person in 18*b*-20 are unusually frequent, being due, apparently, to successive redactions. The affinities of 18*b*-20 are with 17; those of 21-24 with 21*r*<sup>17-20</sup>. Neither passage seems adequate to the later ritual standard. (1) makes no reference to other classes of burnt offering such as the sin and guilt offerings, or the daily and seasonal sacrifices; while (2) ignores the thanksgiving cp 29 which in 711. constitutes a third division of the peace offerings.

29 The law in 29. has sometimes been refused to P<sup>h</sup> as being a supplement to 19<sup>5</sup>. to make it accord with 71<sup>5</sup>-18. But the phraseology agrees with the rest of P<sup>h</sup> and the verb 'to sacrifice' 25 19<sup>5</sup> is not common elsewhere in the laws of P<sup>e</sup> or P<sup>s</sup> (only Lev 9<sup>4</sup>), while it is characteristic of JED and P<sup>h</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> 7. The proximity of 29. to 27 which is obviously related to E's demand Ex 22<sup>30</sup>, led Wellh to compare the regulation for the consumption of the thanksgiving sacrifice with another rule in E. Ex 23<sup>18</sup>. Baentsch, Heil Ges 102, suggests that the triple division in Num 15<sup>3</sup> corresponds to that in Lev 7, so that the technical 'thanksgivings' are equated with the sacrifices at the set feasts, and thus Wellh's identification is justified. In this view 29. is founded on an early ritual, and the classification of 71<sup>11-18</sup> represents the amalgamation of ordinances represented at a prior stage by 221*b*-24 29. 19<sup>5</sup>-8.

231 The compiler of the Hex here takes up again the main document P<sup>e</sup>, with a calendar of sacred seasons. This calendar, strictly speaking, begins at 4; the form of 2*b* is awkwardly framed in view of the subsequent announcement; in 38 the sabbaths are not included among the 'set feasts'; and it is probable that 2*b*-3 is a redactional addition, by which the sabbath with its 'holy convocation' was incorporated among the series of the yearly festivals cp 38. But this series is set forth in terms that are obviously not homogeneous. The paragraphs introducing the successive regulations begin with a common formula 1 9 23 26 33, to which an addition is made in four out of the five cases (cp 26) instructing Moses to convey the divine command to the people. But the contents of the calendar are not set forth with the same uniformity. It has been largely interpolated from P<sup>h</sup>, the passages inserted having in their turn undergone more or less modification and addition to suit their new setting. The Passover and Feast of Unleavened Bread 5-8, and the Feast of Trumpets or New Year's Day 23-25, belong wholly to P<sup>e</sup>, to which are further referred 21 closing the ordinances for Pentecost, and 39-38 regulating the Feast of Booths. These are assigned to fixed days; 'holy convocations' are appointed, and 'servile work' prohibited, while an 'offering made by fire' is usually prescribed. Similar characteristics are found in 26-32 (with the formula 'do no manner of work' 23 cp 8); but cp 27*r*. The extracts from P<sup>h</sup> are identified by various marks: (1) they do not fit the title in 4 (cp 2*b*) nor the

15 This clause, with P's favourite word תמים, seems to interrupt the reckoning which is only completed in 16. Possibly the original text was simpler, and has been enriched with extra detail to give greater apparent precision.

22 An insertion from 19<sup>3</sup>, suggested perhaps by the phraseology of 10, but obviously out of place.

23<sup>27</sup> In accordance with the view adopted in 16 in which the day of atonement as a recurrent sacred season is regarded as a later development, this section is ascribed to P<sup>s</sup> : and it may be noticed that the formula in 26 is briefer than those in 23 24<sup>a</sup> and 33 34<sup>a</sup>, while the opening "howbeit" resembles that in 39 cp Ex 12<sup>15</sup> ("even") 31<sup>13</sup> Num 14<sup>9</sup> (cp Driv-Wh).

39<sup>b</sup> This clause seems designed to provide the seven days' feast of P<sup>h</sup> cp 40<sup>b</sup> 41. (Deut 16<sup>13-15</sup>) with the holy convocation on the eighth day according to P<sup>s</sup> 36. Cp Introd i 131.

43 The historical reminiscence agrees ill with the purely agricultural nature of the festival just ordained, and there is no trace of this clause in Neh 8. It may possibly be suggested by the identical name Succoth Ex 12<sup>37</sup> 13<sup>20</sup> Num 33<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>10</sup> The narrative here introduced illustrates the law against blasphemy. But the group of laws in 15b-22 contains several other enactments 17-21 on injuries to man and beast which are wholly unrelated to the particular offence previously described. The passage is evidently composite; and 15b-22 is in the style of P<sup>h</sup>. The story is probably a midrash framed to bring out what seemed the salient point. Ct 11<sup>a</sup> and 16b 5.

25<sup>1</sup> Three separate themes are embraced in 25 and their interweaving renders analysis difficult: (1) the sabbath year 2b-7 19-22; (2) the principle of redemption applied (a) to the land 25 and (β) to the persons of the Israelites 35-40a 47; (3) the application of the jubile alike to the sale and tenure of land, and the ownership of Israelite slaves. The regulations for the sabbath year are seen at once to belong to P<sup>h</sup>, but the allotment of the remaining passages is by no means easy. Apart from the general probability that the series of laws has been again and again revised, the legislation respecting both land and slavery presents so many resemblances on the one hand to P<sup>h</sup> and on the other to P<sup>s</sup> or P<sup>e</sup> as to show that materials from both sources here lie side by side. The chief problem concerns the jubile. The analysis adopted regards the jubile in its present form as a sign of distinct and later authorship. The introduction of it 8-13 interrupts the account of the sabbatical year, and the institution is nowhere mentioned in writings earlier than P<sup>e</sup>. But at the same time the context in which it first appears presents many affinities with P<sup>h</sup> cp 8<sup>N</sup>, so as to render it possible that the idea of a period of seven sabbaths of years was an early development out of the original sabbath year, which was then adapted and expanded by the later religious jurists into the jubile system. The whole complex of laws would then have passed through three main stages: (1) the sabbath year of P<sup>h</sup>; (2) the seven sabbaths of years of P<sup>h</sup>; (3) the jubile of P<sup>s</sup> with its applications to the previous regulations of P<sup>hh</sup> concerning sale and purchase of land and slaves; the product, represented by P<sup>hh</sup>s, has received some additions 32-35 of a still later kind.

indications, for while some phrases clearly presuppose P<sup>s</sup>, others are plainly modelled on the basis of P<sup>h</sup>. Thus 8<sup>b</sup> more formally repeats 8<sup>a</sup>; 9<sup>b</sup> doubles 9<sup>a</sup>; 13 recalls 10<sup>b</sup>. But 8<sup>a</sup> starts from 23<sup>15</sup>; 11<sup>b</sup> and 12<sup>b</sup> are not unrelated to 4<sup>b</sup> 5 7; and a presumption is thus established that P<sup>h</sup> once contained a secondary or imitative institution carrying the sabbath year a step further. It may be conjectured that this was the hallowing of the fiftieth year, with a proclamation of liberty 10<sup>a</sup>. This term was applied by Jeremiah to the manumission of slaves 34<sup>8</sup>., and by Ezekiel to the reversion of land to its original owner 46<sup>17</sup>; in the text it includes both. If the further conjecture be adopted that the tenth of the seventh month was the old new year's day, the distinction between 9<sup>a</sup> and 9<sup>b</sup> is somewhat heightened. The original law would then be discovered in 8<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>a</sup> 10 (except 'it shall be a jubile unto you') 11<sup>b</sup> 12<sup>b</sup>, the rest being jubile additions, together with the identification of the date with the day of atonement in P<sup>s</sup>. Cp the section in Bantseh's Heil-Ges, the notes of Addis and Driv-Wh (the latter treating the jubile for the land as original in P<sup>h</sup> but ascribing to a later hand the extension to persons), together with the archaeological treatises of Benzing and Nowack, and Harford-Battersby in Hastings' DB art 'Sabbatical and Jubile years'.

23 This verse is assigned to the jubile legislation, partly phrasologically cp 50, partly by analogy with the case of the Israelite slave 41. For 'stranger and sojourner' cp Gen 23<sup>4</sup> Num 35<sup>15</sup>. The theological idea involved in the declaration that the land is Yahweh's and could not therefore be permanently alienated, is somewhat different from that expressed in the gift of the land to Abraham and his descendants 'for an everlasting possession' Gen 17<sup>8</sup> 48<sup>4</sup> cp Lev 14<sup>34</sup> Deut 32<sup>49</sup>: it probably, therefore, belongs to an advanced stage of priestly law. 'Sojourner' is properly 'dweller' or 'settler' and has nothing to do with the 'sojourning' of Israel in Egypt 19<sup>34</sup> (= 'strangers' and so often). The 'stranger' (5) 'sojourner' here is Yahweh's 'guest,' as in Ps 15<sup>1</sup> 61<sup>4</sup> 5.

26 The appearance of the legal formula 'and if a man' here and in 29 contrasted with 25 35 points again to the later jubile law. But as in 8-13 the provision may have a basis in P<sup>h</sup>.

29 The distinction here introduced affecting city property has the air of a legal refinement resting on no earlier material.

32 The latest addition of all: the Levites have not yet been mentioned, still less has anything been said about their endowment with separate cities cp Num 35<sup>1-8</sup>.

33a M Or, a man redeem from the Levites.

33b M Or, after 5, redeem not.

34 M Or, pasture lands.—156.

35a M Or, relieve.

35b The form of the phrase is peculiar a stranger and sojourner and he shall live...; 5 5 render 'shall uphold him as a stranger and a sojourner,' and 5 adds 'and thy brother shall live with thee' as in 36b. Dillm suggested that the words 'stranger and sojourner' are a gloss, with which Driv-Wh concur.

27<sup>1</sup> The law for the discharge of vows 2-25 with supplemental limitations 26-29 and the appendix on tithes 30-33 plainly belong to the general collection of P, as the familiar terminology shows. It is here assigned to P<sup>s</sup>, as it recognizes the institution of the jubile 17 cp 25<sup>10</sup>, and in the regulations about tithe it appears to include live stock as well as the agricultural produce specified in Num 18<sup>27</sup>. But it would further seem that the whole series of cases has undergone a very curious revision. The introductory formula describes the law as addressed to the children of Israel. The recurring phrase 'thy estimation' implies, however, a more specific restriction. It is commonly supposed that the pronoun designates Moses: but (1) it can hardly be imagined that Moses would use this form in communicating instructions to the people, and (2) the person addressed is identified with 'the priest' 12<sup>b</sup>, where 5<sup>u</sup> reads 'according to thy estimation the priest (or O priest) so shall it be.' Yet in 23 'thy' has again a different meaning, and the matter is complicated by the unusual appearance of the definite article as well as the pronominal suffix, <sup>u</sup>הערכה. These facts, compared with 5<sup>u</sup> which throughout omits the pronoun, suggest that the original reading was 'the estimation,' and that the insertion of the pronoun is of later date to harmonize with 5<sup>15</sup> (addressed to Moses alone), the scribe having failed in 23 to remove the last trace of the impersonal form.

The Book of Numbers starts from the situation described at the close of Ex, and assumed throughout Lev. This is maintained as far as Num 10<sup>10</sup>. In 10<sup>11</sup> the narrative of the March to Canaan is resumed and the story is carried forward till Israel is victoriously encamped beside the Jordan. The later narrative will be found to be combined from the same sources as Ex, JE and P. A cursory examination of the materials comprised in the earlier section 1<sup>1</sup>-10<sup>10</sup> shows that they are not all of the same class, though it will be seen that they belong to the general collection of P. The section opens with a census of the tribes, and a description of their organization in the camp 1-2. In 3-4 the appointment of the Levites (hitherto unnamed in the priestly legislation save in Lev 25<sup>32</sup>) is recorded, and their functions in connexion with the portable sanctuary are carefully detailed. The laws of 5-6, though adapted to the camp-scheme of legislation, are really independent of it: on the other hand, the offerings at the dedication of the altar 7, and the account of the consecration of the Levites 8, belong to P's special conception of the sanctuary and the holy tribe called to its service. But these alternating groups of narrative and law will be found to belong to different layers of P, while they are only loosely combined in their present order. For example 7<sup>1</sup> is attached to Ex 40, and ought chronologically to precede 1<sup>1</sup>: while 9<sup>1</sup> starts from a date anterior to 1<sup>1</sup>, though 9<sup>11</sup> carries the passover-celebration of the ritually unclean beyond it. These indications point in the direction of later compilation, for which P<sup>s</sup> (whose careful numerical adjustments in other places are thus defied) has served as the general groundwork, into which additions might be from time to time inserted. Cp Intro XIII 10.

1<sup>1</sup> The census in 1, and the order of the tribes around the Dwelling so elaborately presented in 2, are obviously in intimate relation. But it may be doubted whether this relation implies unity of authorship. The tribes are enumerated three times, but the series all vary. (1) In 1<sup>5-15</sup> the order is nearly identical with that of Ex 12-4: Levi is omitted, and the number twelve is completed by the insertion of 'the children of Joseph,' Ephraim and Manasseh, before Benjamin. (2) In 1<sup>20-42</sup> Gad occupies Levi's vacant place. (3) In 2 Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun take the lead. These diversities are most easily explained by the supposition that 1<sup>20-47</sup> and 2 are independent expansions of P<sup>s</sup> cp 1<sup>20N</sup> and 2<sup>18</sup>. (For another explanation see the forthcoming vol on Numbers by G Buchanan Gray in ICC.)

It is further probable that 1<sup>1-19</sup> has itself undergone amplification. The divine address to Moses 1 begins with the plural <sup>2</sup> 'take ye,' and 3 shows that Aaron is now included. But the formula 'take the sum' cp 84<sup>c</sup> occurs elsewhere only in passages assigned independently to P<sup>s</sup>. The original command probably opened 'Number . . . ' cp 19b 3<sup>15</sup>. The simpler style of the census of Levi may be accepted as the type of P<sup>s</sup>, and the supplemental clauses in 2 may be plausibly ascribed to a later revision. As in other passages in which Aaron has been subsequently set beside Moses (e.g. 1<sup>44</sup> 3<sup>39</sup> 4<sup>1</sup>), his appearance in 3<sup>b</sup> is probably due to the same desire to associate the head of the ecclesiastical polity with the leader of the nation. But that the original narrative of P<sup>s</sup> regarded the census as the act of Moses may be inferred from 19b cp 3<sup>15</sup>, 40 42, and ct 3<sup>39</sup> 4<sup>15</sup>. The exact determination of the amount of additions in 1<sup>1-19</sup> is matter of much difficulty; but secondary elements may also be traced in 17-19<sup>a</sup>, where the phrases 'expressed by name' 'declared their pedigrees' are unique in P, and the concluding 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' (cp 19<sup>N</sup>) recurs continually in P<sup>s</sup>.

<sup>21</sup> As P<sup>s</sup> doubtless stated the result of the census, so a description of the arrangements of the camp may be attributed to him with practical security. But it seems to have been replaced by the organization presented in 2, which enumerates the tribes in a fresh series compared with 1. The present delineation is evidently composite cp 4<sup>n</sup>. The centre of the whole on the march as in the camp is the sanctuary <sup>17</sup>; and the entire passage is in close relation with 10<sup>12-28</sup>. 33<sup>a</sup> reproduces <sup>147</sup> with the addition of the secondary formula 'as Yahweh commanded Moses'; while 34 shows the hand of the expander, beside the simpler closes of 1<sup>54</sup> Gen 6<sup>22</sup> Ex 7<sup>6</sup> 12<sup>28</sup> 50. It may be conjectured, accordingly, that 2 is founded on materials derived from P<sup>s</sup>; the princes' names agree with 1<sup>5</sup>, and the numbers with 1<sup>20</sup>., but the data have been thrown into fresh combinations.

<sup>4</sup> The directions for the order of the tribes in camp and on the march are curiously interrupted in 4 6 8 9a 11 13 15 16a 19 21 23 24a 26 28 30 31a by statements embodying the results of the census, and inserted as so many parentheses. The writer has really forgotten that he is professedly reporting a divine instruction to Moses, and the combined presentation is probably the result of later aggregation of materials. In the second census 26, the numbers all occur in their natural places.

<sup>18</sup> On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim according to their hosts: and the prince of the children of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud. <sup>19</sup> And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred. <sup>20</sup> And next unto him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the prince of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur: <sup>21</sup> and his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred: <sup>22</sup> and the tribe of Benjamin: and the prince of the children of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideon: <sup>23</sup> and his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred. <sup>24</sup> All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand and eight thousand and an hundred, according to their hosts. And they shall set forth third.

<sup>25</sup> On the north side shall be the standard of the camp of Dan according to their hosts: and the prince of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai. <sup>26</sup> And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred. <sup>27</sup> And those that pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the prince of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ochran: <sup>28</sup> and his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and one thousand and five hundred: <sup>29</sup> and the tribe of Naphtali: and the prince of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan: <sup>30</sup> and his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred. <sup>31</sup> All that were numbered of the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred. They shall set forth hindmost by their standards.

(1) 5-20 appears to be the work of P<sup>2</sup> to whom also may be assigned the numerical framework of 21-39. The intervening passages may possibly belong to the same hand, though now out of place, but the references to the 'cords' 26 37 which are nowhere named in Ex 25-29 while they are specified in the secondary reproduction 35<sup>18</sup> 39<sup>40</sup>, and to the 'altars' 31, point to a later source. (2) 40-43 and 46-51 appear to be the working out of the principles enunciated in 12. 45, 41 is plainly an enlarged edition of 45; the introductory formula in 40 does not correspond with 5 11 44; the supplemental instruction in 40<sup>b</sup> recalls the later use of שָׁמַיִם in 12; in 42 the phrase 'as Yahweh commanded him' seems secondary. On the other hand, there is a relative simplicity in 40-43 which is not inharmonious with P<sup>2</sup>. But in 46-51 the marks of later origin are clearer: 'the shekel of the sanctuary' 47 50 occurs only in P<sup>2</sup> cp Ex 30<sup>13</sup>: 'redemption money' 49 is found nowhere else. On the whole, the present form of 40-51 seems best assigned to P<sup>2</sup>, the link being found in P<sup>2</sup> 45.

the intrusion of <sup>16</sup> which has nothing to do with the arrangements for the removal of the Dwelling, and 17-20 which seems an afterthought; <sup>22</sup> opens exactly like <sup>2</sup>, and the plural is resumed in <sup>32</sup>. The mention of the <sup>1</sup>'golden altar' <sup>11</sup> (cp incense <sup>16</sup>) at once implies a secondary origin, and this is confirmed by numerous small divergences from the phraseology of other parts of P. Thus <sup>22</sup> 'take the sum' ct 1<sup>2</sup> infin for imper; <sup>5</sup> 'veil of the screen,' <sup>6</sup> 'covering,' <sup>7</sup> 'table of the Presence' (5 omits 'bread' ct Ex 35<sup>13</sup> 39<sup>38</sup>), <sup>7</sup> 'cups of pouring,' <sup>7</sup> 'continual bread,' <sup>12</sup> 'vessels of ministry,' <sup>15</sup> 'burdens,' <sup>19</sup> 'approach' followed by accus without a prep—occur nowhere else in P: cp <sup>9</sup> 'candlestick of the light' only in Ex 35<sup>14</sup>. In 4-15 the writer implicitly corrects the vagueness of <sup>31</sup> which insufficiently protected the sacred objects from the gaze of any but priests; while <sup>25</sup>. is enlarged from 3<sup>25</sup>. cp <sup>31</sup>. and 3<sup>36</sup>.

based upon earlier materials. This view rests rather on a sense of archaic flavour in the rite than on any distinctive marks of style. The phraseology is throughout that of P, and only faint echoes of P<sup>h</sup> are to be heard in <sup>12</sup> and <sup>20</sup>. As a whole the law must be placed with other early sections of P<sup>s</sup>, which seem to be intrinsically older both in form and matter than P<sup>s</sup>. But the further question arises whether the present text is not a combination of two distinct though kindred ordinances. The common phenomena of amalgamation seem clearly present: two inconsistent situations are run together: they are discriminated first by diversities of conception, and these in turn disclose distinctive varieties of diction. The evidence for this view will be best appreciated after a comparison of the two sources (distinguished as A and B) conjecturally rearranged in parallel columns, with analytical notes and references. The separation proposed by Stade (ZATW 1895 166-78) has been followed in the main, but the division set forth here endeavours to avoid some difficulties to which his distribution was exposed. It will be seen by the frequency of the harmonist's phrases that the fusion has been fairly complete.

But it is hard to resist the evidence for compilation. The law as it stands really contains two views of the incriminated woman: in one scheme it is proposed to ascertain whether she is innocent or guilty: in the other her guilt needs no demonstration, but only draws down on her the priestly doom. Thus the conclusion of B<sup>27</sup> makes it clear that there is a real alternative, 'defiled' or 'clean': and the title, easily reconstructed out of the present colophon<sup>29</sup>, is equally plain. In A, on the other hand, both conclusion<sup>31</sup> and introduction<sup>12</sup> 13<sup>ac</sup> imply only guilt, and the water is not a method of ordeal but a mere instrument of the curse<sup>21</sup> 23+. The distinction readily discerned between A's 'offering of memorial' and B's 'jealousy offering' supports the contention, which is further sustained by the copious parallels and contrasts exhibited below. In <sup>13</sup> the different genders of the verbs 'hid' (masc) and 'kept close' (fem), indistinguishable in our translation, seem best explained as the result of this amalgamation. In the same verse it is probable that some hint has fallen out by which in A the discovery of the wife's pregnancy was a sure sign of guilt. Otherwise the two sources are nearly entire.

Lev 1-7. Of the three parts into which the law falls 2b-8 9-12 <sup>13-21</sup> the first may well be earlier still. The phraseology shows some peculiarities arising from the subject, but in other respects it approximates closely to the usage of P<sup>s</sup>; thus, with the idea of 'separation' to Yahweh, cp 'holy to Yahweh' <sup>8</sup> Lev 21<sup>7</sup> & c (for 'separation unto God' <sup>7</sup> cp Judg 13<sup>5</sup> 7, 'God' cp Lev 21<sup>38N</sup>); further, 'be holy' <sup>5</sup>, 'dead body' <sup>6</sup> cp Lev 21<sup>11</sup>, 'make himself unclean' & c <sup>7</sup> cp Lev 21<sup>2</sup>. For the Nazirite elsewhere, cp Judg 13<sup>5 7</sup> 16<sup>17</sup> Am 2<sup>11</sup>. Lam 4<sup>7</sup>; the term is also used in other applications Gen 49<sup>28</sup> || Deut 33<sup>16</sup> Lev 25<sup>5 11+4</sup>.

cp 13 further cp 9a 10a. 16-19 shows direct dependence on 3<sup>9</sup> 12, but in 17 the compiler has abandoned the usage of 3<sup>13</sup> Ex 12<sup>12</sup> ... 17 ... 17, in favour of the formula ... 3 ... 3 cp 108<sup>o</sup> 35. Further, the original draft of the ceremony implies that Moses throughout is the agent of dedication, as in Lev 8 cp 6. 9. Accordingly in 13 Moses is instructed to 'wave' the Levites symbolically as a wave offering before Yahweh cp 15b. The allotment of this duty to Aaron <sup>11</sup>, belongs apparently to the later revision which set him by the side of Moses in the census cp 1<sup>18</sup>. The original form, therefore, would seem to have been comprised in 6-10 12-13a, with a simple record of the fulfilment of the divine commands, now expanded into 20-22, where Aaron's share becomes more prominent. It is in accordance with this view that the atonement to be made by Moses in 12 is ascribed to Aaron in 21. Dillm suggests that 13b-14 fell into its present place when 11 was inserted, thus interrupting 13a and 15a which may have stood in immediate connexion.

2 5 and. Apparently some words have dropped out, so that the text is defective. It seems probable that other material has here been incorporated, for the language is not without affinities to Ph; thus 2-5 'do the passover,' cp Ex 31<sup>16</sup> et Ex 12<sup>5</sup> 14 17, 3 'statutes and judgements' cp 14 213. Some slight variations in 5 2-5 further indicate diversity of treatment or scribal manipulation.

<sup>6</sup> An exceptional case giving rise to a law placed in narrative setting (for other instances in P<sup>s</sup> cp Lev 10<sup>12</sup>. 24<sup>10</sup>. Num 31<sup>21</sup>.). The law, however, takes cognizance of other circumstances beside those which suggest it, and the reference to travellers <sup>10</sup> may have led the compilers to place the section immediately before the account of the resumption of the march cp 18. The peculiarities of phrase noted in 2-5 are not wanting in 6.; for nephesh 6. 10 'soul' = 'dead body' cp 19<sup>8</sup>; 'if any man' <sup>10</sup> cp 190<sup>d</sup>; 'bear his sin' <sup>13</sup> cp 28<sup>b</sup> 193; 'not' <sup>7</sup> Lev 18<sup>30</sup> 20<sup>4</sup> 26<sup>15</sup> cp Josh 22<sup>25</sup> P<sup>s</sup>; with <sup>8</sup> cp Lev 24<sup>12</sup>; 'stay' cp Ex 9<sup>28</sup>. On the whole, therefore, 1-14 may be regarded as in one piece P<sup>s</sup>, showing acquaintance

'before Yahweh your God' <sup>9</sup> Lev 2340 P<sup>s</sup> (G omits 'your God'), 'gladness (rejoicing)' cp Lev 2340, 'sacrifices of your peace offerings' Lev 175, but cp 1818c, 'I am Yahweh your God,' 203<sup>b</sup> (G omits 'your God'). Either therefore P<sup>s</sup> has utilized other material, or R has attached <sup>9</sup> to the other trumpet arrangements.

<sup>10a</sup> A phrase so common in P that some critics have ascribed its occurrence here to RP (but the sing suff 'his families' is not favourable to this suggestion cp 24<sup>4*</sup>). On the other hand, if viewed as original, it supplies one of the numerous links between the phraseology of J and that of P.

<sup>10b</sup> The expostulation of Moses 10b-12 15 does not seem in harmony with the cause implied in the context. His 'displeasure' is plainly directed, not like the anger of Yahweh against the people, but against Yahweh himself. The language of 12 suggests that he repudiates a responsibility which really lies upon the God of Israel. But that responsibility has not here been thrown upon him, except by remote implication. On the other hand it is formally laid on him in Ex 33<sup>12</sup>. Now in the original document of JE the Horeb section Ex 32-34 immediately preceded the departure in Num 10<sup>29</sup>., and stood consequently in near proximity to the manna scene. Bacon accordingly conjectures that this passage once stood after Ex 33<sup>3</sup> and before 33<sup>12</sup> (see 12<sup>8</sup>). In the combination of J and E these verses were displaced by the insertion of the account of the Tent of Meeting, and were woven into the nearest appropriate situation, where (on this view) they have dislocated the connexion of 13 with 4-10a.

ments; but the apparent doublet 'and they three came out' <sup>4</sup>, 'and they two came out' <sup>5</sup>, admits of another explanation. In <sup>4</sup> the three are summoned together from the camp; in <sup>5</sup> the two are called forth from Moses' side to hear the divine vindication of his authority. The phraseological affinities with J, registered in the margins, are not more numerous or decisive than in other E passages, and belong to the common stock of the vocabulary of JE. Whether <sup>2-15</sup> was originally continuous with <sup>1</sup> is more doubtful, as it is founded on a quite different motive. The general reflexions on the nature of prophetic activity and the eminence of Moses as the recipient of direct revelation <sup>6-8</sup> suggest that this narrative is among the later additions of E<sup>3</sup>; with this view the representation of <sup>5</sup> harmonizes cp 11<sup>28N</sup>. But the sequel in <sup>9-15</sup> may be part of the original story, <sup>2-8</sup> having been elaborated out of earlier material.

<sup>9b</sup> 5 as in 32. T neither fear ye. When the clause in 9<sup>a</sup> is removed (the margin indicates its place in P) the order of the words in 5 becomes more impressive and significant; standing as the second term in a contrast, of which 8 supplies the opening.

14<sup>13</sup> The 5 text in 13 is much confused, cp Dillm and the versions. <sup>14a</sup> M 5 eye to eye.

the divine command. The language of <sup>41-43</sup> is no less clearly stamped with significant expressions of J, while the mention of the Amalekite and Canaanite as joint occupants of the southern highlands <sup>43 45</sup> cannot proceed from the author of 13<sup>29</sup>. In <sup>44</sup> the designation 'ark of the covenant of Yahweh' has probably been enlarged from a simpler phrase 'ark of Yahweh.' The statement that it did not 'depart out of the midst (or, from within) the camp' is conclusive (in spite of the word 'depart') against E in which the sanctuary stood outside the camp 11<sup>24-30</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> Ex 33<sup>7</sup>. On the other hand, this passage offers a glimpse into the conception of J which seems to have supplied the basis for P's picture of the Dwelling surrounded by the tribes. <sup>45</sup> may contain elements of both J and E. For 'Amalekite and Canaanite' Deut 1<sup>44</sup> seems to have read 'Amorite,' as if from E: the final words 'smote them and beat them down' may comprise a doublet, and the reference to Hormah may also belong to E cp 21<sup>1-3</sup>.

15<sup>1</sup> The group of regulations in 15 comprises very varied subjects, introduced without reference to time or place. A series of laws concerning offerings <sup>1-31</sup>, is followed by a brief narrative illustrating the penalty for working on the sabbath <sup>32-36</sup>, and this in its turn makes way for a law of fringes <sup>37-41</sup>. The sacrificial and other formulae connect it at once with P, but the want of sequence suggests that the materials may have been drawn from different sources, and may owe their present place to the compiler who collected priestly toroth of diverse ages. Thus the opening section <sup>1-16</sup> seems to be supplemental to Lev 2; details of the drink offering unnamed in Lev 1-7 being added to the directions concerning the meal offering which is to accompany the burnt offering. But it may be expanded from an earlier draft: the opening formula <sup>2b</sup> already appears in P<sup>h</sup> Lev 19<sup>23</sup> 23<sup>10</sup> 25<sup>2</sup>; the inclusion of the 'home-born and the stranger' <sup>13-16</sup> recalls Lev 17<sup>8</sup> 18<sup>15</sup> 18<sup>16</sup>, and with the combination of 'statute' and 'ordinance' (<sup>5</sup> = judgement) <sup>15</sup>, cp 213. The entry of the second person <sup>6</sup> after the third <sup>4</sup> may perhaps indicate imperfect assimilation of material.

15<sup>17</sup> The demand for firstfruits of dough cakes 17-21 is not specified in 18<sup>10</sup> though it may be included in it. The language is not altogether in the mould of P; no other law opens with 'in your coming' ct 2; nor does the phrase 'eat the bread of the land' recur. The usage (though not necessarily the written law) seems to have been known to Ezekiel 44<sup>30</sup>; and the phrase 'whither I bring you' 18 recalls P<sup>b</sup>. The paragraph may, like 1-16, have had an older base.

<sup>22</sup> In its present form the law for atonement for 'error' 22-31 seems to depend on 1-16, as the meal offering and drink offering are to be offered 'according to the ordinance' 24, which points back (for a bullock) to 8-10. But the entire section is plainly related to Lev 4 5<sup>1-13</sup>; in substance it seems earlier than 4 and later than 5<sup>1-13</sup> (see Laws 7se). In 20, the homeborn and the stranger are associated as in P<sup>b</sup>; and the language of 31, though

<sup>37</sup> The compiler's formula ■ 18 is here finally attached to the law of fringes 38b-41 cp Deut 22<sup>12</sup>. The peculiar opening 'and they shall make' followed by the change to the second person 'and it shall be unto you' 39 points to the employment of some older material. This seems to be drawn 40. from P<sup>b</sup>. The parallel with Ezek 6<sup>9</sup> in 39 supports this, and the term for 'heart' 201 further confirms it.

36 This paragraph, cp 40, coheres with the secondary representation 8-11, in which a body of Levites claimed the full rights of the Aaronic priesthood.

nexion with Lev 11-15, dealing with the contraction of ceremonial impurity. Its detached position here suggests that it was not comprised in the materials on which that group was founded. Moreover it appears to be quite independent of Lev 5<sup>2</sup>. <sup>6</sup> where a guilt offering is demanded on purification; and no incident is narrated as its occasion, after the manner of P<sup>s</sup>. The phraseology, though full of familiar phrases, shows a few peculiarities: 'statute of the law' <sup>2</sup> 31<sup>1†</sup>; 'Eleazar the priest' <sup>4</sup>; 'water of separation' <sup>9</sup>; the explanation of 'dead' <sup>11</sup> by 'any soul of a man'; 'purify himself' <sup>12</sup>. <sup>20</sup> cp 82<sup>1</sup> 31<sup>19</sup>. <sup>23</sup> et Job 41<sup>17†</sup>; צָמִיר פָּרִי <sup>15</sup>, where perhaps פָּרִי is a gloss; 'cut off from the midst of the assembly' <sup>20</sup>. <sup>2</sup> M Or, perfect.

that editorial redaction has been at work to soften the guilt of Moses and Aaron. As the text stands, the nature of their sin <sup>12</sup> is not apparent. It is elsewhere described as 'rebellion' <sup>24</sup> 27<sup>a</sup>, which led Nöldeke to conjecture that <sup>10b</sup> in its original form was addressed by Yahweh to the two leaders. The solution propounded by Cornill, ZATW xi 27, supposes that Yahweh first instructed them to *spea*k to the rock, which would then immediately yield its water. Their unwillingness to undertake this great act of faith and demonstrate Yahweh's deity ('hallow' him) to the murmuring nation led to the command to employ the agency of the sacred rod, laid up in the sanctuary <sup>9</sup>. This view is highly plausible, but it assumes a large amount of reconstruction. The text, therefore, follows the arrangement of Bacon. Both critics agree in assigning <sup>3a</sup> and <sup>5</sup> to J, and Bacon proposes to allot to the same source the clause in <sup>8b</sup> which appears inconsistent with the use of the rod. The grounds for ascribing <sup>3a</sup> and <sup>5</sup> to J are briefly (1) that the strife is on the part of 'the people' (et 'the congregation,' 'the assembly,' the 'children of Israel'), 'with Moses,' et 'with Yahweh' <sup>13</sup> (and 'Moses and Aaron' <sup>2 6 10</sup>), cp Ex 17<sup>2</sup> E; (2) that the language of <sup>5</sup> resembles that of JE; (3) that the Meribah story of E has been already related in Ex 17.

cp below 22<sup>b</sup>. But according to JE, Kadesh had been occupied by the tribes long before 13<sup>26</sup> and the futile attempt to enter Canaan by the south had been made from there, cp Deut 1<sup>19</sup> 46. The representation of P, therefore, which put the arrival at Kadesh near the end of the wanderings, could only be combined with JE by omitting the year. The suggestion of Ewald, Hist of Israel <sup>3</sup> ii 194<sup>a</sup>, to omit Kadesh in 13<sup>26</sup> has not been generally accepted, and he himself observes that D already knew it there. Nöldeke first pointed out why the omission must be attributed to R (Untersuchungen 83; cp Dillm and Addis).

<sup>12</sup> As it is not apparent from the previous narrative how Moses and Aaron failed in faith, it may be inferred that the story has been abbreviated by R<sup>p</sup> presumably in order to remove any shadow from the founders of the theocracy and the priesthood. The following words may have been substituted for the stronger charge in <sup>24</sup> (cp Addis): P does not employ the word 'believe' in R<sup>124</sup>. <sup>13a</sup> M That is, strife.

14-18 This passage is obviously cognate with 21<sup>21..</sup>. The parallels (cp 14, especially) are in favour of E. J must have contained a duplicate story of the application to Edom, the issue of which is related in 19. The parallels to 17<sup>b</sup> in 21<sup>22</sup> suggests that the clause 'we will not turn aside to the right hand nor to the left' may be derived from J cp 22<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>19</sup> The phraseology of <sup>19</sup> points to a new source; 'children of Israel' cf <sup>14</sup> (perhaps harmonizing, note the plurals 'we' and 'the sing 'I') ; 'high way' cf 'king's way' <sup>17</sup> 21<sup>22</sup>; 'I and my cattle,' 'without a word,' 'pass through on my feet.' In <sup>20</sup> cf 'come out with much people and a strong hand' with <sup>18</sup>. But <sup>20</sup> converts the return message of hostile refusal <sup>18</sup> 21<sup>a</sup> into an actual armed resistance against the whole people, the result of which was that Israel turned away to take a more circuitous route. But in <sup>22a</sup> (continued in 21<sup>b</sup>) they are still at Kadesh, where they had awaited the reply to the request forwarded by Moses: they could not, therefore, have already started. The reference to the 'strong hand' <sup>20</sup> seems to connect <sup>19</sup>. 21<sup>b</sup> with J. <sup>21a</sup> So  $\S$ . T thus. <sup>21b</sup> So  $\S$ . T wherefore.

apparently according to E. Each view seems embarrassed by inconsistencies, and though it is possible that 13<sup>29</sup> is redactional, the silence of D is a serious obstacle, so that critical assurance is impossible.

<sup>1b</sup> The identification of the national name Canaanite with the king of Arad is so awkward as to make it probable that these words are a late gloss, cp Moore, Judges p 36.

16a Again a fresh formula ct 10 12 cp 18b: the parallels in 17 20 point clearly to J. The geographical data of 20 show that the people are still in Moab, whereas in 13 they have already crossed the Arnon which formed its northern boundary cp 23.

21 This section repeats for Sihon the message addressed in 20<sup>14</sup>.. to the king of Edom. The issue is the same 23 cp 20<sup>21b</sup>; but as the people are already encamped upon his territory, an encounter is inevitable. The scene of the conflict is the 'wilderness' reached in 13.

24b The recital in Judg 11<sup>19-22</sup>, after following E through the conquest of Sihon and his Amorites, makes no mention of the children of Ammon, and there is reason to think that 24b 25 32 are incorporated from a separate narrative. In 24b 3 reads the border of the children of Ammon was Jazer (יָזָר for יָר) cp 32. In 25 the statement that 'Israel took all these cities' implies a conquest of towns of which nothing is said in the preceding text; while 25b is a doublet of 31. 32 seems clearly to belong to the same document as 25 (cp 'towns') and probably preceded it. 25 M 5 daughters.

26 This verse has the aspect of an explanatory addition connecting the poem on the fall of Heshbon with the mention of its occupation by Israel in 25 J. It is possible that the whole poem 27-30 is an editorial incorporation, and was no part of the original E (in which case 14, may be attributed to similar insertion). Then the true sequel of 24a is found in 31 'and Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.' For corrections of the text of the poem cp Dillm, in loc, and Meyer, ZATW 1881 (who expounds a very different theory).

To the land of the children of Ammon (?) 5c cp 23. .	To Pethor in the East 22 <sup>5b</sup> 23 <sup>7</sup> .
Balaam does not practise enchantment 22 <sup>7</sup> 24 <sup>1</sup> , but speaks under the influence of the spirit of God 24 <sup>2</sup> .	Balaam speaks the word that Elohim puts in his mouth 22 <sup>38</sup> 23 <sup>5</sup> 12 16 cp Ex 4 <sup>16</sup> .

Further linguistic marks will be found in the margins : in some verses the authorship must be still doubtful, as the two narratives travel over so much common ground, and the parallels founded on expressions used only once elsewhere cannot be regarded as decisive, even when the phrase shows a strongly marked character, such as 'cover the eye of the earth' 22<sup>5b</sup>. A curious indication of this is seen in the use of the unusual word מלך for 'curse' in both documents 22<sup>11</sup> 17 23<sup>8</sup> 11 13 25 27 24<sup>10</sup>†, implying, perhaps, a common redaction. The occasional signs of the harmonist's work are noted as they occur. It may be also mentioned that the versions show great confusion in the use of the divine names, due largely, it would seem, to uncertainty as to the appropriateness of the employment of 'Yahweh' by a non-Israelite. Allusions to the narrative of E will be found in Josh 24<sup>9</sup>. The sources of the story are of course beyond the critic's reach : but it may be noted that there seem to have been other traditions in circulation about Balaam beside those embodied in Num 22-24 cp Deut 23<sup>4</sup>. Josh 24<sup>9</sup> ; he is presented still more unfavourably in Josh 13<sup>22</sup>.
3b M Or, abhorred.—Cp Ex 12<sup>12</sup>.

* Kalisch, Bible Studies i (1877) 51, refused to recognize any such distribution, or to ascribe the 'Balaam book' to either J or E. He supposed it to be a fragment of a larger work (such as the lost books of Nathan and Gad &c), accounting for some of its peculiar phenomena by hypotheses of interpolation. But this view has not found any support.

41 M Or, Bamoth-baal.—Ct 21<sup>19</sup>.

23<sup>2</sup> § omits Balak and Balaam, the subject being simply 'he' and the verb singular as in 14 <sup>50</sup>. The sequel of <sup>2</sup> seems to have been transposed into <sup>4</sup> (so Bacon), where Balak's report to Balaam is put into Balaam's own mouth, interrupting the natural succession 'Elohim met Balaam, and put a word in Balaam's mouth' cp 16.

7a The recurrence of this formula in the introduction of the oracles both in E and J is a curious literary phenomenon, as it occurs nowhere else save in Job 27<sup>1</sup> 29<sup>1</sup>. Did each document use it independently, or did one derive it from the other, or is

The king of Moab from the mountains of the East:

Let <sup>t</sup>me die the death of the righteous,

And let my last end be like his!

<sup>11</sup> And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to <sup>j</sup>curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

<sup>12</sup> And he answered and said, Must I not take heed to speak that which it due to a common redaction? (It is somewhat singular that both here and in Job it should be employed of a non-Israelite.) The origin of the poems is in like manner a difficult problem. From what sources did J and E derive them? From the days of Ewald it has been generally admitted that the last three <sup>m</sup>shalim 24<sup>20-24</sup> are later supplements (cp Dillm, NDJ 138; and for the interpretation of the allusions, ib 162-7, Cornill, Eint 70). It is at least conceivable that the others belong also to the reproductive style of after-times. In 23<sup>22</sup> the identity with 24<sup>8</sup> can only be explained by some form of mutual dependence. As 23<sup>23</sup> seems to prepare for 24<sup>1</sup> (cp Dillm), it appears most natural to regard 23<sup>22</sup>, as founded on 24, though both J and E may have drawn from a common source. Phrases recalling the language of Gen 27 and 49 are noted in the margin, as well as some parallels with other poems: the designation 'Most High' 24<sup>16</sup> is chiefly common in literature after the Exile (cp Cheyne, Book of Psalms 18).

13 Apparently an insertion by R. In 22<sup>41</sup> Balaam is conducted to Bamoth-baal from which he views only 'the uttermost part of the people.' Balak, disappointed in the result, proposes to visit another point of view from which he 'may see them,' i.e. plainly the whole encampment without hindrance. But this would anticipate the climax in 24<sup>2</sup>, and the limitation of 22<sup>41</sup> is accordingly editorially renewed.

23<sup>27</sup> The language of Balak 25 implies that he relinquishes his project. But in approaching the parallel narrative of J, it was necessary to account for a third effort, and R therefore reproduces the preparatory arrangements of E 27 29. cp 13.

28a No mountain named Peor is known in the Old Testament. Bacon supposes that the name has been editorially substituted for Pisgah which had been already employed 14 by E. The same description of the view is attached to Pisgah in 21<sup>10</sup> (J). Both narratives, therefore, place the scene of Balaam's blessing on the same summit.

25<sup>6</sup> To the story of the Moabite apostasy the compiler has attached an account of an incident in which Phinehas slays a Simeonite prince and a Midianitish woman. But the opening of it is lost. From <sup>8b</sup> it appears that a plague was raging, thousands have already perished <sup>9</sup>, and the congregation is assembled in lamentation at the sanctuary. This plague does not correspond to either form of penalty inflicted in <sup>4</sup> and <sup>5</sup>: and improper connexions with Midianite women do not belong to the plains of Moab. The language at once identifies the source of the narrative with P. A late harmonistic allusion in <sup>31</sup><sup>16</sup> connects the worship of the Baal of Peor with the Midianite women under the insidious advice of Balaam, and it is possible that the missing beginning assigned this cause for the plague, and was set aside by R<sup>p</sup> in favour of the extract from JE.

so that the clause 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' stands by itself, and the phrase 'and the children of Israel which came forth out of the land of Egypt' is left suspended at the beginning of the enumeration. This, however, does not cohere with the explanation in <sup>64</sup>.. These phenomena show that the incorporation of the passage has not been effected without mutilation. A comparison with <sup>1</sup> points in the same direction.

who numbered the children of Israel in the 'plains of Moab by the Jordan at Jericho. <sup>64</sup> But among these there was not a man of "them that were numbered by Moses and Aaron the priest; who numbered the children of Israel in the 'wilderness of Sinai. <sup>65</sup> For Yahweh had said of them, "They shall surely die in the wilderness. <sup>271</sup> The petition of the daughters of Zelophehad 1-11 is closely connected with 26 cp <sup>83</sup>. Its theme has the same aspect as that of 26<sup>52</sup>.. cp 26<sup>18</sup>. Phraseologically the passage follows the usage of P, but it shows occasional and noteworthy peculiarities, e.g. <sup>5</sup> 'brought their cause (5 judgement) before Yahweh'; <sup>7</sup> 'speak right' 36<sup>8</sup> nowhere else in P; <sup>11</sup> 'possess' 36<sup>8</sup>, וירש (P<sup>127</sup>), elsewhere in P only Gen 28<sup>4</sup> Lev 20<sup>24</sup> Ph<sup>1</sup> (allied with J) 25<sup>46</sup> P<sup>s</sup> Num 33<sup>53</sup> P<sup>s</sup> (all save Lev 25<sup>40</sup> after 'give') ct <sup>81</sup>; 'a statute of judgement' 35<sup>29</sup> +; 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' 189<sup>c</sup>, which sounds especially incongruous at the close of the answer of Yahweh 6-11. On the other hand the plea in <sup>3</sup> that Zelophehad was not among the princes associated with Korah points to dependence on the earlier form of P's narrative 16<sup>2-7</sup> before Korah and his followers were converted into Levites.

<sup>12</sup> This passage is obviously connected with Deut 32<sup>48</sup>.. but the relation of the two has been variously estimated. Did the same author reproduce his own words in another connexion? Or, if they are not both from the same hand, which is the original and which the copy? The phraseology of Deut 32<sup>48-52</sup> bears every characteristic mark of P<sup>s</sup>, and does not appear like an expansion of 12-14. On the other hand, (1) the opening of 12 lacks P's customary formula of the divine address; (2) the prohibition in Deut 32<sup>52b</sup> is omitted, so that the occasion for the appointment of Joshua as leader is not so clearly emphasized; (3) the explanation in 14<sup>b</sup> seems due to an annotator. The view of Dillmann is therefore adopted here, according to which Deut 32<sup>48-52</sup> once stood before Num 27<sup>15</sup>. When D was incorporated before the record of the death of Moses, the long separation of the event from this passage led to the transfer or the divine command to its present position in Deut 32<sup>48</sup>.. and the vacant place was filled in Num 27<sup>12-14</sup> by an editorial abstract. <sup>14</sup> M See 20<sup>12</sup>..

27<sup>23</sup> It might have been expected that the narrative of the death of Moses would follow at this point, like that of Aaron after the investiture of Eleazar 20<sup>23-29</sup>. 28<sup>1</sup> The catalogue of sacrifices in 28-29 is a summary of the dues required for the service of the altar. Its terminology harmonizes in the main with that of Lev 1-7; and its annual order is modelled on that of Lev 23. But it seems to belong to the secondary materials of P, for (1) it occurs in the midst of a group of other secondary passages; (2) it is widely separated from other ritual detail, and had P<sup>g</sup> contained any such list it would have been natural to look for it in connexion with the calendar in Lev 23 (why should the feasts be ordained in the first year of the wanderings, and the accompanying offerings only in the last?); (3) it incorporates the new moon festivals

in P. (4) The writer seems to have been acquainted with P's story in Gen 34 cp 7<sup>9</sup>, but he uses other terms, e.g. 'spoil' <sup>11</sup> cp Gen 49<sup>27</sup> Ex 15<sup>9</sup> Deut 13<sup>17</sup> al, 'both man and beast' <sup>11</sup>. (5) The general phraseology shows a considerable freedom; thus 'go to meet'<sup>13</sup>, 'thy servants'<sup>14</sup> (unknown to P), belong specially to J (do they imply an older basis in JH for the present narrative?); other expressions, e.g. 16<sup>30</sup> 54 have their nearest parallels in Chronicles; a considerable number occur nowhere else, e.g. 'were delivered' <sup>6</sup>, 'sent to the war' <sup>6</sup>, 'were to the children of Israel for...' <sup>16</sup>, 'skilled in war' <sup>27</sup>, 'tribute' <sup>23</sup>, 'people of the war' <sup>32</sup>, 'half' <sup>36</sup>; and others, 'as Yahweh commanded Moses' <sup>7</sup> 31<sup>47</sup>, 'purify yourselves' <sup>19</sup>. 23, 'water of separation' <sup>23</sup>, are characteristic of P<sup>a</sup>. The general effect of the narrative as a type of religious behaviour is not without analogies to that of Abraham in Gen 14<sup>20</sup>.

32<sup>1a</sup> The narrative of the settlement of the tribes of Reuben and Gad (and the half tribe of Manasseh) 1–38 presents many conflicting phenomena. There is consequently considerable diversity of critical opinion, and similar indeterminateness of result (for recent discussions cp Bacon and Addis). The assignment of the East Jordan territories to Gad, Reuben, and half Manasseh, is recognized by P Num 34<sup>14</sup>, and by D Deut 31<sup>2</sup>–20, and it may be fairly assumed that their statements are based upon some earlier account. Such an account might naturally be sought in Num 32, where there are many marks of the style of J. But it becomes plain on closer examination that even the passages which display most affinity with J are in close (if not indissoluble) connexion with words otherwise peculiar to P cp 4. 18. &c. The evidence of this is exhibited in the margins, where occasional points of contact are also indicated with P<sup>3</sup> in 31, cp 'go to the war' 6, 'be armed (arm themselves)' 17, 'flocks' and 'cattle' 26 (ct 1 24 S) cp 31<sup>9</sup>. In 7–15 the sequence of 6 and 16 is interrupted by a hortatory digression chiefly founded on passages in Num 14, and showing indications of acquaintance with both its elements J and P, together with touches from D. The signs of duality of source seem further confirmed by slight variations of detail. The order of the names Reuben and Gad changes in 2. The list of cities built by Gad and Reuben 34–38 does not quite accord with the enumeration in 4, and neither, again, agrees with Josh 13<sup>15</sup>. 24... The gift which is conditional in 20... 28., is apparently made unreservedly in 33. Yet the phraseology of 33 is not without characteristics of P in its latter clauses, while the unexpected occurrence of the Deuteronomistic שוש 'tribe' (instead of P's usual שבט) has its counterpart in the narrative in Josh 22. On the whole, therefore, it seems impossible to separate the element of J from that of a writer in the school of P, and the narrative 1–38 is accordingly ascribed to P<sup>3</sup> who may be supposed to have freely worked up earlier materials of J and P. Under these circumstances it does not seem needful to assign 7–15 to a still later hand. The secondary and reflective character of the narrative is clear throughout, as (1) in the representation that the cities were built anew, implying their total previous destruction, whereas the older view described the Israelites as entering into cities which they had not builded Deut 6<sup>10</sup>; (2) in the careful explanation 38 that the old idolatrous names were changed; (3) in the religious character of the march 'before Yahweh' 20... (cp 4) contrasted with the customary expression 'before the children of Israel' 17 Deut 31<sup>8</sup> Josh 1<sup>14</sup>; and (4) in the prominence given to Eleazar the priest 28, to whom (with Joshua and the heads of the fathers) the ultimate decision is referred. In the sequel however Josh 13<sup>16</sup>... Eleazar and Joshua claim no share in the Trans-jordanic settlement, which is regarded as the work of Moses alone cp 33.

1b In the order of enumeration Reuben here stands first, as the elder (cp Gen 35<sup>23</sup>). But in the rest of the story 2... Gad takes precedence. In Sam, however, the priority of Reuben is maintained throughout, while in (S) Gad takes the lead 2 6 33. It does not seem possible amid these variations to employ the difference as a clue to diversity of sources.

3b M In 38 Sibmah.

3c M In 38 Baal-meon.

4 This phrase, repeatedly used of the divine action by the plagues in Egypt, is not employed elsewhere for conquest. Cp 20.

7 In this section, founded on Num 14, there are points of contact both in matter and form with J P and D (see the margins). But it does not seem necessary to separate it from the rest of the narrative: thus the imperfects in 7<sup>7</sup> 15 reappear in 20 23.

32<sup>16</sup> Many critics have regarded this as the junction with a fresh narrative which has been assigned to E. But the proposal in <sup>16</sup> must clearly have some antecedent. The remonstrance in <sup>6</sup> is sufficient to explain it. The approach of the speakers to Moses with further suggestion in the middle of the interview resembles the approach of Judah to Joseph Gen 44<sup>18</sup>.

But it can also be equally well explained on the hypothesis of familiarity with the language of earlier documents.

39 The preceding narrative implies that the conquest of Gilead has been already effected 1-4. The description of its subjugation by Manassite clans must therefore be derived from another source. It has some analogy with the account of the western settlement in Judges 1 now usually assigned to J. For a brief statement of theories concerning its relation to other traditions, cp G A Smith, Historical Geography of the Holy Land 577 n. See further Josh 17<sup>14N</sup>.

40 The difference of terminology ('Machir' for 'B'nê Machir') and the interruption of the sequence between 39 and 41 indicated by the phrase 'took their [i.e. the Amorites 39] towns,' suggest that 40 is a harmonizer's addition cp Deut 3<sup>15</sup> prior to P who regards Machir as Manasseh's only son 26<sup>29</sup>, and who did not intend to locate the whole tribe east of the Jordan.

41 M That is, The towns of Jair.—For another tradition about the name cp Judges 10<sup>4</sup>.

33<sup>1</sup> The itinerary of the Israelites' march 1-49 is admitted on all hands to belong to the group of P. But to what section of it? The answer depends on the relation assumed between some of its heterogeneous materials. Thus the references to Marah and Elim 8., to Kibroth-hattavah and Hazeroth 16., and the Canaanite 40., are derived from J, while Rephidim 14 seems traceable to E. P may of course have had its own itinerary in which these stages may have been named; but the stylistic

correspondences with specific passages in JE are here unmistakable. Are these references to be treated as the additions of a later editor, or are they integral parts of the document as conceived by its compiler? Nöldeke's observation that the total number of forty stations was probably adjusted to the tradition of forty years of wandering, has inclined many critics to the belief that the series has not reached its present form through casual incorporation, but has been deliberately arranged. In that case it displays a usage of previous sources analogous to that already noted in 32, and must be assigned to the same group P<sup>a</sup>. Its place in the midst of similar documents, and its addition of fresh touches ('while the Egyptians were burying their firstborn' 4, and the age of Aaron 38, to say nothing of the unknown names 18-30), tend to confirm this conclusion, which is not impaired by the difficulty of reconciling some of the data e.g. 11 31-33 36 with other passages. As with 32, its dependence on J seems closer than on E. A hint of foundation on an earlier source may be preserved in 2.

8<sup>a</sup> Sam Onk 5 9 and even some 5 MSS read 'Pi-hahiroth.'

8<sup>b</sup> Ex 15<sup>22</sup> has Shur. Dillm conjectures that Etham may be an equivalent of Shur, in which case 8<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>a</sup>d would be original P, otherwise the passage must be treated as a compiler's insertion. It is, however, possible that Etham is a very late scribal addition or correction; 5<sup>b</sup> omits it, though 5<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>a</sup>b<sup>a</sup>FL add αἰτοί, as though 5 had 5<sup>b</sup>.

10 This encampment is not recognized in Ex 16<sup>1</sup>, and the source of the statement is obscure. Is it an inference from Ex 15<sup>22</sup>, and did it (as Dillm hints) follow 8<sup>a</sup>, so that the references to Marah and Elim are later insertions? Or is it one of the casual elements added to make up forty?

33<sup>50</sup> In 50-56 two distinct subjects are combined, (1) the expulsion of the Canaanite inhabitants and the destruction of their idols and sanctuaries 51b-53 55, and (2) the distribution of the land by lot 54. The first group seems unrelated to P<sup>2</sup> either in matter or style, though it is not without affinities with earlier documents, and in particular with P<sup>1</sup>. 54 is apparently introduced from 26<sup>54</sup> to prepare the way for 34. These considerations point to the compilation of 50-56 by F<sup>3</sup> out of older material as in previous instances.

54 This passage is plainly derived from 26<sup>54</sup>: the first verb 'ye shall give' has been converted into the plural to suit the context, but the second remains unaltered. Sam retains the singular in both verbs, while 5 has corrected both to the plural.

34<sup>1</sup> The preparatory arrangements for the occupation of the land of Canaan are here continued, but they are of such a character as to render it doubtful whether they were included in the original P. The sketch of the boundaries in 1-15 specifies some places unmentioned in the survey in Joshua, two of them being named elsewhere only by Ezekiel. Moreover it is not apparent why such a careful delimitation was necessary for the Western country while the East remains undefined; nor is it clear how Moses should be familiar with localities which he had never seen. The appointment of tribal leaders to supervise the distribution seems to be imitated from the census in 1 (though with a different formula), but unlike other arrangements in P founded on a divine command, it does not seem to have been carried out. For instance, in 13 the exploring mission of twelve tribal representatives is prescribed, but the choice of the individuals to compose it is left to Moses, who immediately proceeds to their selection and dispatch. Here the official distributors are designated by Yahweh, but nothing is said of any consequent appointment by Moses; their future escape from the vicissitudes of conquest is assumed, yet when the time for action arrives they seem to be merged in the general group of 'heads of fathers' houses' cp Josh 14<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>51</sup>. Moreover JE supplies an entirely different picture, according to which at Joshua's instance seven tribes elect three deputies each to survey and divide the remaining territory Josh 18<sup>2</sup>.. In view of these circumstances, and of the general character of the group of chapters following the announcement of Moses' death 27<sup>12-23</sup>, it seems likely that these two sections also may be of a secondary character, designed to trace back to Moses every possible provision for the settlement. The reference in Josh 14<sup>2</sup>, however, unless it be a later editorial addition, indicates the presence in P<sup>s</sup> of some general instructions attributed to Moses which may have been elaborated by P<sup>s</sup>, as in the case of the first census. The repetitions in 14, and the plural address to Moses in 17, (cp 5<sup>3</sup> 35<sup>25</sup>) seem more in harmony with the manner of the expander; and the designations in 14 'children of the Reubenites' and 'children of the Gadites' are unique, though 'families of the Reubenites' occurs 26<sup>7</sup>.

14 Dillm, in accordance with his theory of the priority of P, supposes the half tribe of Manasseh to be inserted here by R<sup>d</sup>, but P's usual term for 'tribe' is employed, though the tribal designations are not uniform in style.

17 It should be noted that in P's account of the distribution of the tribal territories Josh 14<sup>1</sup>, 10<sup>51</sup> the princes here designated to aid them in the task 18-29 are totally ignored. Is this a later attempt at precision, just as Ensebius could tell the names of the Seventy disciples of Luke 10<sup>1</sup>?

cp Lev 21<sup>10</sup> and to the unction with the 'holy oil' cp Ex 30<sup>25</sup>. In <sup>29</sup> it reaches a close cp 27<sup>11</sup> (where alone 'statute of judgement' recurs). The passage that follows seems to embody additional references to the ancient doctrine of the 'ransom,' and to the conception of polluting the land, which is expressed in different terms in <sup>33</sup> and <sup>34</sup>. In <sup>34</sup> the fresh verb (with the change to the singular) suggests a source kindred to P<sup>1</sup> in Lev 18<sup>20</sup> cp Lev 15<sup>31</sup> Num 19<sup>13</sup>. In <sup>32</sup> it is doubtful whether 'the priest' should not be 'the high priest,' so Sam § §. The same authorities in <sup>33</sup> unite in reading 'the land which ye inhabit' as in <sup>34</sup>. <sup>2</sup> M Or, pasture lands.—P<sup>1</sup>156.

36<sup>1</sup> The principle which assured inheritance in land to daughters in the absence of a son, exposed the tribe to the danger that marriage might convey the heiress' property to another tribe. The law in 36 provides against this contingency, and is plainly dependent on 27<sup>1-11</sup>. It therefore belongs to the same secondary group. 36<sup>13</sup> Addis infers from the resemblance of this verse to Lev 27<sup>34</sup> that they were severally added when the present arrangement of the books was adopted, to provide appropriate conclusions.

The book of Deuteronomy is plainly discriminated both in style and contents from the preceding books. Taken as a whole its language shows the most marked differences compared with the laws and other utterances ascribed to Moses after the conquest of the East Jordan territory Num 26-36 'in the plains of Moab' Num 26<sup>3</sup> 36<sup>13</sup> Deut 34<sup>1</sup> (cp Introd VI 2-7 i 41). It is also separated by many characteristic features from the narratives of JE and the earlier legislation at Sinai-Horeb (cp Introd IX i 2). Traces of P and also of J and E may, indeed, be discovered in it, for the process of welding the documents together naturally led to the admission of some elements from them into the framework of D's great discourses. Apart from these passages, most of which may be eliminated without serious difficulty, the main contents of D (as now arranged) may be distributed in four unequal divisions: (I) an introductory discourse, chiefly consisting of historical retrospect 1-4<sup>40</sup>; (II) exhortations in illustration of the fundamental principles of the Horeb-covenant (the Ten Words), and of the nature of Yahweh's dealings with Israel 5-11, preceded by a brief preface defining the time and place 4<sup>44</sup>-49; (III) the Statutes and Judgements constituting the Law to be observed in Canaan 12-26; (IV) final injunctions, promises, and warnings (including two poems, a Song 32, and a Blessing 33), arrangements for the preservation of the Book of the Law and for the succession of Joshua to the leadership of Israel, terminating with the record of Moses' death 27-34. Closer examination, however, will show that these sections are by no means always homogeneous with each other or with themselves. The critical problems arising out of the attempt to trace the steps by which the materials now combined in D fell into their present locations under the supervision of successive editors, are of unusual intricacy. In almost every case several possibilities seem to be open, and the decision between different alternatives can only reach varying degrees of probability. These difficulties of internal relation, however, rarely (if ever) arise in the comparison of D with JE or P. The marks of the thought and language of the great Deuteronomic school are unmistakable within the limits of the book itself*.

1<sup>b</sup> M That is, the deep valley running North and South of the Dead Sea.

* The proposals which have been recently made by different scholars to distribute the discourses chiefly on the basis of the use of the singular or the plural in the address to the nation (cp Steuernagel, Der Rahmen des Deuteronomiums 1894, Die Entstehung des Deuteronomischen Gesetzes 1896, Das Deuteronomium (Hdtkomm) 1898, Staerk, Das Deuteronomium 1894; Naumann, Das Deuteronomium 1897) have not commended themselves to the judgement of the present annotator (whose notes were written before Steuernagel's Commentary appeared). The divergence of their results is not in itself a sufficient proof of the inadequacy of their method. Of the three writers just named, Steuernagel has carried the analysis through with the most thoroughness, and the editors are indebted

<sup>6</sup> At this point the writer opens the historical review assigned to Moses as the fitting introduction to the great Exposition. This terminates at 32<sup>9</sup>, and reasons will be subsequently offered for regarding the greater part of the discourse which follows, 41-40, as transposed from another cycle. A number of questions concerning it immediately arise, e.g. (1) Is it complete? (2) What are its sources? (3) Was this its original form? (4) Was it composed by the author of the Code? (1) The first question has been answered in the negative by some recent critics who propose (with Horst, RHR xvi 35) to attach to its beginning the recital inserted at 9<sup>10</sup>, or (with Bacon, Triple Trad 249) suggest that 10<sup>11</sup> originally stood there, as portions of a still longer retrospect: on these theories see 10<sup>11N</sup>. (2) The sources of the retrospect will be found in the narrative of JE now combined with P in Ex Num. The reference to a document itself composite suggests, however, a further inquiry. Did the writer employ J and E separately, or in union? He appears to lean decidedly on E, for he uses the name Horeb for the sacred mountain 15<sup>13</sup>; he designates the population of the highlands of Canaan as Amorites 17 19. 27 44; he relates the institution of the judges 19. cp Ex 18<sup>13</sup>, and the journey of the spies to Eshcol 124 cp Num 13<sup>28</sup>. But the allusions to J are no less clear, cp the oath to the patriarchs 8 cp Gen 15<sup>18</sup>, the mention of the fenced cities 128 cp Num 13<sup>28</sup> (with the sons of the Anakim), the promise to Caleb 136 cp Num 14<sup>24</sup> (Joshua not being included). Further, the description of Israel as like 'the stars of heaven for multitude' 110 rests on the promise related by R<sup>12</sup> in Gen 22<sup>17</sup>, showing that even if (with Dillm) we suppose D to have known E still as a separate document, he had also studied the combined form JE. But the diversities of detail, e.g. the omission in 19-18 of all reference to Jethro Ex 18<sup>14</sup> and the combination of passages from Num 11, the popular initiative in the dispatch of the spies 122 (of their dependence on Moses Num 13<sup>27</sup>), the discrepancy between 24-8 and Num 20<sup>14-21</sup> (though Driver, but not Dillm, supposes them to refer to different incidents), show that the traditional material was freely handled in the composition of the discourse. If the conjecture of Kuen concerning the original place of the Book of Judgements be allowed, cp Ex 20<sup>22</sup>, it may be further surmised (with Bacon) that the whole idea of the retrospect, and the special affinities which may be traced with E, are due to the prior existence of a similar review prefixed to the older code which stood where Deut 12-26 is now placed, at the end of the wanderings, on the eve of entry into the promised land. A striking analogy to such a farewell on the part of Moses is to the pioneer essays of Staerk and himself for many valuable suggestions. The process through which Steuernagel conceives D to have come to its present form, is exceedingly complicated, and it is difficult to do justice to it in a brief notice. This complexity is not necessarily an argument against a critical theory, for it is justly observed by Addis (Hex ii 18) that simplicity is not always a recommendation. Starting with the homilies 5-11 and the code 12-26, he endeavours to distinguish their sources thus. In 5-11 he finds two documents combined, one employing the singular pronoun in address to Israel (Sg), the other the plural (Pl). Two collections of laws may also be discovered in 12-26 which belong respectively to the two bodies of introductory discourses Sg and Pl. Behind each of these lie numerous smaller groups, Pl being composed partly of fundamental cultus-law, together with an 'elders' collection, an 'abomination' collection, and a collection of cases of war; while Sg is built up on a prior basis of cultus-law, with family and humanitarian legislation, and materials from other independent sources. The fundamental cultus-laws are supposed to have existed in separate drafts from the reign of Hezekiah. They underwent a double redaction, by incorporation into Sg about 690, and Pl about 670. Sg and Pl were then united about 650, the compiler prefixing the retrospect in 1-4; and this product then underwent prolonged expansion at the hand of successive redactors and copyists, who are made responsible for continuous hortatory additions throughout the work, amounting to nearly one-sixth of the whole. So elaborate a theory hardly admits of proof; large portions of it can only rest upon conjecture. That the code in 12-26 has been compiled from various sources may be not only readily conceded but emphatically affirmed cp 12<sup>18</sup>. But the distribution into two documents corresponding to Sg and Pl seems somewhat hazardous. (1) It does not rise naturally out of the phenomena of the text. Of the actual plural passages in 13-26 enumerated 12<sup>28</sup> Steuernagel allots only 22<sup>24</sup> to Pl; 19<sup>19</sup> is corrected to Sg; and the rest are ascribed to the nameless copyists. The laws assigned to Pl in 13-26 are now couched (with the exception of 22<sup>24</sup>) in the singular, so that the criterion appears to break down; a redaction in favour of Sg being invoked of which the text shows no assignable traces. The view of the present editors concerning the plural passages in the Code will be found in the notes 12<sup>2</sup> and onwards. (2) The case of the Homilies is somewhat different. The general ascription of 5-11 to the same hands which produced the Code is not inconsistent with the suggestion that they were not all written at once, or simultaneously with the laws (cp Introd X 5a i 95). But it is certainly incompatible with the theory that they were combined out of two homiletic groups, a singular and a plural respectively. For this partition no other adequate criteria either of matter or style seem available, for many of the instances cited in Steuernagel's very careful table of words pp xxxiii-xli can hardly be said to bear definitely one way or the other. Moreover, it is reasonable to suppose that the homilies would exhibit a greater range of variation than the laws; such transitions are characteristic of the preacher's style. Thus Jeremiah 2-4 passes repeatedly from the second to the third person and back again, and uses each in both numbers: yet it would hardly be proposed to divide his discourses on this basis. It may also be asked how far the diversities in (9) throw any doubt on the stability of the Massoretic text. In 5-7 there are more than thirty variations in person and number; the first person changes into the second and the second into the first: the sing in h appears as pl in (9), and the pl h turns out sing in (9). These differences may be variously explained, but until they have been more carefully examined the distinction hardly supplies a satisfactory basis for distributing the text among Sg and Pl authors, the harmonizing editor, and his train of hortatory followers.—In a series of articles in the Expositor, beginning 1898 5th series viii 241 (after the Introduction to this work had been sent to press), Prof G L Robinson has sought to maintain the Mosaic authorship of Deut. Impressed, however, by some of the phenomena which lie at the basis of the critical hypotheses, he suggests that 'the orations contained in the Book of Deuteronomy were spoken twice, once in Moab, and once on the way between Horeb and Kadesh-barnea' (Expositor May 1899 358). Thus he is able to explain the implied contrast of 5<sup>3</sup> and 21<sup>4</sup>, and the repeated introduction 414-49 cp 1<sup>1-5</sup>. He can even accept Steuernagel's theory of separate addresses in the sing and pl; the pl being suitable to Moses in the wilderness addressing Israel as a prophet might speak to the individual units of his own generation, and the sg when as an old man in Moab sixty years senior to the nation he conceived it as a whole (ibid 362). This ingenious combination of traditional apologetics with an advanced critical method is probably unique.

found in the address of Joshua after the completion of the conquest Josh 24, unanimously ascribed to E (apart from the additions of E<sup>d</sup>). In that case, the survey in Deut 1<sup>6-3</sup> was prefixed to the code in imitation of its predecessor, which it not unnaturally largely absorbed into itself. This suggestion offers a plausible reason for the occasional preponderance of E elements.

(3) But from another side it has been suggested by Dillm (NDJ 229) that the recital was not originally cast in the first person; it was part of a larger narrative which has been converted into speech, the compiler finding it resemble too closely the story of JE in Num beside which it was placed before its union with P. The difference between the summary of events in 1-3 and the glowing exhortations of 4<sup>1-40</sup>, the oratorical inappropriateness of the archaeological notes scattered through 2 and 3, and the curious relation between 31<sup>1</sup> and 32<sup>a</sup>, are offered as grounds for this hypothesis. It might further be supported by the undoubted specimens of similar conversion in 9<sup>o</sup>, 10<sup>1</sup>.. But the variation between 1-3 and 4<sup>1-40</sup> can be explained on other considerations (see 4<sup>1N</sup>): the annotator's additions may be easily sifted out from 2 and 3; and though the proposal provides an intelligible cause for the abrupt beginning of 31<sup>1</sup>, it is not necessary to resort to so elaborate a device (cp 31<sup>1N</sup>).

(4) Lastly, it cannot be affirmed with any confidence that the discourse proceeds from the author (or authors) of the Code. The hortatory element so conspicuous at least in 12-18 26 is almost absent here; yet the mingling of historical retrospect with homiletic address in 5-11 (more closely associated with the Code) shows that if the preacher could employ illustrations from the traditions, the narrator might have been expected in his turn (on the assumption of common authorship) to display a warmer religious glow. The discussion is a difficult one, and turns on delicate shades of difference in thought and expression. Among the most conspicuous phenomena are the following:—(i) Separate titles 1<sup>1-5</sup> and 4<sup>16-40</sup> are prefixed to the two groups of discourse 1<sup>6-3</sup> (4<sup>1-40</sup>) and 5-11. It does not seem likely that the same author would have composed both. The existence of independent prefaces implies that the discourses were also independent, and originally stood as introductions to distinct editions of the Code (Cornill, Einleitung § 9 6, designates them as the historic and paranetic elements of D, symbolized as D<sup>b</sup> and D<sup>p</sup>). It is conceivable that the compiler of the Code might himself have prefixed one or the other to his collection of laws: it is less probable that he would have attached both of them. Now of the two, 5-11 is much closer both in spirit and form to the legislative core in 12-18 than 1<sup>6-3</sup>. (ii) A marked difference is believed to exist between the two introductions concerning the persons addressed. In 1<sup>35</sup>, the wanderings are represented as a punishment on the generation of the Exodus for their refusal to march up and take possession of the country at once; and according to 21<sup>4-16</sup> all the fighting men (and the contemporary women must be included) perished in the wilderness. But in 5<sup>3</sup> it is declared that the covenant at Horeb was not made with the dead, but with those then alive and listening, and the identity of the people in Moab with the bondmen in Egypt forty years before appears to be asserted in the most express terms 11<sup>2-7</sup> 'Your eyes have seen all the great work of Yahweh.' On the other hand the constant address to Israel as 'thou' implies a moral continuity in the nation which seems to many critics a sufficient explanation of the confusion of the generations. (iii) With this difference is associated another. According to 1-2 the wanderings are a punishment for a specific act of disobedience. In 8<sup>2</sup> they are a part of the divine discipline for proving whether Israel would obey or not; they have, in other words, a far-reaching educational design. These two aspects may be capable of reconciliation, but they are at least presented with striking variations of emphasis. (iv) A difficulty arises concerning the behaviour of Ammon. In 23<sup>3</sup> the Ammonites are reproached for not having aided Israel with food and drink. But in 27<sup>1</sup> it is expressly stated that the Israelites never went near them. What opportunity had they, then, of showing their unfriendliness? The author of 23<sup>3</sup> can hardly have written the historic survey in 1<sup>6-3</sup> (on the authenticity of 23<sup>1-8</sup> cp 23<sup>1N</sup>). (v) Some linguistic phenomena may also be named. The word 'possession' (יָרַשׁ) occurs in 25<sup>9</sup> 12<sup>19</sup> 32<sup>30</sup>, but not in 5-26, though the corresponding verb is employed repeatedly; it reappears in D<sup>a</sup> in Josh 1<sup>15</sup> 12<sup>6</sup>. In 1<sup>7</sup> 10<sup>1</sup>, 27<sup>44</sup> (3<sup>9</sup>) the name Amorite is applied to the inhabitants of the central highlands of Canaan without reference to the 'seven nations' of 7<sup>1</sup> cp 20<sup>17</sup>. The phrase 'at that time' recurs ten times in 1-3 (three times in possibly cognate passages 9<sup>20</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> 8), elsewhere only in 5<sup>5</sup>; 'declare' 1<sup>16</sup> cp 27<sup>8*</sup>; 'fear not, neither be dismayed' 12<sup>1</sup> 31<sup>8</sup> Josh 1<sup>9</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>25*</sup>; 'contend' 25<sup>9</sup> 19<sup>24*</sup>; 'this Jordan' 37<sup>31</sup> 31<sup>2</sup> Josh 12<sup>11</sup> 42<sup>2</sup> cp Gen 32<sup>10*</sup>; 'children of Esau which dwell in Seir' 24<sup>8</sup> 22<sup>29</sup> et 23<sup>1</sup>. On the other hand it may be argued that some of these expressions would not naturally be repeated, though it is surprising that 'besought' 32<sup>3</sup>, 'mighty acts' 32<sup>4</sup>, 'was wroth' 32<sup>6</sup>, 'for your sakes' (לְכַפְּרֵם with pronom suff) 32<sup>6</sup>, should not have occasion to appear again. But besides a large portion of the vocabulary of D tabulated in vol i, the margins certainly show a considerable amount of phraseology of less frequent use common to 1-3 and 5-26 (see the parallels to 12<sup>17</sup> 19<sup>27-29</sup> 31<sup>43</sup> 25<sup>7</sup> 30<sup>324</sup>). The evidence will be differently estimated according to varieties of antecedent expectation. Those who have been convinced of the highly composite character of other portions of the great documentary collections, e.g. the Levitical legislation, will have less difficulty in admitting a similar possibility in the case of D. Driver, after full discussion (Deut lxvii-lxxiii), decides in favour of unity of authorship.

17 Interpreters differ whether the 'land of the Canaanites' sums up all the items previously named, or applies only to the strip of coast. In the former case it seems in conflict with the location of the Amorites in the central highlands. Under any interpretation the definite instruction to the Israelites to occupy the entire country from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates is not quite on the same plane with the prophetic promises of 11<sup>24</sup> Gen 15<sup>18</sup> Josh 14. The passage may well be due to later expansion.

121 As the main body of this discourse is conceived in the second person plural, the unexpected entrance of the singular here indicates to Steuernagel the activity of an annotator. The plurals in (3) are no doubt harmonistic. It may be added that the formulæ differ slightly from those in 8: cp especially 8 'go in and possess the land' with 21 'go up, possess.'

31 The loose connexion here suggests that the text may have been expanded by another hand (or possibly by the same hand at another time), incorporating a reference to the divine care manifested in the subsequent wanderings, 'this place' meaning the Trans-jordanic encampment as in 9<sup>7</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> 29<sup>7</sup> cp 26<sup>9</sup>. For the figure cp Ex 19<sup>4</sup> Deut 32<sup>11</sup>. In 33 the phrase 'who went before you' seems to be caught up from 30 'he goeth before you': for the word 'to seek out' cp Num 10<sup>33</sup>; the reading of (3) 'to lead you' instead of 'to pitch your tents in' (involving the transposition of a letter) perhaps indicates further dependence on Ex 13<sup>21</sup>. 32 M. Or, for all this thing.

35b (3) 'their fathers.'

37 Another explanatory addition, cp 32<sup>28</sup>, breaking the connexion resumed in 39b with 'but your children.' Nothing is said of this in Num 14. It would seem that the death of Moses before the passage of the Jordan came to be regarded as the penalty for some offence, and there was great difficulty in connecting it with any specific occasion. The matter is not cleared up even by P Num 20<sup>12</sup>.

39 These words do not occur in (3) and have probably been incorporated by a late editor from Num 14<sup>31</sup> (cp 3).

140 This verse has been sometimes regarded as a subsequent insertion derived from Num 14<sup>25</sup>. The derivation is unmistakable, but the verse may be needed at this point to explain 21.

41 M Or, deemed it a light thing.—§†.

46 On the chronological difficulty see Dillm and Driver in loc. The statement seems to be an attempt at harmonizing different traditions of the sojourn at Kadesh. The parallel in 9<sup>25</sup> where the peculiar phrase stands at a junction of earlier and later materials, points to a similar view concerning the present passage.

27 This verse is perhaps due to an annotator who desires to explain the ability of the Israelites to purchase the necessary food and drink from the children of Esau. It represents their wealth as due to the successful prosecution of agriculture cp 14<sup>29</sup> 16<sup>15</sup> 24<sup>19</sup> 28<sup>12</sup>; but it forgets that the wanderings with their diet of manna were intended as a season of humiliation and trial 82, not of accumulation and thrift. The sudden change from the plural to the singular, and the return to the plural in 8 should be noted.

9 The command here addressed to Moses is really as the parallels show 5 18, 24, designed for Israel and not for Moses personally. The use of the singular here and in 18, 24b 25 is in unexpected contrast with the plurals in 13 24a; but in view of the language of 27, it seems perfectly natural, and it does not appear necessary to attribute these passages to another hand.

10 The antiquarian notes in this and succeeding passages 20-23 30 11 are evidently not parts of the original narrative. Whether they were inserted by the author or by a later hand is doubtful.

not seem to have been part of the original traditions. (1) The only reference to it in Num 21<sup>33-35</sup> is generally accepted as an abstract from Deut 3<sup>1-7</sup>. If JE had contained it, why should the narrative have been suppressed in favour of a secondary version? (2) The account in Deut 3<sup>1-7</sup> has little or no independence; it follows step by step the story of the reduction of Sihon and the Amorites, employing parallel phrases, with slightly heightened detail in 5. But neither Og nor his kingdom is designated as of Amorite origin, and this title is significant in view of the title of Sihon 'king of the Amorites' 3<sup>2</sup>. (3) It may be fairly urged that the summary in Josh 24<sup>8</sup> does not include the capture of Bashan; and this inference is confirmed by the more detailed retrospect in Judg 11<sup>19-22</sup>, where the overthrow of Sihon is mentioned with the statement that 'Israel

<sup>12</sup> The allotment of the Trans-jordanic territories to Reuben and Gad is first described in the narrative at the base of Num 32, which has been reproduced under the influence of P. The data in the present passage are conflicting. According to <sup>12</sup>, Gilead is divided. Half of it is included in the territory assigned to Reuben and Gad, and half is handed over to the half tribe of Manasseh. But in <sup>15</sup> Moses is represented as giving Gilead to Machir cp Num 32<sup>40</sup>, the children of Machir being afterwards known as a clan of the tribe of Manasseh. (Num 32<sup>39</sup> actually credits them with the conquest over the Amorites, as though the settlement took place from the West of Jordan in the age following Moses. As the half tribe of Manasseh is not mentioned in Num 32<sup>1-32</sup>, it is probable that the original story contained no allusion to the settlement of the Manassite clans.) The same writer can hardly have written both <sup>12</sup> and <sup>15</sup>.

<sup>18</sup> This appears to refer to an address to the tribes desiring to settle on the east of the Jordan cp Num 32. The circumstances leading to it are not here named. Is this another of the independent elements wrought into the narrative by D, or has his text been curtailed by omission in consequence of editorial manipulations of the previous passage?

<sup>21</sup> Another of the passages marked by the vague phrase 'at that time.' Its position here has occasioned some perplexity, as there is no previous mention of such a command (e.g. in Num 32), and it appears to anticipate the instruction in <sup>28</sup> 'command Joshua' cp 138 and 313 7 23. Moreover, is it certain that the exhortation in <sup>21b</sup> 22 was intended for Joshua? The plural in <sup>22</sup> implies an address to the people: in <sup>21</sup> (3) reads 'your eyes,' and 'the Lord our God,' while Sam omits 'your God': in <sup>22</sup> 2 renders 'thou shalt not fear them.'

<sup>41</sup> The position of the great discourse in 41-40 has been much discussed (cp Driver, Deut lxi ff) and is not easy to determine. It depends in part on the view which may be taken of the character of 1-3, Dillm's theory of the original narrative-form of the Retrospect (cp 168) involving as its consequence another situation for the exhortation in 41-40. Even when this view is rejected, there are still peculiar phenomena requiring attention. (i) The tone of historical reminiscence is abandoned (save in <sup>21</sup>), for that of special warning 2. 15. . . Two themes receive forcible illustration, (i) the duty of Israel to cleave to Yahweh alone, and (ii) the divine unity and spirituality. The necessity of allegiance to Yahweh alone is emphasized by a reference to the incident

'in' (rather than 'because of' cp Driver in loc) Baal-peor<sup>3</sup> supplying a link of attachment to 3<sup>29</sup> (did the text of 4<sup>3</sup> originally run 'in Beth-peor,' and was it attracted afterwards to 'Baal-peor' by the following clause?). In 1-4, therefore, it is natural to see the hortatory sequel of 1<sup>6-329</sup>, and the summons to obey the statutes and judgements which are about to be announced<sup>1</sup> seems to point directly to 121. . . But (2) 5 affirms that 'statutes and judgements' to be observed in the land which Israel is about to enter (cp 1) have been already taught. Is the same situation implied in these passages? Is not 5 more appropriate to a concluding than to an introductory address? It is, indeed, proposed to explain the perfect by reference to previous statutes and judgements which Moses 'had, as occasion arose, impressed upon his people' (Driver, in loc). But they are apparently identified in 6 and 8 with 'all this law,' which elsewhere refers to the whole corpus of D's legislation. It is true that in 8 the phrase 'which I set before you this day' may again place the speaker before rather than after the main recital 12-26 cp 1. 40. But the phrase 'which I command you' 2 40 is employed with equal ease in the closing scenes in reference to the law which has been already enjoined eg 2710 281 13-15 302 8 11 16: it therefore carries with it no precise implication of priority to the actual exposition. Dillm's conjecture that some of the participles in the discourse were originally perfects, which were editorially changed when it was transferred to its present place, seems therefore unnecessary: and the tenses throw no difficulty in the way of the possibility that the main section 6-40 originally stood among the final exhortations. Reasons will be offered hereafter (see 3124<sup>n</sup>) for connecting it with 3124-29.

<sup>4</sup> Stress has been already laid on indications of diversity of conception between 1-3 and 5-11. If the exhortation in 4<sup>5-40</sup> is not to be associated with 1<sup>2-4</sup>, can it be attached to the second group of discourses? (1) It is probable that the author was acquainted with the narrative in 5; but he can hardly have been the same writer. He takes the same view 4<sup>10</sup>. concerning the identity of the assembly at Horeb with people whom Moses now addresses cp 5<sup>3</sup>. But the language of 11. adds fresh detail ('burned . . . to the heart of heaven') and emphasizes the main lesson 'ye saw no form.' The stress laid on the subsequent prohibition of any kind of idolatry implies that the command in 5 proved an insufficient safeguard: and it is difficult to suppose that the author of 5 would have himself prefixed to it a description of the same scene, and a series of injunctions so elaborate and detailed as those in 4<sup>15</sup>. . . These must, therefore, be regarded as supplemental. The apparent recognition of the legitimacy of the worship of the heavenly bodies for other nations <sup>19</sup>, finds no counterpart in 5-26. It shows affinity with the ideas of 32<sup>8</sup> (5), and suggests an effort to deal with the problem of the validity of other national worships which probably only forced itself on the mind of Israel when it was no longer on its own land. In that case this discourse may be regarded as an early utterance of the exilic polemic against participation in the Babylonian idolatries. The emphatic assertion of the sole deity of Yahweh <sup>35</sup> <sup>39</sup> harmonizes with this view (see the parallels below) which is further supported by 27-31. Driver has already treated 29-31 as an interpolation by D<sup>2</sup> cp Deut lxxvi. It may be doubted whether the loose use of 'for' in 32 can bear the whole weight of this inference; the connexion does not seem improved by a reference back to 28 (for other instances of defective precision cp 11<sup>22</sup> 30<sup>11</sup> 31<sup>20</sup>). But this passage resembles others which there is reason to regard as secondary cp 30<sup>1-10</sup>, and thus the general conclusion as to the probable date of the whole is strengthened. König, Eintl 213<sup>1</sup>, suggests that 25-31 may be an insertion. Steuermann treats 1-28 as pl. 29-40 as sing. (2) The linguistic indications in 5-40 are of two kinds: (i) as the margins show the discourse is steeped in the characteristic phraseology of the Deuteronomic school; (ii) it contains a number of words and phrases found elsewhere in

proper 12-26, or the Code preceded by the homilies 5-11? Either is possible, for even in its shortest form the law-book must have been introduced with some kind of title; 1<sup>2</sup> implies a speaker and an audience; these are identified by <sup>45</sup> which may well have been the nucleus of the whole (observe the peculiar use of 'testimonies' elsewhere in Hex only Deut 6<sup>17</sup> 20). On the probable community of authorship between the exhortations and the discourse of legislation cp 5<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>49</sup> M Or, springs. The discourses in 5-11 are here treated as substantially homogeneous. This does not exclude the possibility of occasional expansion by other hands, or of the incorporation of material from different sources. Nor does it imply that they were of necessity all composed at one time. But it indicates that they are marked by pervading unity of thought and style, and cannot be dissolved into any constituents distinguished by varieties of idea or expression. The recital of the Horeb covenant, here based on the Ten Words, leads to the first great sermon on the sublime text 6<sup>4</sup> 'Yahweh our God, Yahweh is one.' A second follows 9<sup>1</sup> on the duty of humble obedience 10<sup>12</sup>, illustrated by reference to the repeated acts in which Israel had provoked Yahweh, and concluding with threats against the apostates and promises for the faithful 11<sup>18</sup>-28. It may be freely recognized that throughout these exhortations the writer has the actual code of laws imaginatively before him 5<sup>1</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> 6<sup>1</sup>. 7<sup>11</sup>. 8<sup>1</sup> &c. The commandments have indeed been already divinely enjoined 6<sup>17</sup> 24, where the speaker does not seem to be alluding to their private communication to himself upon the mount 5<sup>31</sup>. The homilies may therefore be regarded as later than the main groups of the laws: but they are written in the same style, and from the same point of view. (1) The allusions to the circumstances of the Exodus and the wanderings seem all conceived in a common spirit cp 5<sup>15</sup> 6<sup>21</sup>. 7<sup>8</sup> 19 6<sup>26</sup> 11<sup>2</sup>-4 26<sup>8</sup>; the day of the assembly at Horeb 5<sup>22</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> 18<sup>16</sup> (cp Kuen, Hex § 7<sup>8</sup>, on the resemblance between 18<sup>16</sup>-20 and the hortatory introduction) marks the same era of revelation in each group. The situation of speaker and people is described in like terms: Israel is about to go over the Jordan to possess the land which Yahweh had sworn to their fathers to give them 6<sup>1</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> 11<sup>12</sup> 12<sup>10</sup>. The time is specified continually as 'this day' 5<sup>1</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> 15<sup>5</sup> &c. In both sec-

tional scheme by the title in 4<sup>16</sup>. It is not, however, necessary to suppose that they were all written at one time, or originally designed for their present order. Peculiar phenomena noticeable in 7 and in 9-10 will be discussed as they appear.

<sup>5</sup> This verse has been regarded as a later parenthetic insertion, for in 22, 10<sup>4</sup> cp 4<sup>12</sup> the divine Words are spoken to the whole people. In Ex 19<sup>9</sup> Moses alone is designated to receive them, and it is possible that the Deuteronomic representation has been thus combined and harmonized with the earlier passage.

<sup>8</sup> 5 has no preposition, and the rendering of the text is 'illegitimate' (Driver). Dillm supposes the words to have

strayed from the end of <sup>1</sup>: Driver suggests that a preceding clause has been omitted, such as 'in the land which Yahweh thy God is giving thee' cp 27<sup>3</sup>: (5) adds 'to give thee.'

24	4.	These correspondences suggest that 7
25	15	is an expansion of an earlier discourse in
26	14	Ex 23 <sup>23-33</sup> , standing at the close of E's
27	23	Covenant-Words. It is possible that 7

5a Cp 12<sup>3</sup> Ex 34<sup>13</sup>. The verse appears to interrupt the context. The 'devotion' of the entire population has been ordained in 2, but the command 'thus shall ye do unto them' seems to assume their continued existence, and only requires the destruction of their sacred objects. It may be noticed further that while 4<sup>a</sup> and 6 are cast in the singular, 5 breaks suddenly into the plural (cp Staerk, Deut 66): 4<sup>a</sup> seems the Deuteromic equivalent of Ex 34<sup>16b</sup>, and 4<sup>b</sup> may be an editorial expansion.

22 So M. T at once.—The apparent contradiction with 9<sup>3</sup> has given rise to the suggestion that this verse is due to another hand. It is probable that the writer here founds himself on his earlier model Ex 23<sup>29</sup>. The difficulty rather lies in the languageof 9<sup>3</sup>, 'quickly, as Yahweh hath spoken unto thee.' To what divine promise does this refer? No such expectation is encouraged in Ex 23<sup>23-31</sup>. Must it not be concluded that the preacher does not always remain at exactly the same point of view? Or may we suppose that other exhortations now lost once justified the hope?24 A different Hebrew word for 'stand' is used in the corresponding formula Josh 10<sup>6</sup> 21<sup>42</sup> 23<sup>9</sup>†.

<sup>9</sup> The retrospect in 9<sup>9-10</sup> is now involved in so much confusion as to render its analysis very difficult. It is obviously founded on the combined narrative in Ex 32-34, but the earlier materials are treated with remarkable freedom, (1) in respect of language, and (2) in the unexpected combination of different passages. The dependence of D on JE and the fresh phraseology with which he has enriched the story, may be indicated by the following parallels, where the common matter is printed in italics.

13 And Yahweh said unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people; <sup>14</sup> desist from me, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven: and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they. <sup>15</sup> And I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant [were] on my two hands.

<sup>26</sup> And I prayed unto Yahweh, and said, O Lord Yahweh, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand. <sup>27</sup> Remember thy servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin: <sup>28</sup> lest the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because Yahweh was not able to bring them in to the land which he promised unto them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to kill them in the wilderness. <sup>29</sup> Yet are they thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast brought forth with thy great power and with thy stretched out arm.

It may, however, be doubted whether the homiletic address in 9-21 has not received additional illustrations from an annotator.

Ex 32<sup>9</sup> 10 15

<sup>9</sup> And Yahweh said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people. <sup>10</sup> Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation. . . . <sup>15</sup> And Moses turned and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony [were] in his hand.

Ex 32<sup>11</sup> 13

Num 14<sup>16</sup> 16<sup>13</sup>

. . . Because Yahweh was not able to bring this people in to the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

which thou hast brought forth with great power and with a mighty hand.

Such seems to be the source of the references in 22. which break the continuity of 21<sup>26</sup> (2<sup>25</sup>), and are related with a brevity compared with which the lengthy recital of the great apostasy seems quite disproportionate. It is possible that the passage 18-20 may owe its position to a similar cause, the antecedents of 17 21 in Ex 32<sup>19</sup> being continuous:—

Deut 9<sup>17</sup> 21

<sup>17</sup> And I took hold of the two tables, and I cast them from on my two hands, and I brake them before your eyes. . . . <sup>21</sup> And I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and I burned it with fire and stamped it, grinding it very small, until it was crushed fine as dust: and I cast the dust into the brook thereof that descended out of the mount.

The dislocations of order in 9<sup>9-29</sup>, however, compared with Ex 32 suggest that the recital has been rearranged. According to the sequence of JE the retrospect would have more nearly assumed the following form: <sup>8</sup> 9 (1 Ex 34<sup>28</sup>) <sup>10</sup> (Ex 31<sup>18</sup>) 11-14 26-29 15-17 21 18-20. But <sup>29</sup> finds its sequel in 10<sup>10b</sup>, and 26-29 10b 11 seem to have been deliberately removed to the end of the story, to exhibit the instructions for departure in immediate sequence on the divine condescension to the prayer of Moses. The question is in this case complicated by the reference to the period of forty days cp 9<sup>9</sup> 18 25 10<sup>10</sup>. How many such mountain-sojourns are intended? In Ex 24 32-34 only two are named 24<sup>18b</sup> and 34<sup>28a</sup> on occasion of the first and second gift of the tables bearing the Ten Words. There is no mention of any third period corresponding to that of intercession in 9<sup>18</sup> where the allusion to fasting seems dependent on 9<sup>9</sup>, which in its turn appears to rest on Ex 34<sup>28a</sup>, and to be transferred as a complementary detail from the second sojourn to the first. Ex 32<sup>32</sup>, however, does contain a reference to an intervening ascent for purposes of prayer and atonement, and this has been sometimes reckoned at the same length of forty days. This was the interpretation of the Rabbis; so Reuss among moderns; Dillmann, Montet, Oettli, Driver, and Steuernagel, however, only recognize two periods and identify 18 25 with Ex 34<sup>28</sup>. But the freedom with which D handled the older traditions may well have led him to allot the same duration for the great intercession; and it is still possible that 9<sup>18-20</sup> with its strong Deuteronomic phraseology may be founded on this incident. Addis inclines to the view of Koster that 'as the words stand they seem to indicate a fast not mentioned elsewhere, viz one at the foot of the Mount.' The allusion in 20 to the divine anger with Aaron implies the presence in the older traditions of elements which have been since eliminated. (On the apparent return to the forty days of intercession in 10<sup>10</sup> cp 10<sup>1N</sup>.) There remains the insertion 22-25, which reads like an addition from the same hand in further illustration of 9<sup>7</sup>. If this was an afterthought, interpolated at a later stage, it may have been in part the cause of the redistribution of the elements of the narrative, and have called into existence <sup>25</sup> to resume the main story.

<sup>19b</sup> And Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables from his hand, and he brake them under the mount. And he took the calf which they had made, and he burned it with fire, and ground it until it was crushed fine, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

to all the words, which Yahweh <sup>x</sup>spake with you in the mount <sup>u</sup>out
to pass at the end of <sup>f</sup>forty days and forty nights, that Yahweh gave me the two tables of stone, even the <sup>t</sup>tables of the covenant. <sup>12</sup> <sup>z</sup>And Yahweh said unto me, <sup>a</sup>'Arise, get thee down <sup>k</sup>quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast <sup>w</sup>brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are <sup>k</sup>quickly <sup>x</sup>turned aside out of the way <sup>y</sup>which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image. <sup>13</sup> <sup>n</sup>Furthermore Yahweh spake unto me, saying, <sup>a</sup>'I have seen this people, and,
them, and <sup>c</sup>'blot out their name from under heaven: and I will <sup>d</sup>'make of thee a nation <sup>c</sup>'mightier and greater than they. <sup>15</sup> So I <sup>z</sup>turned and came down from the mount, and the <sup>e</sup>'mount burned with fire: and the two <sup>t</sup>tables of the covenant were in my two hands. <sup>16</sup> And I <sup>f</sup>'looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against Yahweh your God; ye had made
Yahweh had commanded you<sup>u</sup>. <sup>17</sup> And I took hold of the two tables, and <sup>h</sup>'cast them out of my two hands, and brake them <sup>w</sup>'before your eyes.

forty nights; I did neither <sup>w</sup>'eat bread nor drink water; because of all your <sup>j</sup>'sin which ye sinned, in <sup>v</sup>'doing that which was evil in the sight of Yahweh, to provoke him to anger. <sup>19</sup> For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith Yahweh was wroth against you to <sup>h</sup>destroy you. But Yahweh hearkened unto me that time also. <sup>20</sup> And Yahweh was very <sup>a</sup>'angry with Aaron to have <sup>h</sup>destroyed him: and
<sup>21</sup> And I <sup>m</sup>'took your <sup>j</sup>'sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, grinding it <sup>d</sup>'very small, until it was as fine as dust:
and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

<sup>25</sup> So I fell down before Yahweh the <sup>f</sup>'forty days and forty nights <sup>u</sup>'that I fell down; because Yahweh had said he would <sup>h</sup>destroy you.

911 This verse has been sometimes treated as a doublet of 10. Dillm and Driver, however, see in it an addition to the statement in 10, viz that the gift of the tables took place at the end of the forty days. Horst, on the other hand, RHR xvi 32, joins 9b with 10 and 9b with 11.

13  $\S$  = And Yahweh said unto me saying. The opening words are identical with those of 12: cp Ex 32<sup>7</sup> 9. Steuernagel supposes the harmonist to have added 12 to Deut from Ex 32<sup>7</sup>, and to have incorporated Deut 9<sup>13</sup> by a reverse process in Ex 32<sup>9</sup>.  $\S$  has a curious addition, 'And the Lord said unto me, I have spoken unto thee once and twice saying, I have seen &c.'

18 Cp 9<sup>N</sup>. The reference to Aaron in 20 is probably founded on material not now preserved in JE, where the expostulation of Moses with Aaron Ex 32<sup>22</sup>, is followed by the massacre of three thousand of the idolaters at the hands of the sons of Levi 23-29, and the guilty Aaron unexpectedly disappears from the scene.

22 Cp 9<sup>N</sup>. The further reminiscences of Israel's rebellious temper (here marked as a possible addition by a later hand, though they may be due simply to the expansive manner of D) are brought back to the Horeb scenes by a second reference to the forty days' intercession. It may be noted that the English 'so' 25, like 'also' 8, 'furthermore' 13, and 'so' 15, only represents the Hebrew particle usually translated 'and' e.g. 18 10-9. It is possible that 25 originally belonged to D's retrospect of Israel's offence, and that only the words 'the forty days and forty nights that I fell down' were added by the annotator for purposes of identification.

10<sup>9</sup> G according as he spake, omitting 'Yahweh thy God.'

11 The proposal of Bacon (Triple Trad 258) to detach 101-11 and place it before 16., overlooks the fact that 9<sup>25-29</sup> would then be broken off abruptly without any close; 10<sup>10</sup> would be obviously out of place; while 101 would be unintelligible without some previous explanation to lead up to it and fix the occasion. It would be therefore necessary to suppose that the beginning of the retrospect was lost. The view of Horst, EHR xvi 32 f., overcomes the immediate difficulty of separating 101-11 from its context, by transporting the whole series of reminiscences to the opening of the introductory survey 1-3. This involves, however, other perplexities, for what preceded the story of the Golden Calf in its altered position? The announcement of the Ten Words would be the only possible prelude, and this is already described in 5. Is that also severed from its natural sequel? The group of recollections is surely more in harmony with its surroundings where it stands. In spite of some misproportion in detail it forms a suitable arraignment against Israel which is fitting in its context. But there would be no appropriateness in opening the great address with such a series of charges, as though this was the chief issue of the wanderings. <sup>15</sup> M Or, out of.

29 A similar allusion to the ceremony enjoined in 27<sup>11</sup>. Are the 'blessing' and the 'curse' in 29 to be identified with those named in 28-28? It is no more certain here than in the case of

27<sup>12</sup>, and 28. The connexion seems to be verbal, rather than material. Dillm (with Valeton) regards the passage as imported from some other connexion, perhaps after 27<sup>1-3</sup>. It may be doubted, however, whether it really fits the subsequent context any better; and it has rather the air of an addition suggested to a later scribe by the associated ideas of 'blessing' and 'curse.' Kautzsch and Steuernagel treat 31. also as secondary. But a conclusion to the homilies seems needed after 26-28 (cp Addis), and 32 leads up to the opening of the code in 12<sup>1</sup>. The interrogative form in 30 cp 31 implies the archaeological annotator rather than the speaker; or it may have grown out of the hint of the passage of the Jordan 31. (It is somewhat curious that at 29 the plural 'ye' should give way to 'thou,' to be resumed in 31.) Dillm, having once proposed to remove 29<sup>1</sup>, applies his suggestion further to 26-28. But the participle in 26 is not so definite as the perfects in 30<sup>1</sup> 15 (cp 4<sup>5</sup>), and like the phrases in

12<sup>1a</sup> The essential elements of the Deuteronomic legislation are usually discovered in 12-26. This is the proper 'law' 15; it bears its own title 12<sup>1</sup>: and to this the homilies in 5-11 continually point. It may be asked (1) does the Code present itself as a complete and homogeneous whole? Or (2) does it show traces of the aggregation of dissimilar materials, or (3) exhibit signs of the combination or juxtaposition of different legal drafts embodying the same principles? A few observations are here offered on these points: a discussion of the special affinities of the laws of D with those of JE and P with an examination of their historical relations will be found in the Introd IX. (1) The code in its present form is bound together by a number of recurring phrases, ascribing its several parts to a common situation, the approaching entrance of Israel into the land given to their fathers e.g. 12<sup>1</sup> 9 20 29 15<sup>4</sup> 17<sup>14</sup> 18<sup>9</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> 14 20<sup>16</sup> 21<sup>1</sup> 23<sup>20</sup> 24<sup>4</sup> 25<sup>15</sup> 19 26<sup>1</sup>. Allusions to the Egyptian bondage cp 97, promises of long life and prosperity as the result of obedience 73, 116, and references to the place which Yahweh shall choose 87, further indicate a pervading unity of thought and style. Similarly the laws exhibit various common terms and formulae, such as 'abomination' 9, 'thine eye shall not pity' 43<sup>b</sup>, 'if there be found' 49, 'and it be sin unto thee' 102, 'the stranger, the fatherless and the widow' 105, 'hear and fear' 13<sup>11</sup> 17<sup>13</sup> 19<sup>20</sup> 21<sup>21</sup>. But (2) the unity thus implied includes beneath it great diversity both of contents and expression. The first half of the code deals with the fundamental theocratic obligations of the holy people, and the great civil and religious powers instituted for its guidance, judge, priest, king, and prophet 12-18. The second portion, however, especially 20-25, is of a very miscellaneous character. On the one hand it contains groups of regulations, such as those for the conduct of war 20<sup>10</sup>.. 23<sup>9</sup>.., which are highly elaborated: on the other, it inserts a brief solitary precept such as 22<sup>30</sup> which forms but a single case in a whole list of similar prohibitions elsewhere; or as in 25<sup>16</sup> enunciates a general prophetic principle in the midst of a set of specific rules for social justice. One series is distinguished by the regular appearance of the 'elders' 19<sup>12</sup> 21<sup>2</sup> 19 22<sup>15</sup> 25<sup>7</sup>: another is concerned with humanity to animals 22<sup>1-4</sup> 6, and kindness to slaves, debtors, and the poor 23<sup>15</sup> 19. 24<sup>6</sup> 10. 14. 19.; a third deals with family difficulties and the relations of the sexes 21<sup>15</sup>.. 18.. 22<sup>13-29</sup> 24<sup>1-5</sup> 25<sup>9</sup>..; a fourth lays down rules of exclusion from the holy community 23<sup>1-8</sup>. These groups sometimes exhibit points of contact, as in the case of the 'elders' who have their place in the family incidents as well as in more elaborate judicial arrangements; or, again, in the exemption of the newly married from military service 24<sup>5</sup>. But it does not appear possible to discriminate them clearly from one another on grounds either of contents or form. The laws are cast in various types of command and prohibition (e.g. 2nd masc sing, positive 22<sup>12</sup>, negative 22<sup>1</sup> 4 9-11; conditional 21<sup>10</sup> 22<sup>8</sup> 23<sup>9</sup> &c; 3rd masc sing or pl negative 23<sup>1-8</sup> 24<sup>6</sup> 16, conditional 21<sup>15</sup> 22<sup>13</sup> 22 24<sup>7</sup> 25<sup>1</sup> 6 11). The technical terms and expressions do not seem restricted to special classes; thus 'abomination' covers offences as far apart as idolatry and magic, unchastity, and the use of false weights and measures. A literary analysis of these chapters, therefore, appears highly artificial and precarious, if not absolutely impossible. But it may be doubted whether the entire collection was really included in Josiah's law-book. The materials in 12-18 are on the whole closely connected with each other (see, however, 14<sup>18</sup>) in spite of occasional indications of doubling or misplacement. In 17<sup>4</sup> 18<sup>9</sup> a formula enters which does not recur again until 26<sup>1</sup>. Is it possible that the paragraphs thus introduced were originally closer to each other? The main contents of 19 (apart from 14 which is quite isolated) are not incongruous with the preceding group and touch it at many points cp 19<sup>1</sup> 12<sup>29</sup>, and parallels with 19<sup>4</sup> 7 13 and 15-21. But such indications are rarer in 20-25. May it not be conjectured that in its earliest form the Code was considerably shorter, and only received into itself much of the material in 20-25 by later processes of incorporation which can no longer be traced in detail?*

(3) The probability that the Deuteronomic legislation contains elements from various sources is increased by the evidence of the coexistence of different forms of the same law side by side, and the occasional blending of separate regulations into one. Apart from signs of later redactional activity (cp 13<sup>3b-4</sup> 15<sup>4-6</sup> 17<sup>16</sup> 18. 18<sup>15</sup> 19<sup>8</sup>. 17 20<sup>2-4</sup> 17 21<sup>2</sup> 5 22<sup>24</sup>), it appears plain, for example, that the fundamental principle of the unity of the sanctuary is embodied in at least two different drafts cp 12<sup>28</sup>. The law directed against the worship of other gods in 13 has a counterpart in 17<sup>2-7</sup>. The annual tithe 14<sup>22-27</sup> applied to agricultural produce passes without recognition in 26, which provides liturgical treatment for the firstfruits of the ground 1-11 cp 18<sup>4</sup>, and the triennial tithe 12-15 cp 14<sup>28</sup>. Two tests of false prophecy are offered 13<sup>1-5</sup> and 18<sup>20-22</sup>: but the criterion which is disallowed in 13<sup>2</sup> (the actual verification of a prediction) is made the basis of discrimination in 18<sup>22</sup>. Not only are there separate laws on the same subject which are not conceived quite in the same mould, but it is probable that varying details have been sometimes wrought into one combined text. In some cases the editorial process has apparently been limited to simple explanation or addition cp 15<sup>1-3</sup> and 4-6 17<sup>18</sup>. 19<sup>8</sup>. 17 20<sup>2b-4</sup> 21<sup>5</sup> 26<sup>4</sup>: in others, the harmonist's activity has welded diverse materials into complete union cp 16<sup>1-8</sup> 17<sup>2-7</sup> 8-12 18<sup>1-5</sup>. It is probably to the derivation of the laws from various shorter collections that the occasional separation of precepts on related subjects is to be ascribed e.g. blemished animals 15<sup>21</sup> and 17<sup>1</sup>, loans 15<sup>1-3</sup> 23<sup>19</sup>, pledges 24<sup>6</sup> and 10-13, rectitude in the administration of justice 16<sup>19</sup> 24<sup>17</sup>, the release of the newly married from military service 20<sup>7</sup> 24<sup>5</sup>. On the other hand 23<sup>17</sup> and 18, though conjoined, appear to treat the temple-prostitute from different points of view (the forms of the prohibitions, also, vary, and 'the house of Yahweh thy God' 19 occurs nowhere else in Deut cp Ex 23<sup>19</sup> || 34<sup>26</sup>).

(4) If the Deuteronomic Code 12-26 may thus be regarded as bearing on its face signs of compilation from different sources, is it possible to determine their general character? Many laws are plainly related to regulations in JE and PH (cp the margins and Introd IX i 2a) i.e. the Code includes materials from the collections of both Judah and Ephraim. But many more have no parallel elsewhere (cp Introd i 73<sup>6</sup>). Some, like those dealing with a supreme court of appeal 17<sup>9-13</sup>, the monarchy 17<sup>14-20</sup>, prophecy 18<sup>9-22</sup>, are concerned with great historical institutions, and must be explained in connexion with their age. Others, as in the cases of seduction to idolatry 13, enforce under the form of law and penalty profound religious principles, or, like those dealing with behaviour in war 20 23<sup>9-14</sup>, attempt to express certain ideas rather than to regulate actual practice. On the other hand, the ritual enjoined for the expiation of undiscovered murder 21<sup>1-9</sup> probably rests on very ancient usage; and the group of laws dealing with the family and the sexes 21<sup>15-21</sup> 22<sup>15-21</sup> 24<sup>1-4</sup> 25<sup>5-10</sup> must embody much antique custom. So doubtless do regulations like 23<sup>24</sup>. and 25<sup>11</sup>. The section on exclusion from 'Yahweh's assembly' 23<sup>1-8</sup> seems by its peculiar terminology (cp Num 16<sup>3</sup>) to be drawn from some corpus of priestly law analogous to that which has supplied the materials of 14<sup>4-20</sup>. To a similar source may probably be assigned the laws which bear on different kinds of defilement 21<sup>22</sup>. 23<sup>9-14</sup> 17., or the payment of vows 23<sup>21</sup>. and leprosy 24<sup>8</sup>. On the question how far the older nucleus of law can occasionally be disengaged from the homiletic envelopment of the Deuteronomic editors cp Introd i 74 and Table of Laws.

12<sup>1b</sup> (G<sup>AE</sup>L your fathers, hath given you, probably harmonizing. It is possible that <sup>1</sup> combines two introductions to the different drafts in 2-12 and 13-28 couched in the pl and sing address respectively.

<sup>2</sup> The first 'statute' regulates the conduct of public worship. All idolatrous sanctuaries are to be abolished, and the sacrifice which constituted the essence of the cultus is to be offered at one centre only. The difficulties introduced into domestic usage by this destruction of all local altars lead to modifications of ancient custom connected with the slaughter of animals from the flock or herd. Such is a summary of 2-23. But the question has been asked by a long succession of critics from Vater and Stähelin whether this law is throughout from the same hand. In outward form it falls at once into two sections 2-12 and 13-28 marked respectively by the prevailing use of the plural and the singular address. In these two divisions the fundamental principle is repeated cp 13. and 4., 17. and 6.. But further, each section contains its own repetitions. In 2-12 lie parallel commands 5-7 and 11., and they are introduced by separate prefaces 2-4 and 8-10. Is it likely that the same author would thus reproduce himself? Or if unity of authorship be conceded here, what reason can be alleged why the prohibition and command 4. in the plural should be renewed 13. in the singular? In 13-26 the plural is of rare occurrence [13<sup>3b-5a</sup> 14<sup>1</sup> 4-21<sup>aa</sup> 17<sup>16</sup> 18<sup>15</sup> 19<sup>19</sup> 20<sup>2-4</sup> 18<sup>22-24</sup> 23<sup>4</sup> 24<sup>8</sup>. 25<sup>17</sup>]; in some cases it may be accidental, in others it enters where there is independent reason for recognizing (or at least suspecting) an interpolating hand. The employment of the plural in an elaborate legislative passage like 2-12 has no parallel elsewhere in the Code (though frequent enough in the homilies) except in 14<sup>1</sup> 4-21., and it suggests that the two main sections of 12 may be regarded as different drafts of the same law. The further appearance of duplicates within 2-12 finds a counterpart in the doublets 15. and 21., and 17. and 26.. The probability that these latter at least are independent, is shown by the apparent insertion of 16 in order to bring the first statement up to a level with the second. The concession in 15 needed a warning against possible abuse: this was perhaps added editorially in 16<sup>a</sup>, and a later copyist may have attached 16<sup>b</sup> = 24<sup>b</sup> to complete the parallel with 23.. In that case 20-27 may be regarded as a fresh and detailed treatment of a difficulty arising out of 13., inadequately met by 15 (so also, substantially, Addis, who points out that the clause in 21 'as I have commanded thee' refers to 15: Steuern ascribes both the clauses in 21 and 15. to later copyists). The text of these amalgamated laws has probably received many harmonizing touches.

14<sup>1</sup> In 1-21 different elements seem to have been combined. The phraseology of 1 is peculiar, and the usages which it forbids seem still to have been practised without reproach in the latest days of the monarchy cp Jer 16<sup>6</sup> Ezek 7<sup>18</sup>. Parallels will be found in P<sup>h</sup> Lev 19<sup>26-28</sup> and 21<sup>5</sup>. The sequel in 2 is identical with 7<sup>6</sup>, and may have been editorially reproduced. In 3 the common form of Deuteronomic prohibition in the 2nd sing is resumed. But the catalogue in 4-20 is throughout couched in the plural cp 12<sup>2N</sup>, and both in form and contents appears alien to the style and matter of the Code. The conclusion of the dietary laws 21<sup>a</sup> belongs to the same group: but the final injunction against seething a kid in its mother's milk 21<sup>b</sup> is found in the short codes of both J and E Ex 34<sup>26</sup> 23<sup>19</sup>. The clause 21<sup>b</sup> completes 3, supplying the reason for the prohibition of unhal-

<sup>4</sup> The relation of this list 4-20 to that of Lev 11<sup>2-23</sup> has been much discussed, as the facts do not seem to point to any very decisive conclusion. That the style and phraseology belong rather to P than to D is generally recognized cp 'kind' 13 15 18 18<sup>a</sup> and 'creeping things' 19 (= swarm S) 157. It is believed, therefore, that the list has been derived by D from the priestly schools, and embodies regulations which had probably been already reduced to writing. The question whether those regulations were then current in the form contained in Lev 11 is less easy to decide. On the one hand Deut 14<sup>4</sup> specifies the common lawful animals which Lev does not mention; on the other hand the parallels to 7-10 are much fuller and 14-20 is much briefer than Lev 11<sup>20-23</sup>. If the Deuteronomic version is on the whole an abridgement of the Levitical, why should 4-5 supply detail omitted by the prior list: and if, on the other hand, the Deuteronomic list is supplementary, why should it conclude so abruptly? The difficulty points to the view that neither is directly dependent on the other, but that both are derived separately from an earlier form; D then classes the forbidden foods under the familiar term 'abomination' <sup>5</sup> cp <sup>p</sup>g, while P prefers the words 'detest' and 'detestation' Lev 11<sup>10-13</sup> 20 23 41 43 (S) as in Deut 7<sup>26</sup>. On other grounds, however, there is some reason to think Deut 11<sup>3-21</sup> earlier than Lev 11. For the supplement in <sup>21</sup> prohibits the Israelite from eating the flesh of any animal that has died of itself, but allows it to be given to the 'stranger.' In Lev 17<sup>15</sup>, the 'stranger' (as elsewhere in P, see Laus) is placed on the same footing as the Israelite, and the practice of eating such food is recognized for all persons on condition of subsequent purification from the defilement which it involved 'till the evening.' Now the regulation of Lev 11<sup>30</sup>, modifies the stringency of the Deuteronomic precept in the same manner, and presumably, therefore, belongs to a later date. Hommel, Expos Times 1897 July p 473, suggests that the substitution of 'stranger' for 'dogs' Ex 22<sup>31</sup> is due to a redactor of the time of Ezra, when aversion to everything foreign had reached its climax.

<sup>4</sup> An additional utterance of enthusiastic piety, in conflict with 7-11 (especially with 11a) and hardly to be ascribed to the same discourse (Addis, however, urges that the original author describes an ideal distribution of wealth, consequent on ideal obedience). 161 The Calendar of feasts 1-17 rests on the briefer laws in J Ex 34<sup>18</sup>, cp E 23<sup>14</sup>, with which it agrees in specifying three annual festivals in contrast with the longer series in Lev 23. Some differences of terminology may be observed, e.g. 'weeks' 10 and 'booths' 13; but a more important divergence is noticeable in 1-8. E does not mention the passover at all, and in J the reference to it is probably an editorial adaptation Ex 34<sup>25</sup> cp 23<sup>18</sup>. But D combines it 1-8 with the feast of unleavened bread. Closer examination makes it probable that the entire calendar 1-17 comprises different elements which have not been perfectly fused together. This is especially manifest in 1-8, which unites two separate sets of instructions, (1) relating to the celebration of unleavened bread in the home, and (2) enjoining the observance of the passover at the central sanctuary. The latter involved an act of sacrifice, and the fundamental law in 12 required therefore that it should be performed only at the temple in Jerusalem. The principal stress falls on this ordinance 1, 5-7; and the analogy of the laws in 12 suggests that these passages were originally consecutive. They conclude with the direction that on the morning after the passover sacrifice the worshipper shall return home (cp Driver, Deut 194). But with the month Abib was also connected the feast of Mazzoth (or unleavened bread) Ex 13<sup>4-7</sup>. This feast is now formally combined with the passover in 8. The command seems based on two previous passages, and its affinities may be tabulated thus:—

Deut 16

3a Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it.

3b Seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread with it, even the bread of affliction; for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste: that thou

Ex

23<sup>18a</sup> 34<sup>26a</sup> Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread.

13<sup>8a</sup> Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread.

Deut 16

mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

4a And there shall be no leaven seen with thee in all thy borders seven days;

4b neither shall any of the flesh, which thou sacrificest the first day at even, remain all night unto (5) the morning.

Ex

13<sup>7b</sup> And there shall be no leaven seen with thee in all thy borders:

34<sup>26b</sup> neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover remain unto (5) the morning.

23<sup>18b</sup> neither shall the fat of my feast remain all night until (12) morning.

The language of Deut 16<sup>4</sup> 'in all thy borders' shows that the scene of celebration was the home, in contrast with the place of Yahweh's choice 2<sup>6</sup>. That was originally also, it would seem, the locality likewise of the sacrifice which may now no more be slaughtered within the gates or offered at the nearest sanctuary. In uniting the regulations for the two feasts the compiler has added the words 'with it' in 3b: but in 4b the words 'the first day at even' were probably in some older authority. They seem to refer to the first of the seven days of Mazzoth, as if the passover were connected with the beginning of Mazzoth. The transfer of the passover to Jerusalem involved a dislocation, so that D arranges for it to precede the beginning of Mazzoth which was to be kept in the home. This is actually specified in the Levitical calendar Lev 23<sup>5</sup>, no doubt on the basis of prior usage. For other older elements in D's calendar cp 16<sup>8</sup>. In that passage the passover is unnamed. But in the record of Josiah's reformation the new way of celebrating the passover is specially emphasized 2 Kings 23<sup>21-23</sup>, while Mazzoth is naturally ignored, being still observed on the old lines. Whether the incongruous elements in 8. and 16. were incorporated by the author of the code himself, or represent a later effort of amalgamation (Steinert assigns them to R) can hardly be determined, but it seems safest to attribute them to the hand which made so much use of older laws.

10 M Or, after the measure of the &c.—5†.

11 In 14 the needy of all kinds are included in the great annual feast of rejoicing for the fruits of the earth; but they are not named as participants in the spring festival 1-8. As the enumeration of the household-community seems completed with the Levites, it has been conjectured that their mention here (cp 14) is supplemental cp 12<sup>12</sup> 18 14<sup>26</sup>. (cp Staerk, Deut 12).

12 This verse seems only loosely connected with the preceding context: there is no definite reminiscence attached to 'weeks' like that in 8: and the closing reference to obedience sounds premature in the middle of an uncompleted series (cp Steuern, Deut 54).

13 16b So M 5. T tabernacles. 16a Founded on Ex 34<sup>23</sup> cp 23<sup>17</sup>. It will be noticed that in the enumeration of the feasts the passover 1. is omitted, and unleavened bread 3 alone is named. Moreover only males are required to attend, as in the older law; whereas 11 and 14 prescribe the presence of whole households, together with their poor dependants. Further the phraseology of 17 differs from that of 10, being, indeed, in each case unique.

Driver in loc. and Nowack, Hebr Archaeol i 323. But it will be made probable elsewhere that the priests are editorially associated with the secular functionaries cp 10<sup>17</sup> 20<sup>2</sup>, 21<sup>5</sup>, and a similar union may perhaps be traced here. The doublets in <sup>10</sup> and <sup>11</sup> may then be sorted thus:—

L.

9b And they (so G Sam cp 10<sup>18</sup>) shall inquire and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgement, 10a and thou shalt do according to the tenor of the sentence which they shall shew thee from that place which Yahweh shall choose : 11b thou shalt not turn aside from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand nor to the left.

II.

10<sup>b</sup> And thou shalt observe to do according to all that they shall teach thee: <sup>11<sup>a</sup></sup> according to the tenor of the teaching which they shall teach thee (R adds and according to the judgement which they shall tell thee) shalt thou do. <sup>12</sup> And the man that doeth presumptuously in not hearkening unto the priest that standeth to minister there before Yahweh thy God (R adds or unto the judge), even that man shall die.

Here I is based on the 'judgement' of the civil judge, while II rests on the 'teaching' or 'law' (š torah) of the priests. These are set side by side in <sup>9a</sup> but in the sources behind the combination they were distinct. <sup>9b</sup> apparently endeavoured to simplify the difficulty by omitting unto the priests the Levites and <sup>9</sup> (though Steuern suggests a possibility of confusion through the double be) and curtailing II. (Cf Staerk 14 and Steuern loc. cit.)

18 The allusion to the book of the law under the guardianship of the Levitical priests plainly presupposes one of the accounts in 31<sup>9</sup>.. or in 31<sup>24</sup>... It is not, however, necessary to regard the whole section 14-20 as a later addition to the Code on this ground. The reference in 18. may have been inserted into the older law. The context in 19-20 is not quite satisfactory, for it is not clear why the king's hear should be 'lifted up above his brethren': if, however, 18-19 be removed, the missing connexion is restored, 'neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold, that his heart be not lifted up' & cp 81<sup>2-14</sup> 'lest... when thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, ... then thine heart be lifted up.'

18<sup>a</sup> The text as it stands identifies 'the priests the Levites' with 'the whole tribe of Levi.' No doubt this is historically justifiable, but it is possible that it results in this passage from the juxtaposition of two laws regulating the Levitical revenues. An examination of the text of 1<sup>b</sup> 'the offerings of Yahweh made by fire and his inheritance shall they eat' reveals some confusion, for to whom does the pronoun his refer? The phrase 'and his inheritance' can hardly be applied to Yahweh. (3) omits and, rendering 'the offerings of Yahweh [are] their inheritance, they shall eat them.' In 2 5 runs 'and he shall have no inheritance among his brethren, Yahweh is his inheritance, as he spake unto him' cp 10<sup>b</sup>, the subject here being 'the whole tribe of Levi.' 1, therefore, in its original form without the words 'all the tribe of Levi,' is parallel to 2, to which 'all the tribe of Levi' was probably the antecedent. The reference to 'the priests' in 3 connects it with 1, while the singular 'him' in 4. carries on the same pronoun in 2 (Steuern attributes 1 to R., and 2-5 to his 'singular' author; cp Staerk, Deut 10).

18<sup>15b</sup> Sam (G) read 'from the midst of (among) thy brethren' as in 18 17<sup>15</sup>. The last clause seems to break the connexion with the following verse, and its plural form is unexpected in the midst of the singular address cp 12<sup>28</sup>.

<sup>21</sup> If one be found slain in the land which Yahweh thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath smitten him: <sup>2</sup> then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain: <sup>3</sup> and it shall be, that the city which is nearest unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer of the herd, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke; <sup>4</sup> and the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a valley with running water, which is neither plowed nor sown, and shall break the heifer's neck there in the valley:

<sup>5</sup> And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near; for them Yahweh thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of Yahweh; and according to their word shall every controversy and every stroke be.

18 This verse has a supplemental air after the close in 17<sup>b</sup>: the plural pronoun perhaps indicates the presence of the expander cp 12<sup>31</sup>. In the last clause of the formula 'and it be sin in thee' 102.

2 The 'judges' are not named again, unless this be an anticipatory reference to the judicial functions of the priests 5<sup>b</sup> cp 19<sup>17</sup>. The word may be a harmonistic addition (cp Staerk, Deut 17, Steuern in loc), or possibly a trace of the amalgamation of two forms of the same law; cp in 3 'which hath not been wrought with' and 'which hath not drawn in the yoke,' which also look like doublets from separate sources.

5 With the entrance of the priests here cp 20<sup>2</sup>. They are not mentioned before (unless 'judges' 2 points to them), and they have no part in the expiatory rite described in 4 6-8; for what purpose, then, do they 'come near'? The reference to them may rest on ancient usage, but it has the air here of an afterthought. With the designation 'sons of Levi' cp 31<sup>9</sup>, and cf 17<sup>9</sup> 18 18<sup>1</sup> 24<sup>8</sup>.

22<sup>30</sup> Cp the longer lists of prohibited degrees of affinity in Lev 18 and 20. The mention of one single case here suggests that the laws in this section of the code may be of various origin, but no clue to the principles of selection seems discoverable.

23<sup>1</sup> A peculiar group of rules in 1-8 is concerned with limitations on the right of entry into the assembly of Yahweh (a formula not found elsewhere, though cp Lam 1<sup>10</sup>; Neh 13<sup>1</sup> is founded on this passage). The term 'Yahweh's assembly' occurs also in Num 16<sup>3</sup> 20<sup>4</sup> and Mic 2<sup>5</sup>; and points to the derivation of these regulations from the priestly schools which were occupied with the principles of ritual purity (cp 14<sup>3</sup>. and 24<sup>8</sup>). They have apparently received some expansion at the hands of the Deuteronomic editors or of a later scribe. In 3 the closing words 'for ever' are hardly consistent with the mention of the tenth generation cp 2; the reasons in 4<sup>a</sup> and 4<sup>b-5</sup> have the air of additions, one marked by the pl, and one by the sing pronoun; the allegation in 4<sup>a</sup> can hardly be harmonized with the view indicated in 2<sup>9</sup> so far as Moab is concerned, while the general attitude towards Moab and Ammon is different from that implied in 2<sup>9</sup> 10; 4<sup>b-5</sup> applies to Moab alone, and as D's narrative makes no allusion to Balaam, this seems to have the character of an afterthought. The phrases of <sup>a</sup> have their parallel in Jeremiah (D never combines 'all thy days' and 'for ever'). Kuen held that the explanatory clauses in 4<sup>a</sup> were parallel to those in 7, but it is plain that their style is much more expansive. Note the conjunction כִּי twice in 7; but in 4 אֲשֶׁר כִּי עֲלֵיכֶם cp 22<sup>24</sup>.

 This passage contrasts with the adjoining laws in several particulars. (1) Its subject is not cognate with the social legislation of the context: (2) the hortatory form of introduction is different: (3) the address varies from the sing to the pl: (4) it presupposes regulations already communicated to the priests, to be imparted by them to Israel: (5) the word plague (= stroke 17<sup>8</sup> 21<sup>6</sup>) is not used elsewhere by D in this sense, though it is the regular term in P: (6) the formula in 9 occurs only in 23<sup>4</sup> (itself of doubtful origin) and 25<sup>17</sup>. It seems best, therefore, to regard it as an addition derived from priestly circles, referring to current torah analogous to that now embodied in Lev 13.

tithe'?? If tithes were taken every year, why should the third year be called the 'tithe-year'? Some ancient custom must have originally given special significance to the triennial payment (cp Driver, Deut 173, and Driver and Nowack on Am 4<sup>4</sup>, Cambr Bible and Handkom). It is expressly required in <sup>12</sup> that the whole tithe shall be assigned to the poor members of the community, while the ritual in <sup>11</sup> only specifies 'some of the firstfruits,' such as could be put in a basket; the word 'all' (omitted by Sam and G) being perhaps a later definition cp <sup>10</sup>. Firstfruits were exacted according to the First Code Ex 23<sup>16</sup> (בכורים instead of אסתר) at harvest-time, but nothing is said of tithes cp Ex 22<sup>29</sup>. D does not specify at what season or in what manner the firstfruits were to be paid to the priest 18<sup>4</sup>, or when the festive tithe-meal was to be held at the sanctuary 14<sup>22-27</sup>. But it can hardly be supposed that these two passages refer to the same religious gift, and the identification of the firstfruits in 26<sup>2</sup> with the tithes of 14<sup>22</sup> cannot be regarded as assured (eg the wine and oil are not included). There remains the possibility that the passage in 18<sup>4</sup> represents an advance in priestly demands, or that the different laws were not actually drafted by the same hands, so that the confusion in their relations is due to slight diversities of expression within the same general school.

the two are not apparent. The series of dooms in 14-26 is evidently not the immediate sequel of 11-18, for whereas 12 selects Levi as one of six tribes charged to pronounce a blessing, 14 ascribes to Levi alone a liturgical collection of twelve curses. Of these several passages the first is itself, also, composite, for the injunctions for the erection and plastering of the stones 1-4 7<sup>b</sup> 8 are full of the characteristic phrases of D, while the directions for building the altar follow the fundamental rule of E. This makes it probable that other E elements are to be detected in the neighbourhood, and the cognate passage in Josh 8<sup>30-35</sup> supplies a clue (cp Bacon, Triple Trad 260). There Joshua builds an altar in Mount Ebal, the words of the law are inscribed upon the stones, and are afterwards solemnly read to the assembled people. This act of sacrifice is at first sight not in harmony with the Deuteronomic view of the only legitimate sanctuary 12<sup>11</sup>., though it may be defended on the ground that the condition of settled possession there implied was not yet realized. But it strikingly recalls another scene in E where not only is an altar erected and a book of divine law read, but twelve great stones are reared Ex 24<sup>4-7</sup>. The stones are called pillars, and their function is only temporary: but the coincidence is noteworthy. The editor of Josh 8<sup>30-35</sup> apparently regarded the law as carved on the stones composing the altar. This is obviously impossible when the altar was constructed of unhewn stones. The Deuteronomic version provides a suitable surface by requiring them to be plastered, and plainly distinguishes them from the materials of the altar cp Ex 24<sup>4</sup>. It is therefore quite possible that the original command in 2-4 8 may be derived from E, altogether recast by D<sup>e</sup>, and the association of the elders with Moses thus receives some little light*. The repetition of

2 in 4 and of 3 in 8 has led some critics to trace more than one hand in these verses also, but they seem explicable by the expansive manner of D<sup>s</sup>. There is, however, a further difficulty. The phraseology in 2 suggests that the stones were to be erected on the actual day of the passage of the Jordan; while 3 conceives them as set up and inscribed before the entry into the promised land. Is the distance from the Jordan to Shechem forgotten; does the writer 'looking back to a distant past' (Driver, Deut 295) fail to take account of the time that must have elapsed between the crossing of the river and the arrival at Ebal; or is there a vague reminiscence in his mind of the later incident when twelve stones are taken up out of the Jordan and placed upright in the Gilgal Josh 4<sup>3</sup> 20?

<sup>9</sup> Like 26<sup>16</sup>. this passage has the appearance of introducing an exhortation to obedience. In spite of two unique Hebrew phrases, its language is in general harmony with that of D.
Many critics, therefore, view it as a connecting link between 26<sup>19</sup> and 28<sup>1</sup>. It is not, however, by any means needed for that purpose; <sup>9</sup> seems an independent reference to the great adoption cp 26<sup>17</sup>; and no cause is apparent for the introduction of the Levites. Another connexion is suggested by 31<sup>24-29</sup> cp 23<sup>11</sup>.

8<sup>33</sup>, and is consequently ascribed to D<sup>s</sup>. It may, however, be founded on an earlier arrangement of E: Bacon (Triple Trad 260) points out that the position assigned to Levi in <sup>12</sup> places him on a footing of equality with the secular tribes (cp Gen 34<sup>20</sup> 49<sup>5</sup>), unlike the separate dignity claimed for him in D, and still more in P.

<sup>14</sup> The function of Levi in <sup>14</sup> is not identical with that of <sup>12</sup>:
and the concluding curses do not seem to belong to the preceding directions: (1) they are unaccompanied by any blessings such as might have been expected to precede them <sup>12</sup>; (2) they are delivered by the Levites alone to whom the whole people respond, while in <sup>12</sup> Levi is one of six appointed to bless: (3) they are not founded immediately on the preceding code, as they omit matters on which it lays great stress, and include others to which it does not refer, while they show parallels both with E's judgements and with P<sup>h</sup>. (For affinities of substance cp Table of Laws: phraseological contact is noted in the margins.)
It has been conjectured that they are 'part of an old liturgical office, used on solemn occasions' (Driver, Deut 300). The prominence assigned to the Levites <sup>14</sup> may imply that they are among the latest insertions in the book.

28<sup>1</sup> This great discourse seems to be the sequel of the exhortation in 26<sup>16-19</sup>, and follows the Code in 12-26<sup>15</sup> much as the brief address in Ex 23<sup>20</sup>. It is attached to the Book of Judgements, or Lev 26<sup>3-45</sup> to the Holiness Legislation. The nucleus of the first portion of it is found in two sets of blessings and curses 3-6 and 16-19, with their appropriate homiletic envelopes 1-14 and 15-46. The rest seems to fall into two distinct sections, the first 47-67 comprising a warning against a foreign invader and a delineation of the horrors of a protracted siege, the second 68-69 having no special connexion with the preceding, but containing threats of diminution of the population by disease, and of their ultimate dispersion by slavery in distant lands. Whether these passages were composed consecutively, or placed in their present collocation by their original author, has been sometimes doubted. The unity of the discourse has been maintained in substance by Kuenen and Driver. Dillm cautiously admits the possibility that it may have received additions, but thinks that their separation from the original nucleus is no longer possible. The phenomena which point in this direction are of various kinds: (1) the same threats and warnings are again and again repeated, e.g. of disease 21, 27 35 60, of defeat and captivity 25 36, 63, of foreign bondage where the worship of Yahweh can no longer be practised 36 64; (2) some passages are marked by peculiarities of matter and form e.g. 25b 26 36 41 58; (3) an unusual number of parallels with the language of Jeremiah may be noticed cp 10 20 26, 29, 36, 48, 51-53 61 63 66. Reasons will be offered for regarding 25b 26 36-37 41, as possible later insertions, and for treating 47-57 and 58-68 as separate sections, though whether they really proceed from separate authors cannot be determined. They are at any rate homiletic products of the same school as the homilies in 5-11; and they show marked affinities with the type of prophetic preaching presented in the writings of Jeremiah (cp Introd X § i 88-go). In 49, the Chaldeans seem to be in view: but the concluding section does not contemplate a particular deportation by conquest, so much as a general expatriation by enslavement, Egypt being mentioned among the countries of their future servitude. In these aspects the discourse seems to precede 45-40, though 62 and 427, and 36 64 and 428, are not without affinities.

35 The return at this point to the infliction of disease is unexpected after the list of maladies in 27. In 36 the threat of exile for king and people is without parallel elsewhere, and 36, strangely interrupts the description of suffering in their own land continued from 34 in 35. The language has again a strongly Jeremian tinge: with 36 cp Jer 9<sup>16</sup> 16<sup>13</sup>: in 37 'astonishment' is frequent in Jer e.g. 25<sup>9</sup> 11 18 38 44<sup>12</sup> 49<sup>13</sup> 17; 'a proverb and a byword' Jer 24<sup>9</sup> ('byword' = 'taunt' 5 1 Kings 9<sup>7</sup> || 2 Chron 7<sup>20</sup>†). 28<sup>41</sup> Cp 32: perhaps another repetition. For the use of הוֹרִי 'beget' (P<sub>30</sub>) cp 4<sup>25</sup>: the counterpart as in J<sub>27</sub> does not occur in D.

42 Parallel in substance to 38: the word 'locust' in 42 is found nowhere else.

47 RV treats 47. as continuous with 45. But the lack of connexion rather suggests a fresh departure: 46 reaches a solemn close, and the failure in joyful service 47 is a different cause for punishment compared with the positive disobedience of 45.

48 prepares the way for the description of the dreaded invader (apparently, as the parallels with Jeremiah imply, the Chaldeans), and the incidents and results of a siege, with a rhythmic refrain in 53 55 57. In this section phrases of distinctively Deuteronomic character are rare (for הָיָה אִשָּׁר at the opening cp 2 Kings 22<sup>17</sup> 2 Chron 21<sup>12</sup>).

51 Not in G; perhaps a duplicate of the last clause of the verse.

the great Deuteronomic school. The retrospect in <sup>2</sup>–<sup>8</sup> curiously omits any reference to Horeb; it is further assumed that the covenant which is about to be made <sup>12</sup>. with Israel (including future generations <sup>15b</sup>) is already recorded in 'this book of the law' <sup>21</sup>; and it seems to include the curses of <sup>28</sup>, though they are described <sup>19</sup>. by another term. In <sup>28</sup> the writer speaks of exile as a present fact; and his language does not seem sufficiently explained by the deportation of the Ten Tribes after <sup>722</sup>. That which is still future in Jer <sup>12</sup><sup>14</sup>. <sup>24</sup><sup>6</sup>, is here contemplated as past, and the terrible consequences have arrived. The parallels with the language of Jeremiah are numerous, as in <sup>28</sup>; and a number of expressions may be noted which are not found elsewhere in D or are used in slightly different senses. Such will be found in <sup>6</sup> 'that ye may know' &c; <sup>9</sup> 'prosper'; <sup>12</sup> 'enter into the covenant' &c; <sup>12</sup> 'oath' אלה <sup>14</sup> <sup>19</sup>. cp <sup>30</sup><sup>7</sup>; <sup>17</sup> 'abominations and idols' cp <sup>2</sup> Kings <sup>23</sup><sup>24</sup> Ezek <sup>20</sup><sup>7</sup>. <sup>18</sup> <sup>32</sup><sup>23</sup> 'abominations' <sup>7</sup><sup>26*</sup> cp Jer <sup>4</sup><sup>1</sup> <sup>7</sup><sup>30</sup> al; 'idols' Lev <sup>26</sup><sup>30*</sup> in Jer only <sup>50</sup><sup>2</sup>, thirty-nine times in Ezek); <sup>18</sup> 'a root that beareth' &c; <sup>18</sup> 'gall and wormwood' cp Am <sup>6</sup><sup>12</sup> Jer <sup>9</sup><sup>16</sup> <sup>23</sup><sup>15</sup> Lam <sup>3</sup><sup>19†</sup>; <sup>19</sup> 'bless himself in his heart' &c; 'stubbornness of mine heart' Jer <sup>37</sup><sup>7</sup> <sup>24</sup> <sup>9</sup><sup>14</sup> <sup>11</sup><sup>8</sup> <sup>13</sup><sup>10</sup> <sup>16</sup><sup>12</sup> <sup>18</sup><sup>12</sup> <sup>23</sup><sup>17</sup> Ps <sup>81</sup><sup>12†</sup>; <sup>20</sup> 'smoke' nowhere else of jealousy cp Ps <sup>74</sup><sup>1</sup>; <sup>21</sup> 'separate for evil' &c; 'for evil' Am <sup>9</sup><sup>4</sup> Jer <sup>21</sup><sup>10</sup> <sup>24</sup><sup>9</sup> <sup>25</sup><sup>11</sup> <sup>38</sup><sup>4</sup> <sup>39</sup><sup>6</sup> <sup>44</sup><sup>11</sup> <sup>27</sup> <sup>29</sup> Judg <sup>2</sup><sup>15</sup>; <sup>22</sup> 'the generation to come' cp Ps <sup>48</sup><sup>13</sup> <sup>78</sup><sup>4</sup> <sup>102</sup><sup>18†</sup>; <sup>22</sup> 'the foreigner that shall come' &c ct <sup>1</sup> Kings <sup>8</sup><sup>41</sup>; <sup>22</sup> 'sicknesses' cp Jer <sup>14</sup><sup>18</sup> <sup>16</sup><sup>4</sup> Ps <sup>103</sup><sup>2</sup> Chron <sup>21</sup><sup>19†</sup>; <sup>25</sup> 'forsook the covenant' Jer <sup>22</sup><sup>9</sup> <sup>1</sup> Kings <sup>19</sup><sup>10</sup> <sup>14</sup> Dan <sup>11</sup><sup>30†</sup>; <sup>28</sup> 'rooted them out' 5 = 'pluck up,' a favourite word in Jer eg <sup>10</sup> <sup>12</sup><sup>14</sup>. <sup>18</sup> <sup>24</sup><sup>6</sup> al; <sup>29</sup> 'the secret things' 'the things that are revealed,' feminine participles not occurring in this sense elsewhere (cp the frequent use of fem pl in Is <sup>40</sup>–<sup>4</sup>). [4<sup>40</sup>→] 11 N For this 'commandment which I 'command thee "this day, it is not too "hard for thee, neither is it far off. 12 It is not in heaven that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, and make us to hear it, that we may do it? 13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, and make us to hear it, that we may do it? 14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy "heart, that thou mayest do it.

29<sup>29</sup> Perhaps a later addition enforcing the contrast between the hidden future cp Is 48<sup>6</sup>, and the revelation of present guidance in the law. The use of the first person pl suggests a form of liturgical response after hearing the reading of the law.

30<sup>1</sup> The discourse in 1-20 seems to fall asunder into two parts 1-10 and 11-20, loosely joined by the particle 'for' cp 11<sup>18</sup>. Does the first section 1-10 belong to the address in 29? It is commonly so treated: but it seems preferable to connect it rather with 28. (1) The liturgical close in 29<sup>29</sup> suggests that the discourse is concluded: (2) the style of 30<sup>1-10</sup> shows no special affinity with that of 29 (save in 7) while it is full of phrases referring to 28, cp 1 'the blessing and the curse,' 3 'scattered,' 5 'do thee good,' 9 'make thee plenteous' &c: (3) the parallels with Jeremiah are in general harmony with the manner of 28, and the devotional language is much nearer the Deuteronomic type than that of 29. The law is already recorded in writing 10 as in 28<sup>58</sup> (and 29<sup>21</sup>), and the promise of restoration conditional upon repentance forms a suitable sequel to the terrible threats of exile in 28<sup>63-68</sup>.

7 This verse appears to interrupt the context, and contains the peculiar word נִלֵּחַ translated 'oath' 29<sup>12</sup> and 'curse' 29<sup>19-21</sup>. The implications of 'hatred' and 'persecution' are somewhat different in tone from the threats of penal doom in 29, cf the same  $\S$  'pursue' 28<sup>22</sup>. The word occurs in Jer 15<sup>15</sup> 17<sup>18</sup> 20<sup>11</sup> of the prophet's personal sufferings, but is not applied by him to Israel: its use here suggests a later hand cp Lam 1<sup>3</sup> 6 4<sup>19</sup> and (of Yahweh) 3<sup>43</sup>.

8 Driver remarks that the pronoun is emphatic in contrast to 'enemies' 7. But it may equally well indicate the response of converted Israel to its divine Regenerator 6; cp a similar contrast (in another field of action) 21<sup>9</sup>.

11<sup>a</sup> Driver (Deut lxxiii lxxv 331) points out that 11-14 (introduced by for) 'clearly states the reason for a present duty': the paragraph cannot, therefore, be intended to explain the obedience of Israel in the contingency of its future return to Yahweh. In other words 11-20 can hardly have formed the original sequel of 1-10. On its probable connexions elsewhere see 31<sup>28N</sup>. Here its points of contact with the discourse in 4 need only be noted; see the parallels to 15 17 18 19 20.

'Joshua, he will go over before thee,' were set in sequence by the same author; <sup>4</sup> reads like a duplicate of <sup>3a</sup>; while <sup>7</sup>, addressed to Joshua runs parallel with <sup>6</sup>. In <sup>7</sup>, it appears reasonable to find a Deuteronomistic parallel with <sup>23</sup> cp 14<sup>18</sup>: and it may be conjectured that in the union of D with JE it became necessary to find a fresh place for <sup>3b</sup> & <sup>7</sup>, so that it was amalgamated with the promises now immediately preceding it. There is also some awkwardness in the sudden change in the application of the 2nd pers pronoun from <sup>2</sup> (Moses) to <sup>3</sup> (Israel); but this seems hardly a sufficient reason for suspecting discontinuity.

<sup>16a</sup> The source of <sup>16-22</sup> is a perplexing problem. The passage is plainly designed as an introduction to the Song in <sup>32</sup>. This poem is universally recognized as an independent composition incorporated in <sup>D</sup> (cp Introd XIV 4 i 161), but the process by which it has acquired its present place can only be conjecturally determined. As long as the Song was assigned to an early date, it was usual to regard it as inserted in <sup>E</sup> or <sup>JE</sup> before the composition of <sup>D</sup> (so Addis, Hex i 188). If, however, it is ascribed to a later age, it must either (1) have been added to <sup>JE</sup> before its union with <sup>D</sup>, or (2) have been attached to <sup>D</sup>, or (3) have been embodied in the combined document <sup>JED</sup>. The peculiar position of <sup>16-22</sup> in the midst of a passage ascribed to <sup>E</sup>, makes (1) or (3) more probable than (2). Driver, accepting Kuenen's date, about 630 B.C., inclines to the first alternative (Deut 347). If the later date suggested in Introd i 162 be accepted, then it may be inferred that the poem was added to <sup>JED</sup>. Some slight linguistic indications confirm this view: (1) the language shows little or nothing that is distinctively Deuteronomic, for even the formulae in <sup>20</sup> may be found elsewhere: (2) it abounds in expressions characteristic of <sup>JE</sup>, not found in <sup>D</sup>, such as <sup>16</sup> 'behold' followed by the ptc of the future, 'sleep with thy fathers,' 'strange gods' &c; but (3) it also contains other phrases which point in the direction of the Holiness-legislation, and the school of Ezekiel, e.g. <sup>16</sup> 20 'break my covenant,' <sup>18</sup> 20 'turn' to other gods, and perhaps <sup>16</sup> 'go a whoring after.' The phrases which describe Yahweh <sup>17</sup> as 'forsaking' Israel, or 'hiding his face' from them, seem also to belong (on the whole) to a later date; 'forsake' cp 31<sup>6</sup> 8 Jer 12<sup>7</sup> Ezek 8<sup>12</sup> 9 Is 41<sup>17</sup> 42<sup>16</sup> 49<sup>14</sup> 54<sup>7</sup> (on the other hand Gen 28<sup>15</sup>); 'hide my face' 32<sup>20</sup> Jer 33<sup>5</sup> Ezek 39<sup>23</sup>, 29 Is 54<sup>8</sup> (but also Is 8<sup>17</sup> Mic 3<sup>4</sup>).

9-13 (Driver, Deut 343), for 24 starts from the same point as 9. According to 9 Moses has already written the law and handed it to the priests and elders, with directions for its public reading every seven years. But at the opening of 24 the words of the law are not yet completely recorded; while on the completion of the book it is given to the Levites to be deposited beside the ark. Thus the sections are rather parallel than continuous. In each the reduction of the law to writing is recorded. In each the sacred book thus written is entrusted to the care of certain recognized authorities, though they are not the same in the two cases. The author of 9-13 could hardly have written 24. . If 9-13 formed one close to the original D, 24. . must have formed another. It has already been suggested that different editions may have received different introductions (cp 1st(4) 4<sup>6B</sup>). In a similar manner, the Code may also have received more than one form of conclusion. (Steuernagel, conscious of the incompatibility, proposes to read 'song' for 'law' in 24 26, and thus treats 24-30 as the introduction to the song.)

<sup>31</sup> <sup>28</sup> The language of <sup>27</sup> seems really addressed not to Levi but to Israel generally; and that reference appears still more clearly in <sup>28</sup> 'your tribes' and 'your officers' (between 'elders' and 'officers' G inserts 'your judges'). The purpose of the assembly is to give Moses an opportunity of speaking 'these words.' What, then, were they? Driver, Addis, and Steuernagel (to cite no older authorities) identify them with the Song. But it may be doubted whether the Song can be fitly introduced at a distance by the phrase 'speak these words.' Save in Ex <sup>20</sup> where it is immediately followed by the words in question, it always seems to refer to what precedes Gen <sup>20</sup> <sup>29</sup> <sup>13</sup> <sup>43</sup> <sup>46</sup> Ex <sup>40</sup> <sup>10</sup> <sup>24</sup> Num <sup>14</sup> <sup>39</sup> <sup>16</sup> <sup>1</sup> Deut (<sup>40</sup>) <sup>19</sup> <sup>6</sup> <sup>12</sup> <sup>28</sup> <sup>31</sup>. The phrase as it stands would thus denote the warning in <sup>27</sup> which is to be repeated with the utmost solemnity, heaven and earth being summoned to attest them. It is true that the Song opens with such an appeal: but on the other hand it contains no parallels to the predictions in <sup>20</sup>. On the other hand, important parallels are found elsewhere; and they point to the view indicated by Dillm (NDJ 390) and elaborated by Westphal and (to a less extent) by Oettli (cp Driver, Deut lxxiv-v), according to which <sup>28</sup> forms the preface to a parting exhortation by Moses. This address, however, can hardly be identified with 29-30, the elements of which do not seem continuous. The parallels in <sup>29</sup> point strongly to the discourse in 4<sup>5-40</sup> which probably once followed instead of preceding the exposition of the law; while the appeal to 'heaven and earth' announced in <sup>28</sup> is there solemnly issued 4<sup>26</sup> cp 30<sup>19</sup>. This last coincidence suggests that the passage in 30<sup>11-20</sup> for which a suitable connexion could not be found with 30<sup>1-10</sup> may be the sequel of the discourse in 4<sup>5-40</sup> (cp other parallels in 30<sup>11</sup> 17). Supposing that 4<sup>5-40</sup> 31<sup>11-20</sup> are really parts of the same address, where is its beginning? Could <sup>78</sup> have once stood at the head of the whole? Moses is there associated with the priests in an exhortation to all Israel. There is certainly a slight flavour of difference between 'the priests the Levites' in <sup>29</sup> and the plain Levites of 31<sup>25</sup>; and the tribal elders and officers are merged in 'all Israel' (cp <sup>30</sup>); but the connexion in other respects seems not inappropriate. The solemn words 27<sup>10</sup> 'become the people' may indicate the ceremonial adoption of Israel by the gift of the law; 'commandments and statutes' cp <sup>40</sup>. The conclusion then naturally follows in 32<sup>6-47</sup>; cp <sup>45</sup> 'all Israel'; 27<sup>9</sup>; <sup>46</sup> 'testify' cp <sup>20</sup> 8<sup>19</sup>; interest in 'children' cp <sup>49</sup>; <sup>47</sup> 'your life' cp 30<sup>20</sup>; 'prolong' 30<sup>18</sup>. The primary cause of the dislocation was the insertion of the Song, which threw out the discourse. The Song also was designed for a 'witness' 31<sup>19</sup> cp <sup>26</sup>. In 30<sup>1</sup> R connects the Song with the original introduction to the exhortation by the phrases 'assembly' cp <sup>28</sup> and 'spake in the ears'.

"Ask thy father, and he will shew thee ;

8 When the <sup>b</sup>Most High gave to the nations their inheritance,When he <sup>c</sup>separated the children of men,

He set the bounds of the peoples

According to the <sup>b</sup>number of the children of Israel.9 For Yahweh's <sup>2</sup>portion is his people ;Jacob is the lot of his <sup>2</sup>inheritance.

10 He found him in a desert land,

14 Butter of kine, and milk of sheep,

Then he forsook God which made him,

To gods whom they knew not,

To new [gods] that came up of late,

Whom your fathers <sup>b</sup>dreaded not.18 Of the <sup>b</sup>Rock that <sup>u</sup>'begat thee thou art <sup>e</sup>unmindful,And hast <sup>d</sup>'forgotten God that <sup>b</sup>'gave thee birth.19 And Yahweh saw [it], and <sup>e</sup>'abhorred [them],

Because of the provocation of his sons and his daughters.

20 And he said, I will <sup>f</sup>'hide my face from them,

I will see what their end shall be :

For they are a very <sup>b</sup>froward generation,

Children in whom is no faith.

21 They have <sup>b</sup>moved me to jealousy with that which is not God ;They have provoked me to anger with their <sup>b</sup>vanities :

And I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people ;

I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

23 I will heap mischiefs upon them ;

And in the chambers terror ;

[It shall destroy] both <sup>n</sup>'young man and virgin,

The suckling with the man of gray hairs.

26 I said, I would <sup>e</sup>'scatter them afar,

I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men :

27 Were it not that I <sup>o</sup>'feared the provocation of the enemy,Lest their adversaries should <sup>p</sup>'misdeem,Lest they should say, Our <sup>q</sup>'hand is exalted,And Yahweh hath not <sup>b</sup>done all this.28 For they are a nation <sup>r</sup>'void of counsel,32<sup>11</sup> M Or, Spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her pinions.

33<sup>1</sup> And this is the blessing, wherewith <sup>11</sup>Moses the man of God<sup>11</sup> blessed the children of Israel <sup>11</sup>before his death. 2 And he said, and he said,

Hear, Yahweh, the voice of Judah,

And bring him in unto his people:

And thou shalt be an help against his adversaries.

34<sup>1a</sup> Each of the early versions of the Traditions, J and E, would seem to have narrated the death of Moses. In fitting the Deuteronomic Code into its historic framework, and combining it with JE, the Deuteronomic editors added their own touches eg probably in 1<sup>5</sup>. with a supplement 10-12. The independent account of the priestly narrator (see the margins) was afterwards incorporated by the general redactor; and this passage is, therefore, an amalgam of all the chief documents of the Hexateuch.

1d The peculiar enumeration in 2. is probably due to a later hand; it is absent from the Samaritan text, which reads 'from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates, even unto the hinder sea' cp 11<sup>24</sup>, and there are also one or two very slight divergences in G. Moreover the grammatical structure is complete at 'all the land': 'of Gilead' should be 'even' or 'namely Gilead' cp Driver, Deut 420. Ct 32<sup>7</sup>.

7 This clause has been sometimes referred to J, and its poetic vigour of expression makes that attribution possible. On the other hand the connexion with 7a is satisfactory and P may have incorporated the familiar phrases of an older source.

34<sup>12</sup> At this point it may be well to sum up very briefly the main results of the analysis of Deuteronomy (apart from occasional glosses due to subsequent scribal redactions). (1) The nucleus of the whole book is to be found in the Code 12-26; when first produced this was probably considerably shorter 12<sup>1a</sup>N(2); its original title may possibly be preserved in 4<sup>44</sup> (adopted, it may be, from an introduction to an earlier code) afterwards enriched by the addition in 4<sup>45-49</sup>. (2) To this Code were prefixed different hortatory introductions, which would seem to have been attached separately to different editions. Earliest, perhaps, is the series of homilies in 5-11, which appear to have proceeded from the author of the main groups of law in 12-18 and 26. These had a didactic and religious aim. But a second introduction, consisting chiefly of historical retrospect, may be traced in 1<sup>1a</sup> 4-4<sup>4</sup>: this may be assigned to a different hand, and has been augmented with a number of archaeological and other notes, especially in 2-3. (3) Similarly different forms of conclusion were appended to the main legislative core. The elements of these were twofold: (i) a parting address from Moses exhorting the people to obedience, and warning them against unfaithfulness; and (ii) a record of the writing of the Code. Such a close seems to have been provided by the author (or authors) of the Code and the Homilies in 26<sup>16-19</sup> followed by the original form of 28 (afterwards enlarged by expansion) 30<sup>1-10</sup>, together with the account of the writing of the law and the provision for its septennial reading at the Feast of Booths 31<sup>9-13</sup>. A second narrative of the writing of the law and its deposition by the ark is found in 31<sup>24-29</sup>, where instructions are given for the summons of a great national assembly at which Moses may deliver his solemn testimony. Remains of this discourse may be traced in 27<sup>9</sup>. 4<sup>9-10</sup> 30<sup>11-20</sup> with a conclusion in 32<sup>45-47</sup>. No definite connexion can be established between this closing group and the secondary introduction in 1-4<sup>4</sup>, though the narrative in 3<sup>23-28</sup> seems to be resumed in 31<sup>1</sup>. and finds its term in Moses' death in 34. Yet a third farewell address distinguished by marked peculiarities of style may be discerned in 26<sup>2-29</sup>. The Code and its envelopments, homiletic and narrative, hortatory or retrospective, must thus be regarded as the product of a long course of literary activity to which various members of a great religious school contributed, the affinities with the language and thought of Jeremiah being particularly numerous.

(4) To this Deuteronomic group other additions were made from time to time, involving further dislocations. The Code and the Homilies seem to imply acquaintance with JE (Introd XVI 17 i 173), and in due time JE and D were amalgamated (cp Introd XVI 2 i 174). This appears to be the explanation of the insertion of a fragment from an itinerary of E in Deut 10<sup>6</sup>, of the expansion of E's instructions for the erection of the altar on Ebal 27<sup>1-8</sup>, of the introduction of the charge to Joshua 31<sup>14</sup>. 28, and the incorporation of the accounts of Moses' death in 34. Other insertions will be found in the liturgical curses 27<sup>11-26</sup>, the Song of Moses and its preface 31<sup>16-22</sup> 32<sup>1-44</sup> (which caused the dispersion of the second farewell discourse), and the Blessing of Moses 33, which appears to contain a nucleus due to E framed in a lyric setting of much later time.

(5) Lastly, the extended JED was united with P. This involved the addition of the date in 1<sup>3</sup>, the preparation for Moses' death 32<sup>48-52</sup>, and the final description of his departure in 34. Latest of all 4<sup>41-43</sup> was inserted in connexion with Josh 20. [On D elements in Josh, and their relation to the constituents of Deut cp Introd to Josh 4.]

INTRODUCTION TO JOSHUA

THE Book of Joshua stands in the Hebrew Canon at the head of the collection of 'the Prophets.' It is marked off from the preceding books by its subject, for it contains no law: the era of legislation closed with the death of Moses. Yet it is plainly related to them in the most intimate manner. Its main theme is the establishment of Israel in the promised land, and it falls apart at once into two main divisions, (1) the narrative of the conquest 1-12, and (2) the account of the distribution of the territory among the tribes 13-21; while farewell addresses of Joshua 23 and 24, corresponding to the discourses in Deuteronomy, prepare for the record of the leader's death. The book thus describes the great change in the national life to which the whole Pentateuch looks forward. The gift of the land to the posterity of Abraham, so often announced, is at last effected: it is justly asserted that the Law without its continuation in Joshua would be but 'a torso.' At stage after stage in the preceding narrative provision has been made for the duties and privileges of Israel when they should enter on their inheritance. At last the long discipline of the wanderings is over, and a nation which did not look back longingly to the comforts of Egyptian plenty, is ready for the strenuous march to victory. Caleb alone survives from the Israel of the desert, besides Joshua, to claim the reward of his loyalty to Yahweh Josh 14<sup>6-15</sup> cp Num 14<sup>24</sup> Deut 1<sup>35</sup>. At the outset of the book the commission to Joshua imparted through Moses Num 27<sup>18</sup>. Deut 3<sup>28</sup> 31<sup>7, 14, 23</sup> is solemnly renewed 1<sup>2</sup>.. The promise of the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh to take their share in the labours of the conquest Num 32 Deut 3<sup>18</sup>. is reinforced by Joshua Josh 1<sup>2</sup>., and fulfilled by the tribes in question 4<sup>12</sup>, so that when they have loyally discharged their obligations to their brethren they receive for themselves the inheritance they had desired 13<sup>8</sup>.. The provisions instituted by Moses for the distribution of the land Num 34, for the Levitical cities and the cities of refuge 35, are successively enforced Josh 13-19 20 21. Even the daughters of Zelophehad Num 36 are not forgotten Josh 17<sup>3</sup>.. The first great religious act of the victorious Joshua in the middle of the new country is to carry out one of the last commands of Moses Deut 27<sup>1-8</sup> by rearing an altar on Ebal and solemnly inscribing the law upon its stones. In the valley of Shechem below are deposited the bones of Joseph 24<sup>32</sup>, in obedience to his dying request Gen 50<sup>25</sup>. The whole scheme of Joshua is thus the necessary sequel of the books which precede; and the closeness of this relation extends not only to its substance, but (as will be seen hereafter) also to its form. In spite of considerations to be urged below concerning differences in the actual processes of compilation, the essential identity of their literary sources and their forms of historic presentation justifies the treatment of the six books as bound together by a common unity on which the name Hexateuch has been fittingly bestowed<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> This was already in the view of Du Maes in the sixteenth century (Introd i 23) and others who supposed the Mosaic history and Joshua to have been compiled from the records of the keepers of the public archives. Geddes stated the connexion most clearly when he explained that he

1. A brief inquiry suffices to show that Joshua displays many of the phenomena already adduced from the Pentateuch in proof of diversity of authorship. It contains no statement professing to record the circumstances of its composition; it comprises duplicate and sometimes inconsistent accounts of the same events; and even within the same narrative details which cannot be harmonized betray the presence of materials which have been imperfectly reconciled.

(1) Thus, in 13<sup>8-12</sup>, the Reubenites and Gadites receive the inheritance which Moses had allotted to them beyond the Jordan; but in 15-32 a fresh description follows defining the territory assigned to the 'tribe of the children of Reuben according to their families,' and the corresponding possessions of the tribe of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh, each section closing with similar statements concerning Levi 14 and 33. Much common matter belongs to each; but the second passage is marked by greater amplitude of detail, by new designations and fresh formulae. In like manner two farewell addresses are reported from Joshua. In 23 he summons 'all Israel,' their elders, their heads, their judges, and their officers, exhorts them to observe the law of Moses 6, announces his approaching death 14, and warns them against the worship of other gods 16. But 24 records another speech, addressed to a similar audience 1, and conveying corresponding exhortations not to forsake Yahweh 14.. In the accounts of the conquest Hebron is taken by Joshua 10<sup>36</sup>. with its dependent cities, and all their inhabitants are put to the sword, not one being permitted to survive. Debir 38. shares the same fate. The Anakim also, from Hebron, Debir, and the adjoining local cities are similarly 'devoted' 11<sup>21</sup>. In 15<sup>13-19</sup>, however, Hebron and Debir are still unreduced; the three sons of Anak are driven out from the former by Caleb, who offers his daughter as a bride to whoever succeeds in capturing the latter.

(2) These indications of variety of literary materials are strengthened by the discovery of incompatible stories of the same transaction. At the passage of the Jordan the whole nation has passed over to the western shore 3<sup>17</sup> 4<sup>1</sup>, when Joshua instructs twelve men to 'pass over before the ark into the midst of Jordan' 5 and there take up twelve stones. The narrative thus returns to the eastern bank to find the people there too, for in 4<sup>10b</sup> 'the people hastened and passed over.' What, then, is the destiny of the stones? According to 8<sup>b</sup> they are carried across and deposited on the camping-ground where the people spent the night after the passage of the river. But in 9 twelve stones are set up in the midst of the stream in the place where the feet of the priests had stood, and the writer appeals to them as evidence, 'they are there unto this day.' The devices of the versions cp 3<sup>1a</sup> betray their consciousness of the incongruity; the difficulty is solved by the recognition of the fact that the narrative is composite, and the compiler has not succeeded in reducing the details to uniformity. This clue further explains why Joshua, after posting thirty thousand men in ambush on the west side of Ai 8<sup>3</sup> 9, should dispatch five thousand more the next morning for the same purpose to the same spot 12. Similar considerations make it probable that Rahab did not exact the promise of future safety from her visitors after she had let them down over the wall of Jericho, and urged them to flight 2<sup>15</sup>.; and they point to a way through the maze of difficulties attending the narrative of the various circuits round the city before it fell into the hands of the Israelites 6<sup>3</sup>..

2. The literary examination of Joshua reveals corresponding facts. In some passages the language is full of reminiscences of the exhortations or narratives of Deuteronomy; while others are founded on the institutions and couched in the formulae of the Priestly Code. Thus in 8<sup>30-35</sup> the writer records in his own fashion the fulfilment of the instructions of Moses in Deut 27<sup>1-8</sup>; the discourse of Joshua in 23 is little more than a cento of the phrases of D; while the divine summons to the new leader 1<sup>8-9</sup> naturally reproduces the solemn terms of the previous charge in Deut 31<sup>7</sup>. On the other hand, the 'ark of the testimony' is named in 4<sup>16</sup>, and a glimpse is thus opened into the conceptions of P, which become clearer when the passover is celebrated on the fourteenth day of the first month 5<sup>10</sup>, and the manna ceases on the entry of the people into the land of Canaan. In due time appear the 'congregation' and their 'princes' 9<sup>18</sup>, and finally Eleazar the priest takes precedence of Joshua the son of Nun 14<sup>1</sup>, and proceeds with the heads of fathers' houses to distribute the inheritances to the tribes at the door of the Tent of Meeting 19<sup>51</sup>, making due provision of cities of refuge 20, and cities 'with the suburbs thereof' for the orders of priests and Levites 21. The documents represented by the symbols D and P in the Pentateuch thus find their continuations in the book of Joshua. Their definite literary characteristics enable them to be recognized with certainty so far as their main passages are concerned. They can be separated, therefore, with tolerable precision from the general mass. But when they are withdrawn by the aid of the usual criteria, what is the nature of the materials which are left? The examination of passages like 2 6 8<sup>1-29</sup> 10<sup>1-27</sup> discloses diversities which seem only explicable on the assumption that two sources have been combined. The analogy of the preceding books at once suggests that these sources may be J and E respectively; and this presumption seems to be confirmed by various marks of literary parallelism and allusions to earlier incidents. Thus in some passages the population of the country is designated as Canaanite 7<sup>9</sup> 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>12-18</sup> J, whereas in others it is described as Amorite 10<sup>5</sup>. 24<sup>8</sup> E. The parallels to 2<sup>12</sup> 14<sup>21</sup> 3<sup>5 9</sup>. 4<sup>6</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> 10<sup>21</sup> &c plead strongly for J; so does the reference in 15<sup>14</sup>, and the group of fragments named in 13<sup>13*</sup> (cp infra 3 1a). Similarly E seems to furnish the description of Joshua in 1<sup>1</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> 23<sup>6</sup>, the allusion to the idolatry of Israel's ancestors 24<sup>14</sup>, and the record of the burial of Joseph 24<sup>32</sup>. The combined document JE may be traced in like manner behind the language of 14<sup>6-12</sup><sup>a</sup>. These marks lie, as it were, upon the surface: how far does minuter investigation confirm the expectations which they awaken?

3. When the contributions to Joshua editorially derived from D and P have been eliminated, it is found that the remaining portions designated as JE are concerned rather with the conquest than with the division of the promised land. The mission of the spies, the passage of the Jordan, the capture of Jericho, the defeat at Ai and the discovery of Achan's theft, the successful attack on Ai, the covenant with the Gibeonites, the catastrophe to the confederation of the southern kings under Adoni-zedek, and the overthrow of the northern alliance under Hazor,—these follow in definite succession though without any specification of time, and lead up to Joshua's old age 13<sup>1</sup>, and the preparations for the actual settlement. But at this point the traces of JE become more faint, and only a few fragments, obviously incongruous with their context, survive out of its record of the tribal inheritances cp 13<sup>13</sup> 15<sup>14-19</sup> 63 16<sup>1-3</sup> 10 17<sup>11-18</sup> 19<sup>47</sup>, to which must perhaps be added 18<sup>2-10</sup>. When these narratives are disentangled, so far as probability permits, what is the result of the analysis?

(1) The critical problem appeared at one time so difficult, that Wellhausen supposed that J broke off suddenly after the Balaam episode, and only left a trace here and there, as in Num 25<sup>1-5</sup> Deut 34<sup>7b</sup>, though its presence was afterwards recognized in Josh 9<sup>6</sup>.<sup>c</sup> Meyer also<sup>d</sup> denied to J any share in the account of the conquest of Canaan in Josh 1-12 save a fragment out of the story of the treaty with the Gibeonites in 9. But this view (though practically shared by Stade) has not been maintained by subsequent criticism<sup>e</sup>. Kuenen, indeed, asserted that J and E could not be satisfactorily eliminated from the complex product in which they had been welded together, but he admitted their original existence<sup>a</sup>. Later investigation has done something to relieve these difficulties. Dillmann's great commentary (on the basis of Knobel, concluded in 1886) again attempted what Kuenen had declared impossible; and Budde<sup>b</sup>, Kittel<sup>c</sup>, Albers<sup>d</sup>, Bennett<sup>e</sup>, have all concurred in believing that the main elements of J and E are not disguised beyond recognition, though their results do not always run side by side<sup>f</sup>.

(a) The principal obstacle to the recognition of J in Josh 2-11 arose from the circumstance that another view of the conquest and settlement of the Israelites in Canaan is to be found in Judges 1. This document includes passages which are plainly related to corresponding passages in Joshua; Adoni-bezek Judges 15-7 seems a counterpart of Adoni-zedek Josh 10<sup>3-5</sup>; the capture of Hebron Judg 1<sup>10</sup> is also related in Josh 15<sup>14</sup> (Caleb), and that of Debir Judg 1<sup>11-15</sup> in Josh 15<sup>15-19</sup>; further cp Judg 1<sup>21</sup> Josh 15<sup>63</sup>, Judg 1<sup>27</sup> Josh 17<sup>12</sup>, and Judg 1<sup>29</sup> Josh 16<sup>10</sup>. Various considerations concurred in pointing to J as the source from which this survey was derived<sup>g</sup>. But it contained no allusion to Joshua, and it was inferred, therefore, by some eminent critics, that J had not originally regarded him as the national leader, or even mentioned his name. The narrative of his victories, therefore, could owe nothing to J. The investigations of Budde<sup>h</sup>, however, showed good ground for believing that the contrast between the representations in Judg 1 and Josh 2-11 had been exaggerated; the admitted presence of J in the story of the covenant with the Gibeonites presupposed a narrative of the capture of Ai, and that in its turn was possible only when Jericho had fallen. J, therefore, had presumably related both these incidents, and these involved the passage of the Jordan also. Moreover, the general movement indicated in Josh 6-11 and in the survey in 14. showed that the southern part of Canaan was the first to receive the new settlers as in Judg 1, while the northern tribes only made their way among the Canaanites more slowly, after the house of Joseph had taken up its position in the centre 16<sup>1</sup>. 17<sup>14-18</sup>. But, on the other hand, it became clear that the representations of the complete destruction of the Canaanite populations eg 10<sup>28-43</sup> 11<sup>10-23</sup> were entirely inconsistent with the numerous cases recorded where the Canaanites proved too strong for the invaders, so that the tribes of Israel only secured a precarious footing in their midst cp 13<sup>13</sup> 15<sup>63</sup> 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>12</sup>. Such generalized summaries of universal massacre do not, however, show the characteristic features of J. They are far more closely connected with D (cp 4 infra); they have a distinct theological significance; they are not founded on historical tradition, they are editorial expressions of the horror felt in later times for the temptations of Canaanite idolatries, and of the triumphant conviction that Yahweh had given Israel the land. They are not part, therefore, of J's narrative, and need not be cited in contrast with Judg 1.

(β) But when these later elements are withdrawn, and the distribution of the remaining sections which betray diversity of source has been effected, there remains the question how far the elements which can be plausibly ascribed to J really constitute a harmonious whole. It seems difficult to form any estimate of the relative antiquity of J's narratives of the spies at Jericho or the passage of the Jordan compared with earlier stories such as the mission of the explorers to Canaan or the march across the sea at the Exodus<sup>a</sup>. On the other hand, the accounts of the fall of Jericho 6, and the defeat of the two great coalitions, southern and northern, in 10-11, certainly seem to be couched in a more exalted strain than the story of the overthrow of Sihon Num 21, or the various references to the position of the different clans and tribes, whether the successes of Caleb and Othniel 15<sup>14-19</sup>, or the relative failures of Judah 15<sup>63</sup>, Ephraim 16<sup>10</sup>, and Manasseh 17<sup>11</sup>. Moreover, Jabin the king of Hazor in 11<sup>1</sup> can hardly be unrelated to the sovereign of the same place, bearing the same name, Judg 4<sup>2 17</sup>. It may be questioned, therefore, whether the passages assigned to J are really all homogeneous, or whether they do not rather constitute a collection of stories and a picture of the settlement not by any means identical in age or origin, though bound together by certain common tendencies of thought and representation. In such a collection there must necessarily be diversities of date. On general grounds it is natural to expect that the simpler view will be the older, and the recognition of the Canaanite superiority in certain quarters will precede the later generalizations of their overthrow. The group of fragments 13<sup>13</sup> 15<sup>14-19</sup> 63 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>11-18</sup> 19<sup>47</sup> may therefore be referred (like the corresponding passages in Judg 1) to an early survey of the position of the tribes belonging to the school of J. Such a survey may have included a more detailed account of their settlement (cp 16<sup>1-3</sup>) to which the narrative of the passage of the Jordan and the advance to the hill country would form the appropriate introduction. The language of Judg 1<sup>3</sup> implies some kind of preliminary allotment of the land before the tribes attempted the task of conquest. If this existed in the primitive narratives of J, a basis would be supplied out of which subsequent representations might be developed. That the episodes of victory rest on older material is proved in one case by a citation from a poem in the lost book of Jashar<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>12</sup>, where it may be safely conjectured that the poetical version is a more ancient composition than the prose story<sup>c</sup>. There seems reason, therefore, for the view that the J sections may be of various dates, but the discrimination of the earlier is a task of the gravest difficulty. A growing consensus of criticism fixes on 10<sup>12(r)</sup> 13a 13<sup>13</sup> 15<sup>14-19</sup> 63 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>11-18</sup> 19<sup>47 d</sup>, to which may perhaps be added 5<sup>2. 9</sup>. The story of the spies in 2 has also a simple and primitive air; in 9, however, there seems a reminiscence of Ex 15<sup>16</sup> (unless the order of dependence be inverted, or the last clauses be assigned to the later editorial expansion). Much editorial work may be traced in J's share of 3-4, and the suddenness of the miracle announced in 3<sup>13</sup> cp 4<sup>18</sup> is not quite after the manner of J's employment of the east wind Ex 14<sup>21b 27b</sup>. The sevenfold procession round Jericho in 6 has no analogy in the records of the Trans-jordanic conquest: while the narratives in 8 10 and 11 are conceived upon a larger scale, and may be assigned to a later stage of tradition compared with the records of the capture of Hebron and Debir 15<sup>14-19</sup>. The representation of the action of the united people seems further removed from historical reality than the view of their advance in groups of tribes presented in Judg 1: and the total impression created by this portion of J suggests a much completer reduction of Canaanite opposition than the fragments from 13<sup>13</sup> onwards justify<sup>e</sup>. How far these fragments may be connected with any definite scheme of territorial location according to J it seems impossible now to determine. If 16<sup>1-3</sup> is rightly assigned to J, a probability is established that it may have contained other geographical descriptions now perhaps absorbed into P's more detailed survey cp 18<sup>11a</sup>. But it appears to be beyond the power of any critical method to discover the clues to their separation.

<sup>g</sup> Cp Moore, Judges in ICC 6-10. The chief reason is found in the contrast between this group of representations and that in Josh 24, the substance of which is universally ascribed to E. There the conquest is depicted as far more complete than the survey in Judg 1, and the Joshua parallels, allow. These passages, therefore, which seem to have been derived from a common source, must be assigned to J. Cp Driver, in Smith's DB<sup>2</sup> vol i pt ii p 1816.

(2) The original scope and significance of E are hardly less difficult to determine. One feature, however, appears in strong relief. At the opening of the book 1<sup>1</sup>. Joshua is solemnly commissioned to conduct the people across the Jordan. He is designated in terms elsewhere peculiar to E (in contrast with J) as 'Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister.' At the close of his career, when the conquest is substantially completed, he summons a national assembly at Shechem 24<sup>1</sup>, exhorts the people to obedience, makes a covenant with them to serve Yahweh <sup>25</sup>, and sets them 'a statute and an ordinance.' To Joshua, therefore, as to Moses, is assigned the double function of military leadership and religious legislation. By general consent the farewell address of Joshua is referred in its original form to E, and it is natural to accept its retrospect as a clue to the conception of the conquest and settlement which E contained. It proves in reality, however, to be somewhat barren of detail. The people are reminded of the passage of the Jordan and the fall of Jericho <sup>11</sup>, but the steps of subsequent victory are veiled under the figure of the 'hornet' which expelled the native populations cp <sup>12</sup>, and of the actual process of occupation not a word is said, any more than of the desert incidents between Egypt and the land of Moab. The narratives themselves, however, are not equally silent. The first step of 'Joshua the son of Nun' is to prepare for the great enterprise by obtaining the necessary information 2<sup>1</sup>, and though the details of distribution in the story of the spies may be uncertain, the conclusion <sup>23</sup> indicates clearly that E related their mission and brought them back successful. The passage of the Jordan and the capture of Jericho followed. From Gilgal Joshua proceeds to the attack on Ai; peace is concluded with the Gibeonites; and the five kings of the Amorites are 'discomfited' before Israel 10<sup>10a</sup>, their rout being completed by a great hailstorm as they fled down the pass from Beth-horon <sup>11</sup>. With this scene the extracts from E's history of the conquest apparently terminate. The further episodes of advance and settlement seem to have been suppressed in favour of the more general editorial summaries in 10<sup>23</sup>. 11<sup>10-12</sup>. Had E, however, no account of the allotment of the land, and the situations of the several tribes? A comparison of 19<sup>49</sup>. with 24<sup>30</sup> shows that materials from E were employed by P; and if this happened in one instance which can still be traced, it may have occurred in others which can no longer be recovered cp 18<sup>11a</sup>; though it may be doubted whether some fragments would not have survived, like those already rescued for J, had E included any detailed description of the settlement. The parallel of the general presentation of E with that of J shows that from the passage of the Jordan to the overthrow of the central alliance they kept step side by side. The details occasionally vary: if J dwells on the marvels of the arrest of the waters 3<sup>13</sup>, E can emphasize the sudden collapse of the walls of Jericho 6<sup>5 20b</sup>, or the dire effect of Joshua's outstretched javelin 8<sup>18 26</sup>: while each gives its own version of the divine aid against the five kings 10<sup>10-14</sup>. Of the time occupied by the entire settlement but little indication is afforded. From 24<sup>29</sup> it may be conjectured that Joshua was regarded as near his end when the great convocation took place at Shechem cp 23<sup>1</sup> and 13<sup>1</sup>. That the advance of the invaders would be slow was predicted in Ex 23<sup>28-30</sup>. The 'hornet,' therefore, would only pursue its work of expelling the native peoples by degrees; and this does not, accordingly, seem incompatible with the general view that Israel must encounter resistance as it penetrated further and further into the land, and that such resistance must be overcome by force. It has, indeed, been supposed <sup>a</sup> that the language of 24<sup>12</sup> was incompatible with the ascription to E of any narratives of military exploits after the capture of

Jericho. But the uncertainty of the original text renders this inference highly precarious, and there seems no adequate objection, therefore, to the recognition of E as the involuntary partner of J in the compound narrative in 2-10. Whether the elements of E are all of one piece, or whether like J it may be regarded as woven from strands of various date, it is more difficult to conjecture. Bennett<sup>a</sup> assigns to E<sup>1</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> 7<sup>a</sup> 20 (mainly, 'and it came to pass . . . straight before him') 19<sup>19</sup>. Reasons are given in the Analysis for ascribing the latter passage to P; in the story of the fall of Jericho it may be conceded that the most ancient element was the shout, but it does not seem possible to isolate the passages referring to it as an older literary product. The Analysis, therefore, does not venture to make any partition of age.

(3) If the presence of J and E be admitted in Josh 1-10, it is natural to infer that their union took place under the same conditions as those which produced JE in Gen Ex and Num. The Joshua sections of these documents were in fact integral parts of them, as the position of Joshua in E shows with especial clearness; the work of Moses being definitely assigned to him as its continuator, and the retrospect in 24 binding the entire story from Abraham's migration to the Shechem assembly into one whole. It may be assumed, therefore, that the general method of R<sup>j</sup><sup>6</sup> in dealing with the earlier narratives will be traceable also in the latter. The larger portion of the material appears to be derived from J, though the chronological framework 1<sup>1</sup> 24<sup>20</sup> is supplied by E. The actual extracts have been woven together with extraordinary closeness, as in some parts of the Joseph series; but the hand of the compiler is occasionally to be traced in verses designed to harmonize conflicting situations, or combine discordant data 2<sup>17</sup> 8<sup>13</sup>. In 14<sup>6-15</sup> the story of Joshua's gift of Hebron to Caleb is related on the basis of the combined narrative of JE in Num 13-14 (cp 14<sup>68</sup>), and seems due, therefore, in its original form to a writer who might be provisionally identified with R<sup>j</sup><sup>6</sup>. But it has been recast (if it really existed at an earlier date) under Deuteronomic influence, and its present shape is due to R<sup>d</sup> (cp below, 4)<sup>b</sup>. There remains a passage 18<sup>2-10</sup> which does not seem to belong to either document, nor to show the characteristic marks of origin in the schools of D or P cp 18<sup>28</sup>. It is founded on a theory of the completed conquest, and appears designed to introduce a survey of the settlement. That J at least once contained such a survey is highly probable; though the surviving fragments show that in its oldest form it was not conceived on the basis of universal subjugation assumed in 18<sup>2-10</sup>. But as the documents passed from hand to hand, receiving fresh additions, it may be conjectured that a later editor desired to gather into one view the various data and fuse them in one general representation. To such a description of the tribal inheritances, which may now lie at the basis of P's delineation 18<sup>11-19</sup>, R<sup>j</sup><sup>6</sup> may have prefixed as a suitable introduction the story of the travels of the twenty-one deputies, their description of the land in seven portions, and the distribution of the inheritances by lot before Yahweh in Shiloh.

<sup>b</sup> It does not, however, follow that all the passages ascribed to the school of J belonged to the book of JE. Thus a second narrative of the gift of Hebron to Caleb is found in 15<sup>14-19</sup>, introduced by 13 which bears strong marks of R<sup>p</sup>. The recurrence of this passage in Judg 1<sup>10-15</sup> connects it with the group already specified in 31<sup>8</sup> 13<sup>13</sup> 15<sup>63</sup> 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>11-18</sup> 19<sup>47</sup>, most of which are now embedded in portions of P, where they have the air of editorial insertions qualifying larger claims. In 13<sup>13</sup>, however, this qualification affects a section of D. The generalizations of the Deuteronomic editor, however, are so absolute (see 4 below) as to render his admission of such a correction highly surprising: and it would seem probable that the Deuteronomic edition of Joshua dropped the passages in which J surveyed the progress of the settlement with frank recognition of Israel's limitations, and that these were only inserted in a much later revision, when an effort was made to incorporate all the records of the past. Similarly, Judg 1-2<sup>3</sup> was not included in the Deuteronomic Judges-book, cp Cornill, Eini<sup>4</sup> 94, Moore, Judges (in ICC) xxxiii, Budde, Richter (in Kurz Hdcomm) x. This argument may be pushed further back, and applied similarly to JE, the editor of which (if 18<sup>2-10</sup> be rightly assigned to him) held a similar view. In any case the J source of Judges 1 and its parallels in Joshua still remained distinct, and could be used separately.

4. Far more important was the revision to which JE was submitted in the Deuteronomic school. The indications of this process are numerous, but even the most careful scrutiny still leaves many points in doubt, and the significance of different details is variously estimated by students who approach the problems along independent lines<sup>a</sup>.

(1) The general phenomena are so obvious as to strike even the most casual reader. Reference has already been made to the fulfilment in 8<sup>30-35</sup> of the instructions in Deut 27<sup>1-23</sup>. In a similar manner the language of 1 is founded on the incidents and exhortations of D. After the death of Moses, Joshua is divinely confirmed in the leadership to which he has already been solemnly dedicated. As the successor of Moses he receives fresh assurance that the promises made to the great Liberator of his people will be accomplished on the due observance of the law imparted through him<sup>3-9</sup>. The following parallels will suffice to show the connexion:—

Josh 1

Deut

7 Thou shalt go with this people into the land which Yahweh hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.

The address to the Reubenites, Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh 11<sup>12-18</sup>, is based on the recital in Deut 3<sup>12, 18-20</sup>: while the discourse of Joshua in 23 is a Deuteronomic counterpart to the farewell address in 24, with especial reference to the Mosaic warnings in the concluding exhortations in Deut 28 and 29. In other cases, however, the Deuteronomic additions do not thus stand alone; they are woven into the context of the narrative as in the explanations of the circumcision at Gilgal 5<sup>4-8</sup>, and the erection of the stones commemorating the passage of the Jordan 4<sup>21-24</sup>. And yet again two remarkable summaries of Joshua's victories seem best explicable as Deuteronomic additions 10<sup>28-43</sup> and 11<sup>10-12</sup><sup>24</sup>. The first of these is couched in a series of paragraphs repeated with rhythmical regularity. Joshua is accompanied by 'all Israel' <sup>2a</sup>; city after city is delivered by Yahweh into their hands <sup>52</sup>; the inhabitants are smitten with the edge of the sword Deut 13<sup>15</sup> 20<sup>13</sup>, and none are left remaining Deut 2<sup>34</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> Num 21<sup>35</sup>; Yahweh is emphatically said to have fought for Israel 4<sup>2</sup> <sup>45</sup>; and the 'devotion' of 'all that breathed' <sup>40</sup> is expressly based on the injunction of the law cp Deut 20<sup>16</sup> 'thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth, but thou shalt devote them.' Whatever materials may lie behind these sweeping surveys, such as the list of kings in 12<sup>9-24</sup>, there can be no doubt that the present form of these sections is due to an editor of the Deuteronomic school, anxious to show that Joshua fulfilled the divine commands as the faithful successor of Moses cp 10<sup>40</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> <sup>23b</sup>. Parallel phenomena though in another field may be observed in the general summaries of Israelite idolatries presented in the book of Judges eg 2<sup>11-23</sup> 10<sup>6-16</sup>, which bear a strongly marked Deuteronomic character; or, again, in the prayer composed for Solomon at the dedication of the Temple 1 Kings 8<sup>23-53</sup><sup>a</sup>.

(2) But a closer examination of Josh 1-12 reveals the interesting fact that the labours of the Deuteronomists were not confined to the addition of longer sections of narrative or address, or even of shorter explanations. The stories of JE bear upon them numerous touches due to the same hands. Traces of the influence of this great school have already been discovered in legislative passages such as Ex 13<sup>3</sup>.. 23<sup>20</sup>.. and 34<sup>10</sup>.., while the origin of Num 21<sup>33-35</sup> is to be sought in the same direction. In Joshua 2-11, however, the indications of editorial handling by D are more constant and pervading. The general method of treatment may perhaps best be introduced by a comparison of the two versions of the conquest of Sihon here placed side by side:—

Num 21

<sup>21</sup> And Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying, <sup>22</sup> Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn aside into field, or into vineyard; we will not drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's [high] way, until we have passed thy border.

Deut 2

<sup>26</sup> And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth unto Sihon king of Heshbon with words of peace, saying, <sup>27</sup> Let me pass through thy land: I will go along by the high way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left. <sup>28</sup> Thou shalt sell me food for money, that I may eat; and give me water for money, that I may drink: only let me pass through on my feet; <sup>29</sup> as the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me; until I shall pass over Jordan into the land which Yahweh our God giveth us. <sup>30</sup> But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for Yahweh thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as at this day. <sup>31</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, Behold, I have begun to deliver up Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land. <sup>32</sup> Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, unto battle at Jahaz. <sup>33</sup> And Yahweh our God delivered him up before us; and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people. <sup>34</sup> And we took all his cities at that time, and devoted every inhabited city, with the women and the little ones; we left none remaining: <sup>35</sup> only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, with the spoil of the cities which we had taken.

Josh

<sup>37</sup> This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

Josh

4<sup>21b</sup> When (5 Deut 11<sup>27</sup>) your sons shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean these stones? <sup>22</sup> then ye shall make your sons know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land. <sup>23</sup> For Yahweh your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as Yahweh your God did to the Red Sea, which he dried up from before us, until we were passed over: <sup>24</sup> that all the peoples of the earth may know the hand of Yahweh, that it is mighty; that they may fear Yahweh your God all the days.

But this passage carries with it 5<sup>1</sup>. ('dried up the waters of Jordan until we were passed over'), and similarly 2<sup>10</sup>.:—

Josh

2<sup>10</sup> For we have heard how Yahweh dried up the water of the Red Sea before you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, unto Sihon and to Og, whom ye devoted. <sup>11</sup> And as soon as we had heard it, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more spirit in any man, because of you: for Yahweh your God, he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath.

But the Deuteronomic revision enters still more closely into some portions of the narrative, as may be seen in 3<sup>4b</sup> 10<sup>b</sup> 17<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>1a</sup> 12; and this renders it almost certain that the designations 'ark of the covenant' and 'the Levitical priests' have been introduced in the same process cp 3<sup>3n</sup>. It is hardly necessary to cite further instances; but the following parallels deserve consideration:—

Josh

6<sup>2</sup> And Yahweh said unto Joshua,

See, I have given into thine hand Jericho, and the king thereof, the mighty men of valour.

Josh

8<sup>1</sup> And Yahweh said unto Joshua, Fear not, neither be thou dismayed: take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land: <sup>2</sup> and thou shalt do to Ai and her king &c.

Here also it is probable that the hand of R<sup>d</sup> has been at work; and so numerous are the traces of his handling in 1-12 that some critics (with Kuenen at their head) have regarded the narratives of the conquest as so completely welded together by him that no distribution of the antecedent sources was practicable. More recent investigations have not confirmed this judgement; but whatever view be formed of the possibilities of success in this direction, one fact remains clearly established—the story of the western conquest has undergone a kind of redaction to which the records of the previous traditions were not submitted. For this there must plainly be a cause. That the Deuteronomic school could work in its own way on the older material has been already shown in the comparison of the two accounts of the overthrow of Sihon. But the actual Trans-jordanic story of JE remained untouched (save for the incorporation of the episode of Og Num 22<sup>33-35</sup>). This difference of treatment seems explicable only on the assumption that when the Deuteronomic editors took the traditions of the conquest in hand, the narrative of the Mosaic age was regarded as practically closed. The death of Moses made an obvious pause, and formed the fitting conclusion to the combination JED. When once the incorporation of the Deuteronomic law-book with its hortatory settings into the historic framework of JE had been effected, the remaining records were severed more markedly from the Mosaic age. The continuity of the story was broken by the interposition of the great book of law to which the whole previous narrative only served as introduction; and the elevation of the code into regulative or canonical authority, while it secured what went before from further revision, left what came after to the pious activity of editors who sought to show how the commands of Yahweh had been fulfilled. Joshua, therefore, could be handled more freely, and the traces of subsequent handling are consequently more numerous and varied.

(3) The general indications already cited make it probable that the Deuteronomic elements in Joshua are not to be regarded as extracts from a completer work on the conquest, but are supplemental to the earlier product of JE<sup>a</sup>. It is more difficult to decide on the grounds of Joshua alone whether R<sup>d</sup> worked on JE in union or on J and E separately. The analogy of the previous books (cp Introd XVI 17 i 173) suggests that the fusion had already taken place; and this conclusion may receive some slight confirmation from the phenomena of 2, where two narratives are undoubtedly blended, and where also a Deuteronomic addition can be easily detected<sup>10</sup>. But there is no sign of R<sup>d</sup> in the passage which seems due to the harmonist of the separate sources<sup>17</sup>: while R<sup>d</sup> can be eliminated from the account of the march through the Jordan in 3-4 and leave JE nearly intact. Other questions, however, suggest themselves which deserve a passing word.

(a) In the first place, what are the connexions of R<sup>d</sup> in Joshua with the different elements of Deuteronomy itself? Is it possible to discriminate more than one deposit of revision, and, if so, can they be attached to the separate groups of homilists whose work has been already distinguished, cp Deut 34<sup>12N</sup>? These questions raise difficult problems, to which answers can only be given with reserve. That the additions made by R<sup>d</sup> were not all incorporated at one time is rendered probable by the general facts of the editorial treatment of the preceding books. And this probability is obviously increased by the circumstance that the symbol R<sup>d</sup> covers incongruities which can hardly be due to the same writer. Thus after the kings of Hebron and Debir have been devoted together with the entire populations belonging to them 10<sup>36-39</sup> <sup>b</sup>, so that none remain, Joshua subsequently proceeds to cut off the Anakim of the same places 11<sup>21</sup>. These representations are hardly coherent; the second seems to be generalized from the ancient narrative in 14<sup>14</sup>., but it cannot be accommodated in the same view as the first. Similarly it may be doubted if the following two summaries are from the same hand:—

10<sup>40</sup> So Joshua smote all the land, the hill country, and the South, and the lowland, and the slopes, and all their kings; he left none remaining: but he devoted all that breathed, as Yahweh, the God of Israel, commanded. <sup>41</sup> And Joshua smote them from Kadesh-barnea even unto Gaza, and all the country of Goshen, even unto Gibeon. And all these kings and their land did Joshua take at one time, because Yahweh, the God of Israel, fought for Israel.

11<sup>16</sup> So Joshua took all that land, the hill country, and all the South, and all the land of Goshen, and the lowland, and the Arabah, and the hill country of Israel, and the lowland of the same; <sup>17</sup> from mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon under mount Hermon: and all their kings he took, and smote them, and put them to death. . . .
<sup>50</sup> For it was of Yahweh to harden their hearts, to come against Israel in battle, that he might devote them, that they might have no favour, but that he might destroy them.

the resistance of the native kings is contrasted with the peaceful submission of the Gibeonites, and is set down to the same providential process which had already brought the divine dooms on Pharaoh and his people. In other instances, also, it is probable that Deuteronomic additions have themselves been subsequently expanded, cp 17. On the other hand there do not seem any clear reasons for attributing 3<sup>7</sup> 4<sup>14</sup> (with Albers) to R<sup>d1</sup> and 4<sup>21-24</sup> to R<sup>d2</sup>. The Analysis does not, therefore, save in rare cases, attempt to distinguish typographically between different elements of R<sup>d</sup>: it must be enough to recognize the general evidence that the Deuteronomic revision was a process to which more than one writer of the school contributed<sup>a</sup>. There are even signs that additions continued to be made in the Deuteronomic spirit till a very late date, as the peculiar phenomena of 20 indicate. This may, indeed, be an exceptional case of harmonizing; but in other instances there seem to be marks of late character in additions bearing the general stamp of R<sup>d</sup> (see below, δ).

(β) That the Deuteronomic editors based themselves on D as we now possess it (apart from the song of Moses 32 and the few passages due to P) cannot, indeed, be affirmed with certainty, but it appears highly probable. The reference to Joshua in 13-9 implies Deut 11<sup>24</sup>. and 31<sup>7</sup>.; while the address to the tribes who wished to settle on the east of Jordan 12-18 is founded on Deut 3<sup>12</sup>. 18-20. The description of Sihon and Og as the 'two kings of the Amorites' 2<sup>10</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> belongs to the later strata of D cp Deut 3<sup>8N</sup>; the designation of Yahweh as 'God in heaven above and on earth beneath' 2<sup>11b</sup> seems to rest on Deut 4<sup>39</sup>; and the homilist of Josh 23<sup>3</sup> 15 shows points of contact with the discourses in both Deut 28 and 29. The historic and hortatory settings of the Deuteronomic code seem thus within the view of R<sup>d</sup>; and it may be surmised that the work which was begun on the basis of JE in Deut 1-3 31 34 was continued by the same group though on a different method through the traditions of the conquest and settlement.

(γ) The phraseological indications of this process are necessarily slight. But they are not wholly wanting. The designation of Sihon and Og as 'the two kings of the Amorites' has just been cited. New phrases creep into the survey of their dominions: each is described as 'ruling' 12<sup>5</sup>, a term not employed in Deut 2. (in D only in 15<sup>6</sup>); or as 'reigning' 13<sup>10</sup> 12, another verb also absent from the earlier accounts<sup>b</sup>. Fresh geographical data also appear, such as the reference to the sea of Chinnereth and to Beth-jeshimoth 12<sup>3</sup>; while the word 'possession' 12<sup>6</sup>. carries on the usage of Deut 25<sup>9</sup> 12<sup>19</sup> 32<sup>0</sup> Josh 1<sup>15</sup>. Other peculiarities are probably to be found in the phrases 'meditate' in the law 1<sup>8</sup> cp Ps 1<sup>2</sup>; 'mighty men of valour' 1<sup>14</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> 8<sup>3</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> (2 Kings 15<sup>20</sup> 24<sup>14</sup> Chron [20] Neh 11<sup>14†</sup>) et Deut 3<sup>18</sup> 'all the men of valour'; 'dried up' 2<sup>10</sup> 4<sup>23</sup> 5<sup>1*</sup>; 'all the people of war' (?) 8<sup>1</sup> 3 (11) 10<sup>7</sup> 11<sup>7†</sup>, et 'men of war' 5<sup>4</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> 10<sup>24</sup> Deut 2<sup>14</sup> 16; תחנה 'favour' 11<sup>2*</sup> 1 Kings 8<sup>28</sup>. 9<sup>3</sup> Jer 36<sup>7</sup> 37<sup>20</sup> 38<sup>26</sup> 42<sup>2</sup> 9 Pss Chron; 'according to their divisions' 11<sup>23</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> 18<sup>10*</sup>; 'wealth' 22<sup>8</sup> 2 Chron 1<sup>11</sup>. Ezr 6<sup>8</sup> 7<sup>26</sup> Eccles 5<sup>19</sup> 6<sup>2†</sup>; and the Hebrew forms אֹתָם 10<sup>25</sup>, אֹתֵי 14<sup>12</sup>, הַמִּסִּי 14<sup>8</sup>.

occurs in Num 33<sup>55</sup>. It is no doubt to be expected on general grounds that the characteristic terminology of one great school should find antecedents in its predecessor. The style of R<sup>b</sup> already approaches that of D; why should not the style of R<sup>a</sup> in like manner prepare the way for P? The Deuteronomic editors of the national histories during the exile were contemporary with the priestly schools of Ezekiel and his successors, and some interchange of phraseology would be only natural. Such interchange may be detected in 5<sup>4</sup> 8<sup>33</sup> 10<sup>27</sup>. 11<sup>20</sup> 22<sup>4</sup>. To what is it due? Are these the spontaneous outshoots of R<sup>a</sup> towards kindred workers in the same great field, or do they suggest that R<sup>p</sup> has been upon his track with his own additions and modifications? The phenomena of 10<sup>28</sup>. compared with 40 and ③ 10<sup>28n</sup> seem to prove clearly that an editor of the school of P has introduced the word 'souls' at a quite late stage of the history of the text. If such revision has happened in one case, it may have operated elsewhere also. Thus the phraseology of 6<sup>19</sup> 24<sup>b</sup> points to R<sup>p</sup>. But 19 is evidently a supplement to R<sup>a</sup> in 18; and a clue is thus gained to the priority of the Deuteronomic revision before the Priestly annotator took the work in hand. Is this view sustained by other phenomena in Joshua? In other words, what is the relation of the P sections to the rest of the book?

5. The inquiry just suggested is full of difficulty, and the seemingly conflicting facts have been differently interpreted in different critical schools.

(1) The obvious indications of the presence of elements continuing the arrangements of Num 34<sup>17</sup>-35<sup>34</sup> have been already mentioned (ante 2). They prove at once that P is not unrepresented in the narrative of the settlement. But it is less clear at first sight whether P contained any story of the conquest, and, if so, what has become of it. That he related the entry into Canaan is admitted by general consent 4<sup>19</sup>, and the passage at once creates a presumption that his narrative also described the crossing of the Jordan. Traces of such a narrative may be seen in 3<sup>4a</sup> 8 15. 4<sup>7b</sup> 8a 13 15-17. The record of the passover and the note on the food-supply 5<sup>10-12</sup> are plainly derived from the same source. But the account of the events which follow seems to owe little to his hand. Jericho falls and he is apparently silent. He breaks in at the beginning of the story of Achan's trespass 7<sup>1</sup>; a clear glimpse of the 'congregation' and its 'princes' is afforded in the dealings with the Gibeonites 9<sup>15c</sup> 17-21; the delineation of the tribal settlements is chiefly due to him (the Trans-jordanic tribes 13<sup>15-14</sup><sup>5</sup>, Judah 15<sup>1-12</sup> 20-62, Ephraim 16<sup>4-9</sup>, Manasseh 17<sup>1-10</sup>, the remaining tribes 18<sup>1</sup> 11-19<sup>16</sup> 48, cities of refuge 20, cities for the Levites 21<sup>1-42</sup>); and the last echoes of his language are heard in the story of the altar by Jordan 22<sup>9-34</sup>. It is at once plain from the irregularity of these fragments that P has not been adopted as the groundwork of the compilation of Joshua in the same way in which it was laid at the base of the preceding books. The chronological articulation from Gen 1 to Deut 34<sup>7</sup> is here entirely lacking<sup>a</sup>. Of the victories of Israel, of the overthrow of the Canaanite confederations, no word has been preserved. It can hardly be doubted that some allusions to these events were contained in P. One incident is especially significant; the oath to the Gibeonites cannot have been a mere detached episode; it must have been derived from a connected scheme<sup>b</sup>. The gift of the land is formally promised in Ex 6<sup>4</sup> 8; the war of subjugation is anticipated Num 32<sup>20-22</sup>, and the warriors of the Trans-jordanic tribes cross with their brethren ready for battle Josh 4<sup>13</sup>. The way is thus prepared for a narrative of the conquest which may have taken the main stages of advance for granted after the manner of P's reference to the 'overthrow' of Sodom and Gomorrah Gen 19<sup>29</sup>, while it enlarged on incidents calculated to shed some light on Israel's dealings with the conquered peoples and the sanctuary-claims on person and property. But such a narrative was not so well adapted for the foundation of the combined account of the conquest as that of the product symbolized by JER<sup>d</sup>. It stands, therefore, in the background in the first half of the book, and only becomes prominent in the second. On this and other grounds it has already been argued (Introd i 178) that the combination of P with JED was not effected in Joshua by the same hand or on the same method as in the Pentateuch.

(2) What, then, is the relation of the P sections in Joshua to the great document of which it is the sequel? That document has been shown to be by no means homogeneous (Introd XIII 7-10). To which among its various strata does the continuation in Joshua appear to belong? The promise of Ex 6<sup>48</sup> suggests that the general plan of P<sup>s</sup> originally included the entry into Canaan and the distribution of the land. In this it followed the general method of JE. But it is doubtful how far the existing sections are to be ascribed to this source, for they show many traces phraseologically of secondary character. Thus in 4<sup>19</sup> the common designation 'the children of Israel' is replaced by 'the people,' of rare occurrence in P, Ex 16<sup>27 30</sup> Num 16<sup>47</sup> 31<sup>3</sup> 33<sup>14</sup>, four out of the five passages being already independently marked as late. The description of the passover 5<sup>10</sup> employs D's term for 'even' instead of P's. Achan's pedigree 7<sup>1</sup> depends on Num 26<sup>20</sup>, and the usual phrase in P to describe the divine anger 17<sup>8</sup> gives way to the familiar language of JE which only appears in P elsewhere in the curious amalgam Num 32<sup>10 13</sup>. On the other hand the account of the allotment of the land opens with the erection of the 'tent of meeting' at Shiloh 18<sup>1</sup> (on the original place of the verse see 14<sup>1N</sup>), where P might have been expected to mention the Dwelling. It has been previously urged Ex 25<sup>1N</sup> that many parts of P's legislation seem based on this conception of the sanctuary, and represent an older stage of codification afterwards adapted to the newer form. In the same way it is quite possible that the narrative of the distribution may rest on an older survey, and this may be the explanation of some of the peculiarities discussed in 18<sup>11N</sup>. In any case it is worth observing that the account takes no notice of the men whom Moses expressly selected for this function Num 34<sup>18-28</sup>. Where are the ten princes whom he associated with Eleazar and Joshua? They are hardly to be identified with the 'heads of the fathers' 19<sup>51</sup>; and it may be conjectured therefore that the description of the settlement is earlier than the provision in Num 34<sup>16-20</sup>. The assignment of the cities of refuge and the Levitical cities 20 (following the full close 19<sup>51</sup>) is, however, plainly dependent on Num 35, and the P sections in Joshua, therefore, must be grouped in their present form under the general heading of P<sup>s</sup>.

(3) The relation of P to JE in Joshua is sufficiently implied in the foregoing exposition. The details which P contributes, for instance, to the Achan story in 7, or a comparison of the items of the survey from 13<sup>5</sup> onwards, can leave no doubt of the priority of JE. But there are other phenomena of a more perplexing kind, involved in the comparison of P with D.

(a) The general reasons founded on institutional development which place the Deuteronomic code before the Levitical legislation in order of time remain unaffected by the narratives of Joshua. But the literary affinities of P and D in Joshua are somewhat intricate and have led different critics to opposite inferences. The materials for investigation are scanty, as they are mostly confined to the traces of editorial revision. There is, however, one clear case of duplication where a comparison may prove suggestive, if not decisive, viz the account of the territories assigned to the tribes

Josh 13<sup>8-10</sup> D

Josh 13<sup>15-21</sup> P

<sup>15</sup> And Moses gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben according to their families. <sup>16</sup> And their border was from Aroer, that is on the edge of the valley of Arnon, and the city that is in the middle of the valley, and all the plain by Medeba; <sup>17</sup> Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon, and Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon; <sup>18</sup> and Jahaz, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath; <sup>19</sup> and Kiriathaim, and Sibmah, and Zereth-Shahar in the mount of the valley; <sup>20</sup> and Beth-peor, and the slopes of Pisgah, and Beth-jeshimoth; <sup>21</sup> and all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon.

That there is a literary relation between these passages can hardly be doubted. Did D abstract from P, or P expand D, or did both found themselves independently upon a common source? The latter alternative is excluded by the fact that both passages subsequently introduce Og king of Bashan, and the analysis of Deut 3 shows that Og appears there for the first time: D and P, therefore, could have no common antecedent. But the same argument proves that P in <sup>30</sup> must be ultimately based on Deut 3; and the dependence of P on D seems thus established<sup>a</sup>. It is confirmed by the fact that while D expressly asserts <sup>10</sup> that the conquered territory did not include Ammon cp Deut 2<sup>37</sup>, P claims half for Gad <sup>25</sup>, an extension of which D is evidently unaware. The relation of P to D here, therefore, is similar to that of P to JE concerning the territory of Joseph 16<sup>1-3</sup> and 4...

offered in the notes need not be repeated here. The harmonistic touch of a scribe who adds the words 'in the land of Moab' Deut 32<sup>49</sup> cannot prove more than a desire to bring the language of different passages into accord: in the secondary passages of P there is an occasional option in the choice of names for 'tribe'<sup>a</sup>, just as 1 Chron 5<sup>18 23 26</sup> speaks of the 'half shébbeth of Manasseh,' while 1 Chron 6<sup>61 70</sup> mentions the 'half matteh.' It may be conceded, then, that tendencies to variation display themselves unexpectedly in both directions; the characteristic language of D is sometimes replaced by that of P, and vice versa. These contradictory phenomena seem in a sense to cancel each other. At any rate it may be affirmed that neither group is strong enough to bear the strain of supporting a general conclusion concerning the documents of the Hexateuch at large. The main facts of their contents and relations remain wholly unaffected. It is of importance to notice, however, that the observation formerly made concerning the relations to R<sup>d</sup> and JE § 42 is equally true of the fuller product JER<sup>d</sup> and R<sup>p</sup>. The Deuteronomic editors left the records of the Trans-jordanic conquest under Moses practically untouched<sup>b</sup>: but they worked freely on the stories of the victories of Joshua. This fact was cited in confirmation of the view that the Joshua narratives had been separated from their context in Numbers by the incorporation of the Book of Deuteronomy, long before the compilation of the Priestly Code. In this condition of detachment from the preceding group they were no longer guarded with the care which protected the Law, and they were the more readily exposed to editorial manipulation. It was easy, therefore, for the scribes who undertook to combine P's version of the Conquest and Settlement with the Deuteronomic Joshua to adopt a different method of redaction compared with the final composition of the Pentateuch. They not only threw much of P's materials away instead of presenting them almost intact and using them as the chronological basis of the whole, but they—or their successors—scattered traces of their work in occasional phrases throughout the most characteristic Deuteronomic sections, just as the Deuteronomic editors had impressed themselves still more forcibly on JE. No such activity can be discerned within the limits of Deuteronomy itself. And this contrast reinforces the belief already expressed (Introd i 178) that P's Joshua was not amalgamated with its predecessor JED by the hand which arranged the Pentateuch<sup>c</sup>. What interval separated the two processes it is impossible to conjecture. But the evidence of the Septuagint at least makes it certain that the book continued to receive additions till after the middle of the third century BC<sup>d</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> The publication of Steuernagel's Das Buch Josua (in the Hdkomm) as these sheets are passing through the press invites a word of comment, for his results vary widely from those already set forth. His conception of the growth of the book is highly interesting, if also somewhat too intricate to be properly estimated within the limits of a brief note. The constituent materials are referred (as above) to J E D and P, but in very different combinations. In regard to J Steuernagel returns to the view of Wellhausen and Meyer that it recognized no Joshua, and that consequently no portion of 1-12 can be allotted to it (save the brief touch in the Gibeonite story 5<sup>9</sup>, where the negotiations are conducted with the 'men of Israel'). J is accordingly represented almost entirely by the fragments parallel with Judges 1. To E, on the other hand, a considerable amount is assigned in 2-7 8<sup>30</sup>. 14<sup>6-14</sup> 9<sup>19</sup>. 24. This distribution, however, leaves large gaps in the narrative before the sections of the survey due to P. The intervening passages are referred chiefly to D<sup>2</sup>, the continuation of Deut 1-3. This document opens with 1<sup>1</sup>. 10-1<sup>1</sup>, and continues through 3 4 6 8 9 10 11 (being united in 3 4 6 with E). Its record of the conquest has been preserved almost entire, but from 13 onwards it can be discovered only in fragments. There are, however, various other traces of Deuteronomic revision by successive editors and copyists. The stories of E had probably undergone a Deuteronomic handling before they were combined with D<sup>2</sup>: and that the process was continued in the scribal schools may be inferred from the phenomena of 20. But the Deuteronomic book of Joshua did not, in Steuernagel's judgement, contain the passages which he assigns to J or even to E. These were not added

6. Indications have been already cited incidentally which prove that the process of revision did not stop with the incorporation of P into JED. The introduction of the Deuteronomic provisions for the cities of refuge in 20<sup>3-6</sup> is admitted to be later than the text employed by the Alexandrian translators. The same witnesses bear similar testimony in other cases<sup>a</sup>. A number of words and clauses are lacking in ©, the absence of which can hardly be ascribed either to accident or design. In some instances as in 2<sup>21</sup> or 14<sup>3</sup> the omissions may be explained by the recurrence of identical words; in others, as in the narratives of the capture first of Jericho 6, and then of Ai 8, they seem intended to remove inconsistencies and harmonize conflicting details. But others, again, are probably due to neither of these causes, but indicate continuous editorial handling which sought to rectify or define or supplement the existing text<sup>b</sup>. Thus 13<sup>33</sup> is needless, for it is implied in 14<sup>3</sup>, while it reproduces 13<sup>14</sup> with its Deuteronomic forms in the midst of P. Its absence from ©, therefore, increases the probability that it is a later addition. Homiletic expansions are perhaps to be traced with the same aid in 2<sup>9b</sup> and 23<sup>16b</sup>; while the scribal love of the law is most likely responsible for the reference in 17. Such handling cannot be said to be in favour of any particular school, or to make for any special documentary theory. There is no case of divergences so great as those affecting the long secondary section Ex 35-40. But they are sufficiently numerous and striking to warrant the conclusion of Dillmann<sup>c</sup> that the text of Joshua was not definitely fixed until a date perhaps as late as 200 B.C.<sup>d</sup> until after the combination of P with D, for which D supplied the framework. Into the united book DP a late priestly scribe R<sup>p</sup> introduced the extracts from J and E; so that instead of the usual symbol JEDP Steuernagel's hypothesis might be represented as DPR<sup>p</sup> (J + E). The reader who will take these clues in hand through the following analysis, will be able to form his own conclusions on this critical scheme. From the point of view of the results exhibited in the text far too much literary product is ascribed to D<sup>2</sup>. In 8-11 for example the bulk of the narrative is thus treated. But the style of Deut 1-3 does not show anything like the independence and vigour which mark the story of the capture of Ai or the defeat of the five kings. D<sup>2</sup> is little more than a homiletic copyist in Deut 1-3: and when he introduces a new episode, for which he has no previous authority in JE, the overthrow of Og 3<sup>1-7</sup>, he can only advance step by step on the track of the preceding narrative of Sihon. In Josh 8 and 10, however, there are manifold fresh traits wholly unlike the manner of Deut 1-3, as indeed Steuernagel himself seems to perceive when he concedes that here E may have been used as a source by D<sup>2</sup>. Moreover in 8 (at least, if not also in 10) there are clear traces of two narrators. To these Steuernagel is not indifferent, but his second is a late priestly editor. The appearance of R<sup>p</sup> on the scene here is altogether unexpected; why should he devise a second ambuscade 8<sup>12</sup>., and how is his intervention to be recognized? Steuernagel gives no reasons for his identification. This must be said of other passages also attributed to this school. Thus in 9<sup>14</sup> R<sup>p</sup> is dragged in by a correction of the text and represented as recording that the 'princes' neglected to 'inquire of Yahweh,' an antique process of consulting the oracle which P nowhere sanctions (having set it aside for the Urim and Thummim of Ex 28<sup>30</sup>): while 10<sup>40-43</sup> is similarly allotted to R<sup>p</sup>, though the phraseology is preponderantly Deuteronomic (the incorporation of material from Deut 19 in Josh 20 is so clearly the work of a harmonizer that it must be regarded as exceptional, and cannot be taken to justify Steuernagel's hypothesis of a group or succession of priestly scribes habitually adopting the Deuteronomic style).—The divergences of Steuernagel's results thus imply (1) different conceptions of the preceding analysis (as in the ascription of 5<sup>18-15</sup> with the parallel in Ex 3<sup>5</sup> to E); (2) a different value for phraseological and stylistic evidence in the determination of sources (as in the assignment of 14<sup>6-12</sup> in its present form to E, and the derivation of so large a portion of 1-11 from D<sup>2</sup>); and (3) a different estimate of historical probability in the denial of any narrative of Joshua's leadership to J. The student will derive much stimulus from so fresh a treatment, and if this work succeeds in placing the data before him, he will have the materials for independent judgement.

<sup>d</sup> In Hastings' DB ii 784<sup>a</sup> Prof G A Smith expounds a similar view: 'That the Book of Joshua was not regarded in Israel as what we call canonical till long after the Torah or Five Books of Moses had reached that rank, is clear from the difference between it and them in the LXX translation. While it is evident, from the comparatively few discrepancies between the Massoretic text and that of the LXX, that the text of the Torah had long been guarded with care before the LXX translation was made, the many discrepancies in the Book of Joshua, the freedom with which the Greek translator or translators allowed themselves to omit or to modify, prove that when the LXX translation of it was made, Joshua was not regarded as of canonical rank. The admission to the Canon of the Prophetical Books, to which it belongs, is generally held to have been about 200 B.C.'

1<sup>1a</sup> After the death of Moses Joshua is summoned to assume the leadership for which he has been already designated Deut 31<sup>14</sup>, 23. The opening verses 1, show the hand of E in the description of Joshua; but it is soon apparent that the narrative of E has been expanded by a member of the great Deuteronomistic school. This expansion may have begun already in 1, as the parallels imply. Steuernagel attributes 1. 10-18 to D<sup>2</sup> and 3-9 to later editing by R<sup>d</sup>. The parallels in 3-9 and 12-18 at once reveal the hand of the homilists of D, 10 11a alone showing the simpler style of E.

2<sup>b</sup> The juxtaposition of the words 'to them, to the children of Israel,' and the absence of the latter from G, may imply that they are an explanatory gloss.

3 Dillm suggests that this clause is an addition; the original passage in Deut 11<sup>24</sup> is spoken by Moses, not Yahweh. But the words of Moses are understood to be of divine source and authority cp Deut 11<sup>25b</sup>.

4 Not in the original passage, and lacking here in G. The term 'Hittites' seems to include the Canaanites; so only in Ezek 16<sup>3</sup> 45 (Dillm).

7<sup>a</sup> In 7. the discourse may have been yet further expanded; 8 in particular seems to develop the allusion to 'the law' in 7, which is itself probably additional. Similar clauses introduced by 'only' will be found in 17<sup>b</sup> 18<sup>b</sup>, where they may be additional.

7<sup>b</sup> Moses is nowhere said to have laid any law on Joshua for his observance; the words are not rendered by G (for the remaining formula cp Deut 24<sup>8</sup>); moreover the following pronoun 'from it' should be feminine, but agrees instead with 'all that Moses commanded thee.' The reference to 'the law' is therefore probably a later touch.

7<sup>c</sup> 8 M. Or, deal wisely.—G = 'prosper' Deut 29<sup>9</sup>.

* The widely different analysis just published by Steuernagel will sufficiently exemplify to the student the difficulty of the process and the various results which it may suggest. In the treatment of the text Steuernagel feels much greater confidence in the relative originality of G, and ascribes therefore a very much more continuous activity to late priestly editors, whose work, however, cannot be otherwise identified by independent characteristics. The preparation of an amended text did not enter into the plan of this work (cp Bennett's Joshua in Haupt's SBOT). The editors, therefore, while citing some of the divergences of G for critical purposes, have not thought it necessary to tabulate all its variations. A few of its omissions have been noticed, where they seemed to indicate the probability of subsequent editorial work on the G text. Such comparisons suffice to demonstrate the general thesis of prolonged scribal treatment; but until G has itself been more carefully reconstructed, it cannot be employed as a final authority for the correction of G; and many delicate critical problems, therefore, can only be imperfectly approached.

<sup>14</sup> Obviously unsuitable to the implied situation where Joshua and the tribes whom he addresses are still on the East side of the Jordan. The words do not occur in §, and seem like a copyist's reminiscence of the same words in Deut 3<sup>20</sup> where they describe the settlement of the rest of Israel in Canaan.

<sup>21</sup> The story of the visit of the spies to Jericho shows clear traces of composite origin, though the resolution of some parts can only be tentative. Duplicate phrases as in <sup>3</sup> 12, 18 suggest that different sources have been combined, and the course of the story makes this practically certain. For the conversation between Rahab and her visitors upon the roof <sup>8</sup>, 12, 14 is suddenly interrupted by the descent of the men through the window <sup>15</sup>, to be resumed <sup>18-21</sup> when they have made their escape from the house. But it is inconceivable that they should have shouted from the foot of the city wall (where the residents in similarly situated houses could have overheard them) a promise <sup>18-20</sup> which involved absolute secrecy cp <sup>14</sup>. The incident in <sup>15</sup>, cannot therefore belong to the narrative in <sup>3</sup>, 12, 14 18-21. But <sup>15</sup>, finds its obvious sequel in <sup>22</sup>., from which it appears that the men were two in number <sup>14a</sup>, and had been dispatched by 'Joshua the son of Nun.' That designation at once connects the narrative with E, while the parallels in <sup>8</sup> 12 14 18-21 are equally decisive for J. Some uncertainty, however, must attach to the details. Steuerneger ascribes the whole story to E (minus the Deuteromic additions) but treats <sup>17-21</sup> as a later extension of the story by E<sup>2</sup>.

other signs of combination of sources are obvious. Two explanations are given concerning the stones 4<sup>6</sup>, and 21... In 31<sup>7b</sup> 41<sup>a</sup> the entire nation has passed over; but the process is repeated in 41<sup>ob</sup>. Literary marks of variety are no less apparent. The affinities of 37 41<sup>a</sup> 21-24 with D are as clear as those of 41<sup>13</sup> 19 with P. It thus becomes probable that the phenomena observable elsewhere are repeated here: the existing text contains elements from all four hands, J E R<sup>d</sup> and P. But in the process of fusion others also have had a share, as the variations of  $\oint$  further indicate. In the following notes an attempt is made to justify the distribution verse by verse. The passages assigned to P show that this source was not employed as the foundation of the narrative, but was worked in afterwards et Ex 14, and cp ante 315 Introd § 5 1.

31<sup>a</sup> The marginal parallels justify the ascription of the first and last clauses to J, but the reference to Shittim points to E in 21. J's story is continued (cp margins) in 5 9.

2 The three days' interval, the officers passing through the midst of the camp and commanding the people, connect this passage with 10<sup>10</sup>. E: and the occurrence of the word 'remove' <sup>3</sup> is a further link with 1<sup>b</sup>.

3 The designation of the ark varies in different passages. Oldest and simplest is 'the ark of Yahweh' 13 41<sup>1b</sup>, or 'the ark' alone 14 17 (implied in the use of the article אֲרוֹן) cp Num 10<sup>33n</sup>. Later than this, and probably traceable to Deuteronomistic influences, is the title 'ark of the covenant' <sup>6</sup> and 11 (where אֲרוֹן הַבְּרִית shows that the title which follows is a later addition), or 'ark of the covenant of Yahweh your God' <sup>3</sup> cp 19 and 1<sup>a</sup>. Lastly P's title 'ark of the testimony' occurs in 41<sup>16</sup>. The priests the Levites' as in 9<sup>go</sup>. E, however, appears to have recognized the Levitical priesthood cp Deut 10<sup>8n</sup>, and probably assigned to it the function of carrying the ark in connexion with the institution of the Tent of Meeting Ex 33<sup>7..</sup>.  $\oint$  expands, 'and our priests and the Levites bearing it.'

5 The instructions to the priests to carry the ark in front of the people seem to be the sequel of <sup>3</sup>. As the procession sets out (followed by the people) the subsequent summons to the Israelites in 9 10<sup>a</sup> 11 must be ascribed to J. E's narrative is continued in 14.

7 Bennett in Haupt's SBOT proposes to insert 41<sup>b-3</sup> at this point in E.

8<sup>a</sup> As the priests have received their instructions to cross over before the people and have already started <sup>6</sup>, the fresh command to stand in the river (while the people cross) must be drawn from another source. The initial formula יֵאָדָה הַזֶּה finds its only parallel in Ex 27<sup>20</sup>; the term 'ark of the covenant' may be a harmonist's substitute for 'testimony' which has survived in 41<sup>10</sup> (where the priests come out last after the tribes have marched over). The verse is therefore ascribed to P cp 1<sup>5</sup> and 4<sup>10</sup>.

8<sup>b</sup>  $\oint$  simply 'ye shall stand': 'in' ct 4<sup>9</sup>. 'in the midst of.'

311 That this phrase is not connected with 'the covenant' is shown by the article רַבִּירָה. Its use in later prophecy suggests that it is here an editorial addition or possibly an incorporation from P. Steuern, however, supposes the original to be 'the ark of Yahweh Lord of the whole earth' as in 13 D<sup>2</sup>.

12 In its present position this verse leads to nothing, so that it can hardly be in its right place. Most critics give it to E cp 4<sup>1b</sup> 2<sup>4</sup>. But if P had a story of the stones cp 4<sup>7b</sup> 20, this might have belonged to it. The formula 'for every tribe a man' employs ל as in Num 13<sup>2</sup>; whereas 4<sup>2</sup> has כן. On the other hand שָׁנָה (for 'tribe') only occurs in P<sup>s</sup> e.g. 22<sup>9</sup> Num (32<sup>33</sup>) 36<sup>3</sup>.

13 The main part of this verse seems due to J (cp 'ark of Yahweh' 4<sup>11</sup>). But it has apparently taken up into itself a phrase or two from the corresponding declaration in P. There can be little doubt that J represented the waters of the Jordan as 'cut off' cp 4<sup>7a</sup>. But the description that follows is open to challenge. G reads simply 'and the waters which come down shall stand.' The peculiar term 'from above' occurs elsewhere only in P cp P169<sup>a</sup>, and seems introduced from 16; 'heap' also may have been incorporated from 16, as a reminiscence of Ex 15<sup>8</sup>.

14 The sequel of this introduction seems to be found in 4<sup>1b</sup>.

15 This passage is closely connected with 8. The description of the division of the river is much more elaborate than J's, and the reference in 16 to the two bodies of water—the mass of the stream flowing down from the North suddenly arrested—the rest draining away South into the Dead Sea,—shows how carefully the whole situation has been thought out. The distance at which the waters are stopped, provides for the interval specified in 4; the fullness of the stream heightens the wonder, and reminds the reader that it is springtime when the river is swollen; and the allusion to the harvest prepares for the pass-over-celebration in 5<sup>10</sup>. These circumstances together with the phraseological indications seem to justify the ascription to P. The difficulty that the ark is carried on this occasion by priests instead of Levites Num 3<sup>31</sup> 4<sup>16</sup>, may be met by the considerations (1) that this was a fixed element in the story (cp the Levitical treatment of 1 Kings 8<sup>1-5</sup>, Introd i 82), and (2) that the occasion demanded a higher form of sacerdotal service.

16a RV inserts that to connect this verse with 14.

16b The phrase 'rose up in one heap,' introduced without any connecting particle, may be a touch from an editorial hand.

16e The word נָחַם may have crept in later, cp its use in 17<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>1a</sup>.

16f G stood (עָמַד) (עָמַד). This reference to the march shows that 4<sup>10b</sup> belongs to another document.

17a G proves that the words 'of the covenant of Yahweh' have been added. The passage seems to carry on the story of 13 cp 'midst of Jordan' 4<sup>3b</sup> 8<sup>b</sup>, not used in the fragments assigned to P. The word 'firm' stands at the end of the sentence in G, and is wanting in G. It may be an addition.

4<sup>1b</sup> Cp 3<sup>14</sup>. The narrative of the memorial stones is extraordinarily confused. The conflict between 9 and 8 has been already noted cp 3<sup>14</sup>. In 1<sup>b</sup> 2 there seems to be a preparation for 4. cp 3<sup>12</sup>. The narrative form of 1<sup>b</sup> resembles that of 3<sup>9</sup>; and 'command ... saying' 3<sup>a</sup> is parallel to 3<sup>11</sup> E. But the plural in the words of Yahweh to Joshua is perplexing? Whom does Yahweh address? ③ reads 'thou.'

3<sup>b</sup> The instructions in 3 do not agree with those in 5; they find their fulfilment in 8<sup>b</sup>. The contrast with 5 points to J, and this is confirmed by the occurrence of J's word 'lodge.' Wellhausen conjectured that in its original form this was addressed to the people generally, so that the number of stones was not limited to twelve. The object of the story apparently is to account for the ancient stone-circle known as 'the Gilgal,' which doubtless contained more than twelve stones. The reference to the 'place where the priests' feet stood firm' seems borrowed from 9, and is unrepresented in ③. ⑤ 'standing-place of the priests' feet' is a different word from 'stood' 3<sup>13</sup> 17<sup>a</sup>, and occurs only here in Hex. 3<sup>b</sup> is continued in 6 which finds a strong J parallel in Ex 13<sup>14</sup>. 'Take up' 3<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>b</sup> (שא) is different from ירים in 5.

7<sup>b</sup> The stylistic affinities of 7<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>a</sup> plead strongly for P. If this be admitted, it is clear that P also had an account of the stones. There do not seem to be any traces of it in 1<sup>b</sup>-7<sup>a</sup>: but cp 3<sup>12</sup> 4<sup>20</sup>.

8<sup>b</sup> Another doubtful passage apparently founded on 5<sup>b</sup>: ③ 'as Yahweh commanded Joshua when the children of Israel were clean passed over.' The rest of the verse carries out 3<sup>b</sup>, and the record of the transit of the people and the priests is completed in 10<sup>b</sup> (where 'hasted' makes decidedly for J) and 11<sup>b</sup>.

9 The incongruity of this passage with the adjacent narrative has been already noted 3<sup>14</sup>. It expressly states that the stones were set up in the middle of the river and remained there, whereas 3 and 5 both ordain that they shall be taken up out of the river-bed, 3 adding that they shall be deposited on the other side, and 5 implying a similar purpose in the instruction to the twelve men to lift the stones on to their shoulders, obviously to carry them away. The phraseological indications are in favour of D. Steuern, having already assigned 3<sup>b</sup> 8 to D<sup>2</sup>, is obliged to attribute 9 to R<sup>d</sup> with the addition of ('other'), a result which does not seem critically satisfactory.

<sup>410</sup> Not in G; after the preceding clause the words seem superfluous. They may be due to an annotator anxious to vindicate the foresight of Moses in making all necessary arrangements beforehand; or they may have a more general significance for the picture of Joshua's fidelity to Mosaic ordinance cp 11<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>13</sup> This passage seems to be introduced from P (cp the margins), but it was noted by Kuen (Hex 104) that the figure is inconsistent with the fighting-strength assigned to the two and a half tribes in Num 26. It might be supposed that some remained behind to protect the women and children, but Num 32<sup>21</sup> expressly required 'every armed man' of the tribes settling in the East to cross the Jordan. The incongruity is probably due to the secondary character of the later sections of P. Steuern, an addition to D<sup>2</sup>.

The account of the circumcision of the people <sup>2-9</sup> has been enriched with a Deuteronomical addition by R<sup>d</sup> in <sup>4-8</sup>, as the parallels cited in the margins prove. The original narrative is contained in <sup>2, 9</sup>, and seems best referred to J by analogy with Ex <sup>425</sup> (which does not at all necessarily imply that J conceived circumcision to have been universal in Egypt). According to this story the name of the great stone circle called 'the Gilgal' is explained as 'rolling.' What was 'rolled' away? 'The reproach of Egypt.' In connexion with a story of circumcision the phrase can only imply that Joshua now performed a rite which the Israelites had neglected in Egypt, so that they incurred the scorn of their circumcised masters, the Egyptians. The editor, however, seeks to avoid this interpretation by the explanation that it was only necessary for the new generation which had arisen since the Exodus <sup>57</sup>. The opening formula 'at that time' (occurring only in this position Deut 10<sup>18*</sup>) seems due to R<sup>d</sup>, and so probably are the references to previous circumcision, to harmonize with <sup>5</sup>, as though there had been a national practice in Egypt.

13 This narrative seems to be the beginning of J's account of the divine commission to Joshua, parallel with that to Moses Ex 3<sup>5</sup>. . . But in its present form it must have been abbreviated, as the vision leads to nothing. No instructions are given to him; the attempt to establish an immediate connexion with 6<sup>2</sup>. . . cannot be regarded as successful, though the place of the incident in JE suggests that it was intended to prepare the way for the story of the capture of Jericho. Kuenen, assuming that the phrase 'Yahweh's host' represented a late conception, regarded this as one of the secondary sections of J. But the precise words do not occur elsewhere (cp Ps 103<sup>21</sup> 148<sup>2</sup>); while parallels of idea may be found in Gen 32<sup>2</sup> and 1 Kings 22<sup>10</sup>.

14 M Or, prince.—Cp JE191.

6<sup>1a</sup> This verse seems to break the connexion between 5<sup>15</sup> and 6<sup>2</sup>: it bears no clear marks of editorial composition, and is therefore conjecturally ascribed to E.

trumpets of rams' horns, and the troops march in front and rear. The signal is to be given, when the city has been compassed seven times, by a long blast; when the shout rises at the sound, the walls will fall 5<sup>20b</sup>. In both stories the number seven is firmly lodged; but whereas one distributes the process over seven successive days 14 15a, the other apparently places the seven marches on the same day. The result is that after single circuits on six separate days, seven circuits are finally made on the seventh, or thirteen altogether, which obviously breaks up the symmetry of the narrators' intentions. The additions to the text which seem due to this arrangement in 4<sup>15</sup> are indicated by smaller type. Other modifications seem traceable to the compiler, who anticipates the trumpet-signal for the shout of faith by describing the priests as blowing their horns continuously upon the route 8. 13, thus depriving the final blast of its significance. In assigning the two stories to their respective sources, the linguistic evidences will be found to yield some delicate confirmations. Thus in 6 the description of Joshua points to E, and this is supported by the parallel to the trumpet Ex 19<sup>13</sup>, and the instructions to the priests which resemble those before the passage of the Jordan 3<sup>6</sup> independently attributed to E. Similarly 'lodged' 11 and 'rose early' 12 15 make for J. The text of 5 has been in many passages so much abbreviated, that it is of little use for comparison. The translators have apparently sought to evade difficulties by omissions. Steuern, on the other hand, thinks that 5 represents a more original text, and distributes the story between D<sup>2</sup> E and R<sup>p</sup>. Of the latter, however, no definite traces seem recoverable before the annotations in 25b 24b.

2b R<sup>d</sup> may have been at work here cp D<sup>99</sup>, and the margins. In 3 5 reads thou as in the latter clause of the verse. Dillm supposes that 'going about the city once' cp 11 and 'thus shalt thou do six days' are additions designed to emphasize the contrast with 4. But whatever may be the case with the first

25 So in 17 only; G spies. The clause is probably editorial, as in 17.

71 An introduction to the story of Achan from the hand of R<sup>p</sup>. The affinities of the passage with P are shown by the terms 'trespass' and 'tribe' as well as by the genealogy of Achan. The use of the ancient phrase 'the anger of Yahweh was kindled' finds a parallel in P<sup>a</sup> Num 32<sup>10</sup> 13 cp JE<sup>233</sup>. It may possibly signify that this verse is based on an older statement of J.

2a No clear signs of combination of separate sources can be detected in this narrative. The clauses in 3 'let not all the people go up' and 'make not all the people toil thither' might be regarded as doublets if other conflicting statements could be discovered: but in the absence of substantial divergence this view receives no support. The main story shows most affinity with J cp the margins, the phrases 'men of Ai' 4 'oh Lord' 11 'wherefore' 10 'sanctify yourselves' 'thus saith Yahweh' 13, the unusual term for 'man' 14, even the detail 'ran' 22, all pointing to J's manner of narration. But it has been treated editorially both by R<sup>d</sup> and R<sup>p</sup>. Traces of R<sup>d</sup> will probably be found in 5b 7b 11 12b 15b 25; while the hand of R<sup>p</sup> may be seen in 1 18, 24. The aggregation in 11 where יָרַח 'and also' recurs five times over at the beginning of successive clauses, is probably the result of this kind of expansion. Steuern agrees that the story is mainly from one source, but identifies it with E.

2b (G) omits 'from Jericho' 'Beth-aven on the east side of' and 'spake unto them' 'go up and'; and Steuern strikes them all out of the text. The first may quite possibly be a late addition; on the second cp 20; the third seems required for the following 'saying'; and the fourth appears guaranteed by the sequel 'went up and spied.'

2c (G) Bethel, the following words of 5 being absent. Wellhausen, therefore, suggested that a late scribe had adopted the language of prophetic condemnation Amos 5<sup>6</sup> Hos 4<sup>15</sup> al, and converted Beth-El, 'house of God,' into Beth-Aven, 'house of nought.' Still later, another scribe, not perceiving the significance of the name, added the geographical description cp Gen 12<sup>8</sup>. But a place called Beth-aven seems to be well established 18<sup>12</sup> 1 Sam 13<sup>6</sup> 14<sup>23</sup>. Cp Driver, Joel and Amos 177; Buhl, Geographie des alten Palästina (1896) 174, who rejects Schlatter's attempt to identify Beth-aven everywhere with Bethel. Steuern, on the other hand, denies its existence.

In 3-9 Joshua dispatches a force of thirty thousand men by night, who are instructed to lie in ambush on the west side, between Ai and Bethel. There, also, at a subsequent stage in the story 12, he posts five thousand men, although thirty thousand are already on the spot. These statements must be regarded as independent versions of the same transaction, though the disproportion in the numbers is striking. The first seems to belong to a narrative related by numerous parallels with previous passages assigned to J; the second is therefore provisionally ascribed to E. Further evidence of combination of two sources may be found in the sequel. In one account the events follow the course indicated in 5-7; in another, Joshua stretches out his javelin and continues to hold it extended until the inhabitants of the city have been devoted 18 26. The analogy of this incident with the significance of the outstretched hand of Moses Ex 6<sup>22</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> 11 wielding the rod, confirms the view that the elements which are incongruous with J may be attributed to E. One or two slight stylistic indications arise out of this partition, thus cp 'men of Ai' 20, with 'inhabitants of Ai' 24 26, and their parallels elsewhere. The whole story has received numerous additional touches from R<sup>4</sup>, whose hand has been active from end to end. Various curtailments in (5) are probably due to the desire to escape discrepancies by omission.

<sup>17</sup> Wanting in (5). As the ambush lay between Ai and Beth-el according to both stories, it is not easy to see how the men of Beth-el could have joined in the pursuit. It is hardly likely, therefore, that these words belong to a narrative of joint attack on Ai and Beth-el, of which nothing is said elsewhere. They seem due rather to awkward editorial supplementation.

<sup>30</sup> This section is clearly connected with Deut 27<sup>1-8</sup> 12., but the precise nature of the connexion cannot be exactly determined. That passage was believed to embody an early instruction of E. The erection of such an altar would not after all be inconsistent with the fundamental principle of the unity of the sanctuary, as the people had not yet taken possession of their inheritance, and the place which Yahweh would choose for his worship was not yet selected. The original command in E, however, probably pointed to some special sanctuary at Shechem. Does this story similarly rest on E's account of its fulfilment? The corresponding element would then be disengaged as follows:—Then Joshua built an altar to Yahweh in Mount Ebal, an altar of unhewn stones upon which no man had lift up any iron: and they offered (5 he offered) thereon burnt offerings to Yahweh, and sacrificed peace offerings.' Many critics suppose that such an original nucleus may be thus recovered. Other phenomena, however, rather point in the direction of the derivation of the whole narrative (with modifications) from Deut 27. If the E passage were original, it would probably be found in its actual place in the series of E's traditions. But this could hardly be its present position. It is not obvious how Israel could have performed such a ceremony at the gates of Shechem without having conquered Central Canaan, but of such a conquest no further record remains, and the narrative in 10 shows that it had not yet taken place. 5 places <sup>30-35</sup> after 9<sup>1</sup>: is this a deliberate transposition, or a sign of the late addition of this passage which found insertion at different points in different texts? The former seems on the whole more probable in view (1) of the indications of accommodation in 5 elsewhere, and (2) of the fact that the narrative makes no reference to Deut 27<sup>14-26</sup>, presumably because that interpretation of the curse was not then known. The historical difficulty is not overcome by 5's arrangement, which locates the scene in face of a great military coalition against the Israelites: other critics have accordingly suggested that it once marked the close of the whole conquest, and followed 11<sup>23</sup>. Dillm conjectured that JE once contained a fuller account of the campaign in Middle Canaan, the story of the advance of Joshua from Ai to Shechem having been curtailed cp Kittel, Hist i 289: E then proceeded to relate the fulfilment of the instructions in Deut 27<sup>5</sup>, and on that nucleus the present narrative is based in correspondence with the expanded form in Deut. The text, however, does not actually correspond to Deut 27<sup>1-8</sup>. The writer has apparently wished to simplify the transaction, or has misunderstood the original instruction. The plastered stones Deut 27<sup>2-4</sup> are never mentioned, and the law is apparently inscribed on the unhewn blocks of the altar. It is so difficult to believe that the writer actually meant this, that it seems almost needful to suppose some accidental omission. But the rest of the story also shows considerable departures from its predecessor. The two groups into which the nation is divided, do not stand on the mountains

15<sup>c</sup> At this point R introduces a fragment where the terms of P's organization are unmistakable cp 17-21. It is noticeable that this fragment of P follows the story of J. There is no allusion to Joshua or Eleazar: 'the princes' take the negotiations into their own hands like the 'men of Israel' 6<sup>b</sup> 7 cp 14, and the congregation murmurs against their leadership as in Num 14<sup>2</sup> Ex 16<sup>2</sup> against Moses and Aaron.

<sup>27</sup> The words 'unto this day &c' sound extremely abrupt, and are in fact incompatible with the first part of the verse, as Joshua had nothing to do with the Gibeonites' functions as temple-servants in Jerusalem. Steuern adopts the additional clause of G, 'so the Gibeonites became hewers of wood and drawers of water for the altar of Yahweh' unto this day &c.

<sup>101a</sup> The narrative of the battle with the five kings again offers difficult problems. Some (eg Addis, Hex i 219<sup>1</sup>) regard it as substantially unitary. It has also, however, been frequently divided into two parts at <sup>15</sup>; the main story 1-11 <sup>15</sup> being then assigned to E, with a supplement <sup>16-27</sup> derived from J (so Albers, Budde, and Kittel, Hist i 304<sup>4</sup> 5). The ascription of <sup>16-27</sup> to J has much in its favour cp <sup>16a</sup>. But if this be accepted, it is plain that the story of the flight presupposes a prior narrative of a defeat. A careful examination of 1-11 seems to reveal traces of amalgamation. In <sup>1b</sup> 4b occur allusions to the peace made by the inhabitants of Gibeon cp <sup>93</sup> 10a, which may be referred by the results in g to E. The presence of E elements is further confirmed by reference to the kings of the Amorites 'inhabitants' of the hill-country <sup>6</sup>. These are specified as five <sup>5a</sup>, but the localities immediately named do not correspond to the designation, and in <sup>16-27</sup> the name Amorite does not occur. It may be conjectured, accordingly, that the enumeration in <sup>5b</sup> 23 is not from the same hand as <sup>6d</sup>; and this note of distinction is emphasized by the different words for 'gathered' in <sup>5b</sup> and <sup>6b</sup> (הקם and נאס). Further doublets may be remarked in 'inhabitants of Gibeon' <sup>1b</sup> and 'men of Gibeon' <sup>6a</sup> cp <sup>820</sup> 24, 'save us' and 'help us' <sup>6</sup>, 'discomfited' and 'smote them with a great smiting' <sup>10</sup>, 'the ascent of Beth-horon' <sup>10</sup> and 'the descent' <sup>11</sup>.

These last verses indeed seem to contain separate accounts of the overthrow of the allies. In one story the king of Jerusalem and his four royal comrades are defeated at Gibeon, and pursued to Makkedah, where they are dragged from their hiding-place and executed: in the other, five Amorite kings from the hill country are discomfited at Gibeon; during their flight to Azekah their troops are overpowered by a great hail-storm, the kings presumably perishing in the rout. The combined narrative has been handled by R<sup>d</sup> 1b 8 12 25, but the Priestly Redactor seems to have left it untouched.

14 The opening of 14 shows no parallel with D, but the phrase 'hearken to the voice' is common to D and JE 58<sup>a</sup> and 58<sup>b</sup>; and while J uses the expression 'fight' of Yahweh Ex 14<sup>20</sup>, it is frequent in D cp below 42 23<sup>10</sup> Deut 13<sup>30</sup> 32<sup>2</sup> 20<sup>4</sup>. The hand of R<sup>d</sup>, therefore, may have been at work here.

15 This verse is identical with 43 and may have been inserted here by accidental anticipation. 5 does not contain it. Other critics regard it as marking a close of a section: thus Dillm connects it with 12-14 due to R<sup>d</sup> in its present form, while Albers and Kittel attach it to 1-11.

10<sup>27</sup> The formula 'this self-same day' is elsewhere peculiar to P cp 5<sup>11</sup> and 13<sup>8</sup>. Other signs of R<sup>d</sup> may be seen in 20<sup>b</sup> and probably in 28 30 35 37 39.

28<sup>a</sup> The generalized summary of the conquest of Southern Canaan appears to owe its present form and position to R<sup>d</sup>. What earlier material may lie beneath it cannot now be determined. But it is probable that it is founded on older detail. The capture of Makkedah <sup>28</sup> is the natural sequel of the previous story: and the aid brought by the king of Gezer to Lachish <sup>33</sup> breaks the monotonous uniformity of the record. But in <sup>37</sup> the king of Hebron, already executed at Makkedah, perishes a second time. Is this accidental oversight, or does it represent a different tradition? On the other hand, while Hebron, Lachish and Eglon are mentioned, nothing is said of Jerusalem and Jarmuth. On the whole it does not seem possible to sift out the data which R<sup>d</sup> may have derived from prior sources: and the passage is therefore ascribed entire to the Deuteronomist redaction. On touches by R<sup>p</sup> cp 28<sup>cn</sup>. For another account of the capture of Hebron and Debir cp 14<sup>13-19</sup>.

28<sup>c</sup> The use of the term 'soul' for 'person' is a recognized

11<sup>1</sup> The account of the overthrow of the confederation led by Jabin king of Hazor at the waters of Merom, seems due to the hand which recorded the similar disaster to the kings allied with Adoni-zedek of Jerusalem 10<sup>1</sup> 3 &c: see in particular the parallels to 11<sup>1</sup> 4 7. It is therefore assigned to J, and further parallels in 4<sup>6</sup> confirm the ascription. But it has been expanded by R<sup>d</sup>, whose additions may be seen in 2. 10. . . , possibly in 6, and more clearly in 8.

* As G omits 'and the king thereof' in 28 and 37, Steuernagel conjectures that similar omissions in the MT of 32 35 are due to corresponding imperfect attempts to bring the different narratives into accord.

11<sup>2</sup> M Or, Naphoth Dor.

13<sup>1</sup> The second half of Joshua relates the allotment of the newly conquered land, chiefly on the basis of P. But at the outset 13<sup>1-7</sup> a difficulty occurs. The implication of 1 is that the conquest is as yet far from complete. This verse cannot therefore belong to the expansions of R<sup>d</sup> which are founded on the view that the whole land was subdued by Joshua: it must be derived from an older source, and literary parallels point to J. But in 2-6 R<sup>d</sup> explains the previous statement in a quite different sense as applying to remote outlying regions in the south and north. Yet again in 7 these distant patches are to be distributed among the nine and a half tribes which settle west of the Jordan. Plainly 2-6 is not really related to 1 and 7, for the land to be divided in 7 is not that described in 2-6. Kuenen accordingly (Hex 135) suggested that 1 was originally connected with 18<sup>2</sup>, and referred to the land which had still to be conquered when Judah and Joseph (Judges 12. 22.) had secured their positions. In some fragments still preserved in Joshua and generally ascribed to J cp 13<sup>n</sup>, various places are enumerated which the Israelites failed to reduce, but they are quite different from those named in 2-6. R<sup>d</sup> in transferring 1 and 7 from their context failed to bring them into harmony with the situation as he conceived it, though he probably raised the number of seven tribes up to nine and a half.

<sup>7</sup> 'This land' obviously means the land of Canaan in the broad sense, not the separate and distant localities named in 2-6. The verses, therefore, are discontinuous. But as J does not recognize the division of the tribe of Manasseh, and apparently sets the Manassite colonization of Gilead at a later date cp Num 32<sup>9</sup>; the numerical reference must be an addition.

<sup>15</sup> At this point another description of the territory allotted to the Trans-jordanic tribes is introduced. Its fresh term for 'tribe,' its recurring formulae 15<sup>23</sup>. 28. 31., and its sequel in 14<sup>1-5</sup>, all connect it unmistakably with P. Notice the 'children of Reuben' 15<sup>1</sup>, 'children of Gad' 24<sup>1</sup>, for the 'Reubenites and Gadites' of 8. (S) introduces the section 15-32 by a formal title 'And this is the division which Moses divided to the children of Israel in the plains of Moab beyond the Jordan at Jericho' cp 32, which has been accepted as original by Hollenberg, Kuenen, Dillm, Bennett, Addis, Steuern., Oettli (on the other hand) suspecting it to be derived from 32. It is true that the term καταμερίσμός does not occur again, (S) having different renderings in 14<sup>1</sup> 19<sup>51</sup>; but as καταμερίσσω is used in Lev 25<sup>46</sup> Num 32<sup>18</sup> 34<sup>9</sup> Deut 19<sup>8</sup> (מַרְיָא Pi Hiph Hithpa) (S) may represent a formula like that in 19<sup>51</sup>, 'these are the inheritances which Moses distributed for inheritance.'

<sup>29</sup> Difficulties again present themselves in <sup>29-31</sup>. The opening statement 'and Moses gave unto the half tribe of Manasseh' is obviously incomplete; moreover 'tribe' is D's word שבט <sup>14</sup> in contrast to P's מטה in the next clause. G however reads as in <sup>15</sup> 24 'and Moses gave unto the half tribe of Manasseh according to their families,' which has the merit of conformity. In <sup>31</sup> 'half Gilead' is assigned to Eastern Manasseh, though in <sup>25</sup> all the cities of Gilead have been given to Gad. The introduction of the 'children of Machir' <sup>31</sup> is unexpected. According to P Num 26<sup>29</sup>, Manasseh contained but one group of families, descended from Manasseh's only son Machir. If Manasseh was divided, therefore, half the children of Machir would be on each side of the Jordan: hence the somewhat clumsy insertion in <sup>31b</sup> which G makes still clumsier. Cp Num 32<sup>39</sup>, Deut 3<sup>15</sup>. The whole passage is probably the result of an effort to harmonize various data, and may be a late insertion (so Bennett).

<sup>14</sup> At this point the compiler introduces P's description of the distribution of the land of Canaan among the nine and a half tribes. It is natural to infer from the opening and close of the narrative <sup>14</sup> 1-5 and <sup>19</sup> 51 that the whole distribution was made by the same persons at the same time and place, viz before the tent of meeting in Shiloh. Such a simultaneous division also appears to be contemplated in Num 34<sup>13-29</sup>, where ten 'princes' (instead of 'heads of fathers' houses') are appointed to assist Eleazar and Joshua. But in the present arrangement Judah Ephraim and Western Manasseh receive their lots first, apparently in Gilgal <sup>14</sup> 6, and not till <sup>18</sup> 1 does the whole congregation assemble at Shiloh, where the lots are drawn for the remaining seven tribes. But the analysis shows that <sup>18</sup> 1 does not belong to its present sequel <sup>2-10</sup>; the gathering of the entire nation at Shiloh implies that all the western tribes are engaged in a common act; and the dislocation of the division into two groups spoils the symmetry of P's whole process. Dillmann therefore (followed cautiously by Driver) concedes Wellhausen's plea that <sup>14</sup> 1-5 was originally preceded by <sup>18</sup> 1 which stood as the introduction to P's account of the settlement. The reason for its transposition is not hard to divine. The older traditions represented the children of Judah and the house of Joseph as taking up their positions first by conquest. In combining these with the system of distribution by lot P's ideal scheme is broken in two, and his Shiloh scene is transferred to the place which it occupied in the story of JE after Judah Ephraim and Western Manasseh have already obtained their portions.

<sup>6</sup> This passage is obviously not continuous with <sup>1-5</sup>; the scene is in Gilgal instead of Shiloh cp <sup>18</sup> 1; Joshua acts alone instead of taking the second place after Eleazar; and Caleb does not as in P Num 13<sup>6</sup> belong to Judah; he is not an Israelite at all, but a Kenizzite. The address of Caleb to Joshua is plainly founded on the narrative in Num 13-14, but the P elements of that story are ignored; from <sup>7</sup> it is clear that Caleb acted alone without any aid from Joshua cp Num 13<sup>30</sup> ct Num 14<sup>6</sup>. The phraseology shows points of contact with both J<sup>a</sup> or RJ<sup>a</sup> ('wholly followed' <sup>8</sup>, 'from the time that' <sup>10</sup> <sup>36</sup>) and E (<sup>2</sup> 'Moses the man of God' 'concerning' <sup>6</sup>, 'brought word again' <sup>7</sup>). But the whole representation has been recast under the influence of Deut <sup>12</sup> 1. (cp 'spy out' <sup>7</sup>, 'made the heart of the people melt' 'Yahweh my God' <sup>8</sup>, 'thy foot hath trodden' <sup>9</sup>, 'Anakim' 'great and fenced' 'drive them out' <sup>12</sup>). The story, however, assumes that Hebron is not yet captured <sup>10</sup> 36, nor the Anakim expelled <sup>11</sup> 21. Another version is found in <sup>15</sup> 13. In <sup>6</sup> an editorial attempt has been made to harmonize Caleb's language with P by inserting 'and concerning thee.'

<sup>26</sup> A difficulty arises in this list because it contains thirty-six cities, whereas according to <sup>32</sup> it should not name more than twenty-nine. The solution has been found by Kayser and Hollenberg. In <sup>28</sup> G reads 'her daughters' בנותיה for 'Biziothiah' בִּזְיוֹתִיָּה. But this is not one of P's expressions, and therefore suggests some manipulation of the text. Now the term occurs in a list in Nehemiah 11<sup>26</sup>, enumerating 'Jeshua and Moladah and Beth-pelet, Hazar-shual and Beer-sheba and her daughters.' These names, therefore (Jeshua being probably represented by Shema), are supposed to have been introduced into the text by a later scribe: and six of the superfluous seven are thus identified. Beer-sheba, Moladah, and Hazar-shual are reckoned in 10<sup>2</sup> to Simeon.—Steuern, however, thinks some of the names in Neh 11<sup>26</sup>, introduced from this passage, and obtains the reduced number by comparing the varying omissions in different codices of G.

<sup>161</sup> The account of the settlement of the house of Joseph in 16-17 is plainly composite, but its constituents are very curiously combined. After the elaborate survey of the inheritance of Judah at the hand of P, it is natural to look for a similar delineation of the lots of Ephraim and Manasseh. Elements of P are to be found by common consent in 16<sup>4-8</sup> and 17<sup>1-10</sup>, but the scale of description is much more contracted, and no lists of cities are appended resembling that in 15<sup>20-62</sup> cp 18<sup>21</sup>. 10<sup>2</sup>. &c. If P ever contained such enumerations they have been removed by the Compiler, who has not here as in other cases 18<sup>11-10</sup> adopted large and continuous sections from this source. When the remaining passages are examined, some of them such as 16<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>11-13</sup> seem at once assignable to the group indicated in 13<sup>13N</sup>. What is the source of the rest? In many small matters P reveals its dependence on J just as D does on E: and it may be regarded as probable that if some of the material which cannot be ascribed to P be identified with J, the rest also may be attributed to that source. Thus in 16<sup>1-3</sup> the detail of the border of Ephraim is quite different from that in 6-7 cp 17<sup>1-9</sup>. The Editor has preserved two independent versions side by side. As the passage immediately preceding 15<sup>63</sup> belongs to J as well as the next fragment distinguishable from P in 16<sup>10</sup>, it is natural to regard 1-3 as an extract from the same source. Names similar in form to the Archite and Japhletite will be found in J Gen 10<sup>16-18</sup> 15<sup>19-21</sup>. It is in harmony with another passage assigned to J 17<sup>14-18</sup> that the 'house of Joseph' has only one lot cp 18<sup>5</sup>, whereas P distinguishes Ephraim and Manasseh, describing each separately 5-8 17<sup>1</sup>. (in <sup>5</sup> Manasseh is named first as the firstborn 14<sup>4</sup> et Gen 48<sup>5</sup>). Steuern, however, assigns 1-3 to P as the statement of the common south boundary of both tribes: the opening of <sup>1</sup> he restores thus 'And the lot came out for the children of Joseph [cp 10<sup>1</sup> 17<sup>24</sup> 32 40]. Their border began from the Jordan' &c. This ascription leads him to expel incongruous matter in <sup>5</sup>, as later repetition.

<sup>10</sup> (G) omits this clause, but adds a reference to 1 Kings 9<sup>16</sup>. 17<sup>1a</sup> The style of P is plain in <sup>1a</sup> 3, 7 <sup>9ac</sup> and probably <sup>10</sup>. But the other passages do not seem mutually coherent. In <sup>1b</sup> Machir is called the firstborn of Manasseh, while <sup>2</sup> mentions six more sons. Yet P designates Machir as Manasseh's only son Num 26<sup>29</sup>. He is then described by the curious title 'father of the Gilead' (i.e. the district) as having occupied it cp Num 32<sup>39</sup> J, and he is called 'a man of war' 10<sup>24</sup> J, 5<sup>6</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> &c D, not used by P. After J, Bashan also is allotted to him cp Deut 3<sup>13</sup> Josh 13<sup>12</sup> 30, as here. In <sup>2</sup> a fresh beginning is made for the rest of the children of Manasseh who are contrasted as male with the daughters of Zelophehad in <sup>3</sup>. These six are identical in all but one name with the six sons of Gilead in Num 26<sup>30-32</sup>.

Their insertion here seems due to the desire to provide Manasseh with a genealogy which would enable his tribe to hold land on both sides of the Jordan, the enumeration in Num 26<sup>30</sup>... being preoccupied for the Eastern settlement. The familiarity of the writer with P's style may be seen in the phrases 'the rest' cp 6 21<sup>5</sup> 20 26 34 40 (the ptc <sup>נותר</sup> twenty-two times altogether in P against once in JE Gen 30<sup>30</sup>), 'according to their families,' 'these were the male children' &c.

<sup>11c</sup> This clause is absent from the parallel passage Judg 12<sup>8</sup>, and is also absent from G (together with the Taanach clause). It seems to be due to the previous mention of Dor, Ender being 'about twenty-five miles east of Dor' (Bennett).

<sup>14</sup> The source of 14-18 has been much discussed, and the literary question is here especially closely involved with the historical. At the outset it is clear that the Joseph-tribes are regarded as still undivided ('why hast thou given me') and as having only one lot. In 17 they are designated as the 'house of Joseph,' and Dillm accordingly proposed to read 'house' for 'sons' in 14a. From this Budde (ZATW vii 122-), and Richter and Sam 32- argued that the passage originally represented a stage in the tribal history when Ephraim and Manasseh were still united, and no Manassite clans had yet occupied Gilead. Pointing out that in 16 'the forest' is discriminated from Ephraim's territory, and that in 18 'a hill country' (5) does not contain 'the' is promised them, Budde suggested that the name Gilead had originally stood there, and this is accepted by Kittel, Hist i 265. In that case it would seem most natural to regard the passage as one document. But Kittel, while inserting Gilead in 16 and 18, follows Dillm in attributing 14, to E and 16-18 to J, finding a new beginning in 16; and he affirms that 'such peculiarities of form as prove J's authorship are only to be found in 16... Hist i 266<sup>4</sup>. But the divine blessing in 14 is paralleled only in J cp 36<sup>10</sup>; the term 'great people' 14, 17 which Dillm claims for E is found 11<sup>4</sup> in J; 'hitherto' 14 cp Ex 7<sup>16</sup> J. In 15 the vbs 'cut down' 'is too narrow' are unique instances of their respective meanings, the second occurring in another sense 10<sup>13</sup>

('hasted') J cp Gen 19<sup>15</sup> Ex 5<sup>13*</sup>. There seems no need, therefore, to refuse the whole passage to J, though it is difficult to decide how much is now due to editorial handiwork cp Budde's textual corrections in Richt-Sam 36. The fivefold 5 in 18 can hardly be original; and if the view of Budde and Kittel be correct (it is adopted by Addis and Bennett) 18b must be an addition on the transfer of the passage to its present connexion, for the occupation of Gilead would not enable the Eastern settlers to drive out the Canaanites from the Vale of Jezreel. Budde further proposes to insert here Num 32<sup>59</sup> 41, cp 32<sup>59N</sup>. With the exception of various glosses attributed to RP, Steuern gives 11-18 to J.

The description of the method by which the inheritances of the remaining tribes were settled by lot at Shiloh under Joshua's supervision, does not cohere with 1 and 11... The representation of P 14<sup>1</sup> 19<sup>51</sup> puts Eleazar in the front and Joshua in the second place; here Joshua acts with independent initiative; 10a and 19<sup>51</sup> cannot proceed from the same writer. Nöldeke assigned the passage to D, but though the style of R<sup>d</sup> may be traced in 3 (7<sup>10</sup>), the relief in which these passages stand out from their context (at least in 7) shows that they are not really essential to the piece. the authorship in some antecedent of R<sup>d</sup>. This can hardly be J, for the conception of a deputation of twenty-one persons travelling through the country and recording its natural features and its conquered cities does not fit his picture of slow progress amid many obstacles. Nor does it really seem more congruous with the scantier traces of E's view (cp Introd 3 2 ante p 308. It obviously rests upon a theory of the subjugation of the people which was so complete as to permit the perambulation of the land by a small group of tribal representatives apparently without escort. This might be the view of a generalizing editor of the older documents; and the passage is accordingly attributed in its earlier form to R<sup>d</sup> (with Kuenen and Bennett). There are, however, some slight incongruities as between <sup>8a</sup> and <sup>8b</sup>; and certain notable peculiarities of language, which point in the direction of the vocabulary of RP. Such are <sup>4</sup> 'according to' לְפִי, <sup>7</sup> 'priesthood' (never in Deut) and 'beyond Jordan' מֵעַבֵּר יַרְדֵּן (for which D writes בְּיַרְדֵּן or 'ירדן'). There are traces elsewhere of revision by a late hand of this school: has this passage been touched in the same way? The older style is seen in 'arise and walk' <sup>4</sup>, 'house of Joseph' <sup>6</sup>; in other respects the phraseological parallels are mostly with R<sup>d</sup> and D.

<sup>11a</sup> The sequel to the allotment of the seven portions at the sanctuary by Joshua <sup>10a</sup> would naturally be found in a description of the several inheritances. Such a description is indeed provided 18<sup>11-15</sup>. But it is soon apparent that the greater portion of this survey (to state it in the lowest terms) is from the hand of P. The word for 'tribe' <sup>27</sup> at once changes from שָׁבֵט to P's מִשְׁבֵּט cp 10<sup>1</sup> 23, 31 39, 48 51, with other recurring P formulae, 18<sup>11</sup> 20, 23 19<sup>1</sup> 8 10 16, 23, 31, 39, 48 51 (for additional evidence see the margins). But this general ascription is not inconsistent with the incorporation of detail from other and older sources. An ancient fragment of this kind is at once recognized in 19<sup>47</sup>. That an earlier statement lies at the base of <sup>48</sup>, is guaranteed by 24<sup>30</sup>. Dillm (whose results are nearly all adopted by Addis, Hez 1 230-1) finds traces of JE in a large number of passages, including the whole or part of 19<sup>1</sup> 8a 9-10 15 17 24 25 26 27 28 30 32 35-38 40 41 47 49-50. The criteria for this discrimination are not definitely stated; it will be noticed, however, that there is some inequality in the superscriptions. In 18<sup>11</sup> 19<sup>10</sup> the lot 'comes up'; in 19<sup>17</sup> 24 32 40 it 'comes out.' But both uses are found in P; 'came up' Lev 16<sup>9</sup> (RV 'fell'), 'came out' Josh 21<sup>4</sup>. Though uniformity might have been expected, this does not seem a reason for dividing the text. But further, some of the superscriptions are simple 18<sup>11a</sup> 19<sup>10</sup> 24 40, others are curiously duplicated, 19<sup>1</sup> 'for Simeon, for the tribe &c', 17 'for Issachar, for the children of Issachar &c', 32 'for the children of Naphtali' bis (RV in each case inserts 'even'). This duplication, however, is not quite fairly represented in the English order. In 17 5 runs 'for Issachar came out the fourth lot, for the children of Issachar according to their families'; and similarly 32. The last case seems to present no difficulty at all, except the inversion of the order. It is not, however, the manner of P to designate the tribes as single persons. The occurrence of the names Simeon and Issachar, therefore, by themselves, awakens suspicion. It may be due to the incorporation of older material imperfectly welded with P. If these names, then, be from another source, why not much more? There seems no reason why, except the impossibility of distinguishing it. P must have had some kind of scheme on which to base his tribal arrangements. The lists of cities were probably not his own compositions. But in the setting of the present enumeration the materials and the framework seem no longer capable of separation. A question arises, however, about the numerals 19<sup>1</sup> 10 &c. These are now related to the arrangements for the seven tribes 18<sup>2-10</sup>. But P 14<sup>1</sup> regarded all the Western tribes as receiving their inheritances by lot. If 18<sup>11-15</sup> belongs to this scheme, the numerals must have been introduced by the Compiler, for in P's order (where Judah and Joseph 16<sup>4</sup> stood first) Simeon 19<sup>2</sup> would have been fourth. The existing sequence produced by the incorporation of 18<sup>2-10</sup> must therefore be redactional. Dillm, on the other hand, attributes it to JE.—The text is often defective, but where it does not bear on the literary history problems of textual criticism lie outside the scope of this work. (5) appears to curtail much, especially in the superscriptions.

<sup>11c</sup> This clause is sometimes attributed to JE on the ground of tautology with 11a; but even if 'went (came) out' describes the issue of the lot from the urn (Dillm), the material fact of situation between the children of Judah and those of Joseph is new. 'Children of Joseph' cannot be claimed for JE on the strength of 16<sup>1</sup>, when P has it 16<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>9a</sup> Some of the phraseology of this verse is said to recall older sources eg 'line' cp 17<sup>14</sup>, but it also appears in P 17<sup>5</sup>. רר is denied by Dillm to P in the sense of 'too much,' but occurs in Num 16<sup>3</sup> 7. The conclusion is almost certainly P's; for רר without object cp 9<sup>6a</sup>, and for רר with 'inheritance' see 16<sup>9</sup> 17<sup>4ab</sup> 6 10<sup>1</sup> cp 17<sup>9</sup> 21<sup>41</sup> 22<sup>2</sup>. There is therefore no reason of style for refusing the verse to P; and it enhances the explanation in <sup>1</sup> with a new fact. It may, however, be an editorial supplement cp 16<sup>9</sup>.

19<sup>15</sup> Another incongruity, only five cities out of twelve being named. Where are the seven? Dillm supposes that at the time of the editorial compilation many of the northern cities were in ruins, and R troubled himself little about their fate. An accidental omission seems a less cumbersome hypothesis (the junction of <sup>14</sup> and <sup>15</sup> being very imperfect) cp 15<sup>59N</sup>. On the other hand (G) omits the summary, as in 22<sup>30</sup> 35; are these later additions?

<sup>47a</sup> This verse obviously interrupts the sequence of <sup>46</sup> <sup>48</sup> which  $\S$  renders in continuity. On the other hand,  $\S$  follows with a statement partly identical with Judg 1<sup>34</sup>, to which <sup>47</sup> is then attached. On the text cp Dillm and Budde RS 28.; the latter restores the original thus 88 (cp Addis)—'But the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the hill country, for they would not suffer them to come down to the valley, and they made their territory too narrow for them. So the children of Dan went up and fought against Leshem and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it and dwelt therein, and called Leshem Dan, after the name of Dan their father. But the Amorites [originally Canaanites cp Budde, RS 16., and Moore, Judges (ICC) 53] contrived to dwell in Mount Heres and Aijalon and Shaalabim; yet the hand of the house of Joseph prevailed, so that they became tributary.' <sup>49a</sup> The statement that Timnath-serah was given to Joshua evidently rests on a source kindred with 24<sup>30</sup> ie E. But it may be doubted whether <sup>49</sup> is correctly assigned by many critics straight to E. The passage in its present form shows too many parallels with P to refer the whole of it to that collection. Unlike <sup>47</sup> which has been thrust into its place by E, this is a case where the Priestly Compiler has done his own editing.

too firm a place to be dislodged: he is here accordingly permitted to retain the city-lands and its dependent villages <sup>12</sup>, though the 'pasture lands' and the city itself are handed over to the priests. The precise determination of the editorial words is uncertain; Dillm and Addis allot 'and they gave them' <sup>11</sup> to P cp 21, and claim the opening words of 13 (to 'gave') for R. With <sup>13</sup>, however, cp 27 34; it seems simpler, therefore, with Bennett to limit the interpolation to <sup>11</sup>. <sup>43</sup> <sup>n</sup>So Yahweh gave unto Israel all the land which he <sup>j</sup>swore to give unto their fathers; and they <sup>k</sup>possessed it, and dwelt therein. <sup>44</sup> And Yahweh <sup>k</sup>gave them rest round about, according to all that he <sup>j</sup>swore unto their fathers: and there <sup>l</sup>stood not a man of all their enemies before them; Yahweh <sup>m</sup>delivered all their enemies into their hand. <sup>45</sup> There <sup>m</sup>failed not aught of any good thing which Yahweh had spoken unto the <sup>n</sup>house of Israel; <sup>u</sup>all came to pass<sup>a</sup>.

24<sup>1</sup> The account of the national assembly at Shechem and the final address of Joshua are attributed to JE with practical unanimity among modern critics. In contrast with the representations of P Joshua acts alone, instead of taking the second place after Eleazar: the scene is laid at Shechem in the centre of Ephraim: and some of the homiletic references to the ancestral traditions depend on JE cp 14 20, 'Amorites' 15 18, while further phraseological parallels will be found in 12 19 25 29. In the sequel the burial of Joseph's bones 32 carries out the plan of Gen 50<sup>25</sup> Ex 13<sup>19</sup>. But Joshua's exhortation belongs to the later type of prophetic passages in JE, and supplies an interesting illustration of the approach of the more advanced style (ct 27) to the religious language of a great prophetic collection such as D; one or two phrases, such as 'forsake Yahweh' 16, 'incline your heart' 23, only find parallels in the later literature. Numerous additions (some of them absent from (S) seem due to editorial activity, 1. 4 6, 8 11 13 17, 26 31. Some of the allusions, e.g. to the idolatries of Israel in Egypt 14 or Balak's attack on Israel 9, apparently rest on elements of tradition no longer preserved. It may be noticed that the person occasionally changes in the narration, e.g. 3-5 'I', 7 'he', 8-13 'I'. (S) has the third person in 6-13.

3 Lacking in (S).

4 (S) adds expansively 'and there they became ■ great and numerous and mighty nation, and the Egyptians evil entreated them,' but omits 6<sup>a</sup> 'and I sent Moses and Aaron.'

6<sup>b</sup> Perhaps a marginal gloss, Steuern.

7 (S) 'we': the address in 6. suggests 'you.'

8<sup>b</sup> Probably an addition of R<sup>d</sup> as the word 'destroyed' indicates 23<sup>4</sup>.

9<sup>a</sup> This clause does not correspond to anything in JE, and the introduction of the name Israel seems to betray an annotator's hand (cp Steuern).

9<sup>b</sup> The description is lacking in (S).

10 Hollenberg (Stud und Krit 1874 487) regarded 9. as dependent on Deut 23<sup>5</sup>. The parallel seems, however, rather explicable by D's use of E. (S), however, has 'But Yahweh thy God would not destroy thee.'

11 An obvious intrusion into the account of the capture of Jericho, as it can hardly be supposed that representatives of the 'seven nations' were all assembled in the city. Cp Ex 3<sup>8n</sup>. The allusion to the 'lords' i.e. citizens of Jericho is not supported by any extant passage of E. Cp Judg 9<sup>2</sup> 6 E (Moore in Haupt's SBOT) 1 Sam 23<sup>11</sup>. J (Budde ibid).

<sup>17</sup> signs in our <sup>17</sup>sight, and <sup>17</sup>preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the peoples through the midst of whom we passed: <sup>18</sup> and Yahweh <sup>18</sup>drave out from before us <sup>18</sup>all the peoples, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land: [therefore] we also will serve Yahweh; for he is our God. <sup>19</sup> And Joshua said unto the people, Ye cannot serve Yahweh; for he is an <sup>19</sup>holy God; he is a jealous God; he will not <sup>19</sup>forgive your transgression nor your sins. <sup>20</sup> If ye <sup>20</sup>forsake Yahweh, and serve <sup>20</sup>strange gods, then he will turn and do you evil, and <sup>20</sup>consume you, after that he hath done you good. <sup>21</sup> And the people said unto Joshua, Nay; but we will serve Yahweh. <sup>22</sup> And Joshua said unto the people, Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you Yahweh, to serve him. <sup>22</sup> And they said, We are witnesses.

24<sup>12</sup> Elsewhere only of Sihon and Og <sup>23</sup>30, and here, therefore, quite inappropriate. (§ twelve, a reading widely accepted, 'two' being probably an awkward correction in view of the later lists 12<sup>7</sup>. &c. But the appositional form of the clause suggests that it may be a later editorial note. On the other hand, the whole verse seems made up of fragments, and can hardly be original in its present form. Ex 23<sup>28</sup> shows that the phrase 'drave them' really refers to the peoples enumerated in 11; its introduction here may have suggested their insertion to justify it. To what, then, do the words 'not with thy sword' &c belong? They find a parallel in E's language Gen 48<sup>22</sup>, but they lack connexion here, and seem introduced by way of editorial reminiscence.

<sup>26a</sup> The origin of the clause ascribing a written record to Joshua has been much debated. Kuenen (Hex § 8<sup>16</sup> p 156) attributed it to E (cp Elohim 1) with 'reference to some other book of law than the one we know.' But it may be doubted if the statement was really part of the original story. If a solemn account had been preserved in a sacred book, what need was there for the testimony of the stone? The record would be a much better witness, for though the stone might have 'heard the words,' it was powerless to reproduce or confirm them. This incident seems to belong to a more primitive order of conceptions, with which the writing is not homogeneous. In spite of Hollenberg's dissent, Dillm agrees with Nöldeke in assigning the clause to R<sup>d</sup> (for 'book of the law' cp <sup>27</sup>6b), and supposes that the interpolator included the homily of <sup>23</sup> with the address and covenant of <sup>24</sup>. Wellh (Comp<sup>2</sup> 135) regards the addition as probably later still, but gives no reasons. The nearest parallels of language occur in Neh 8<sup>8</sup> 18 10<sup>29</sup>, ct 'law of Moses' Josh 8<sup>31</sup>. <sup>23</sup>6. Bennett allots the words to R<sup>p</sup>. It may be doubted whether the interpolator meant to include more in 'these words' than the Covenant with its associated 'statute and ordinance.' Holzinger, Hex 179, Staerk, Deut 106 ff, Steuern, Josh 242, think this may have been the original place of the Judgement-book Ex 21<sup>1</sup>., cp Ex 20<sup>22a</sup> <sup>26b</sup> M Or, in.

24<sup>28</sup> With 28-31 cp Judg 2<sup>6-9</sup>. Moore, Judges (ICC) 4 and 65, supposes the passage in Judges to be the original, which was reproduced here 'perhaps in connexion with the division into books.'

<sup>32a</sup> This passage seems plainly to belong to E, but it can hardly be in its natural place. The house of Joseph would not have waited to bury their ancestor till after the funeral of Joshua, when they had been settled round Shechem for years.

<sup>32c</sup> The awkwardness of this clause and its absence from G throw suspicion on it. The plural subject must include Shechem and the land, but this combination is unexpected: an addition to G runs 'and he gave it to Joseph for an inheritance,' cp G which is preferred by Kuen and Dillm. Steuern proposes 'and it became the inheritance of Joseph.'
